WEST YIELDS BEST CROP IN SIX YEARS

WINNIPEG, Sept. 8—(CP)—Described as the best crop in six years, the 1938 wheat yield on the Prairie is estimated at 324,744,000 bushels in the sixth and final report of the Winnipeg Free Press, issued today.

In Manitoba the crop promises 52,049,000 bushels closely rivalling the banner crop of 1928. Rust and grasshoppers combined to prevent Saskatchewan making the comeback indicated by the splendid stand of grain early this season and the estimate for this province is 128,568,000 bushels, the report said.

The grain filled excellently during the latter part of the season in Alberta which will surpass Saskatchewan in total yield with the estimate placed at 144,127,000 bushels.

Coarse grain production was estimated by the report as follows:

Oats—Manitoba 39,373,000 bushels; Saskatchewan 102,825,000; Alberta 104,985,000.

Barley — Manitoba 33,196,000 bushels; Saskatchewan 23,910,000; Alberta 30,511,000.

Rye—Manitoba 3,359,000; Saskatchewan 4,688,000; Alberta 2,861,000.

Flax—Manitoba 393,000; Saskatchewan 772,000; Alberta 364,000.

MUSICAL GHOST BOTHERS LONDON

GOLDER'S GREEN, England, Sept. 9—A musical ghost who makes organ selections come from a piano in the dead of night has been disturbing this theatrical suburb of London. One householder acquired the services of Harry Price, secretary of the London University Council for Physical Investigation, to help solve the problem.

Besides making "unearthly organ music" come from a piano the ghost bangs falls, sighs and sometimes screeches, it has been claimed. One night the ghost actually appeared and pulled the bedclothes from a frightened lodger in the house.

Mr. Price was not convinced. "I know of no haunted house in the metropolitan district of London," he said, "and suburban cases are extremely rare. London is unhealthy for ghosts. Most hauntings occur north of the Midlands."

MARKET FOR FEEDSTUFFS IN THE BRITISH WEST INDIES

Since most of the arable land is devoted to production of sugar cane, or cocoa, live-stock owners in the British West Indies have to rely on imported feedstuffs for their dairy cattle, horses, and mules, writes G. A. Newman, Assistant Trade Commissioner at Port of Spain, Trinidad, in the current issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal. Linseed oilcake meal, oats, bran, and middlings are the imported feedstuffs which are of interest to Canadian shippers.

Linseed oilcake meal is the main product used for dairy cattle feed. In 1929-30 Barbados was the leading export market for Canadian linseed cake meal, but receipts of Canadian supplies have since dwindled although total imports have increased. The decline has been more than balanced by increased imports from the United States. There has been a similar change in the other British West Indies markets, due to the low price of United States oil meal. During the last three months imports from Canada have shown a moderate increase.

Canada is the leading source of supply for imports of oats into the British West Indies. According to value imports of oats from Canada and total imports in 1937 were as follows: Trinidad, $60,601 and $96,242; Barbados, $50,385 and $116,623; British Guiana, $24,760 and $39,400 respectively. A moderate amount of timothy hay is imported from Canada by Trinidad and Barbados.

that Herr Erich Maria Remarque, author of "All Quiet on the Western Front," is planning a visit to England. Since "his exile from Germany" he now spends most of his time either in Switzerland or the South of France where he is engaged in a new novel and a play. His "Three Comrades" has been made into a successful film.

And—"To say it's an ill wind is too sardonic,' writes Ruth Green Harris from London "yet since Germany has abandoned its artists there has been fresh interest in German art. The New Burlington Galleries are reproducing the twentieth century German section of a show entitled 'Degenerate Art' that was opened a year ago. The identical works are not necessarily hung, but there are works by the same men."

The introduction to the catalogue of this exhibition says—

"It has been obvious to those who knew modern Germany that there existed in that country an art which, while influenced by Impressionist and Post-Impressionist movements in France, had original qualities deriving from native traditions. For various reasons this art remained overshadowed by the nearer and more highly organized art of France . . . Just when the moment seemed propitious for a more active interchange of ideas, German art was swept away in the country of its origin . . . The artists themselves either fled into exile or were compelled to abandon their creative activity."

Among these German artists whose art has been termed degenerate,' and banished, are—Max Lilbermann, Max Slevogt, Louis Corinth, Nolde, Kokoschka, Max Ernst, Fininger, Lehmbruck, Ehrlich and Kaethe Kollwitz.

This exhibition of German art in London is supported by a long list of patrons. Familiar names on this distinguished list are Karel Capek, Julian Huxley, David Low, Dr. Axel Munthe, Rebecca West, H. G. Wells, and Virginia Woolf.

Reference was made in "Books, Art, Music" of August 16 to the new recording of Mozart's Quintet for Clarinet and strings by Benny Goodman, "King of Swing," and the famous Budapest String Quartet.

The following announcement and comment are in a recent New York Times.

"The Budapest String Quartet will present a series of five late afternoon concerts next season at Town Hall under the auspices of the League of Music Lovers, to take place on November 5th, 12th, 19th, December 26th, and January 2nd. Benny Goodman, the swingmaster, will assist at two of these concerts. In the first he will make his public debut in classical music by playing the Mozart Clarinet quintet. On January 2nd he will play the Brahms quintet." . . . "If Benny Goodman yearns for the supposedly higher realms of symphonic art as against his remunerative occupation as a swing musician par excellence, he seems to be in a fair way of attaining success. In another column in these pages will be found the announcement of his appearances with the Budapest String Quartet. And now we hear that Bela Bartok, the Hungarion composer, is at work on a new concerto for violin clarinet and orchestra. Joseph Szigeti is the violinist who has suggested the project to Bartok, and he would naturally be the string soloist. His colleague would be Mr. Goodman. And if Mr. Bartok can finish the work in good season it is quite possible that the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra with John Barbirolli conducting, might have the first crack at it."

Benny Goodman and his orchestra are featured at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto this year.

HUG AUSTRALIA TO AVOID JAPS

MELBOURNE, Sept. 9 — Advices from Batavia, Java, says the Netherlands East Indian Navy will hold extensive manoeuvres in the Indian Ocean, south of Java, toward the Australian coast, in September and October, instead of in the northern seas of the East Indian Archipelago as formerly.

The decision to change the venue of the manoeuvres has been due to anxiety to avoid undesirable attention from Japanese "fishermen."

Recall Victory of U. S. Captain In War 1912

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 9—Representative Canadians will join with Americans Sept. 10 at Put-in-Bay, on South Bass Island, about 60 miles west of this Lake Erie port, to honor the memory of Oliver Hazard Perry.

Perry was the resourceful 27 year old captain from Newport, R. I., who commanded the United States ships that defeated and captured the British flotilla in these waters Sept. 10, 1813, and gave the United States complete control of Lake Erie for the rest of the War of 1812-15. Perry's personal bravery and strategy contributed much to his victory. His good luck was a factor, too.

American historians declare that by this defeat of Capt. Robert H. Barclay, a gallant hero who had lost an arm fighting under Nelson at Trafalgar, Perry won for the United States an empire in itself—territory now included in western Pennsylvania, northern Ohio and all of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

At Put-in-Bay where Perry kept vigil while the British coasted down from the Canadian shore, rises a 317 foot shaft of New England granite, the Perry Memorial. In its base rest the bodies of six officers killed in the battle of 125 years ago — three Americans and three British. Losses among the rank and file of the sailors on both sides were comparatively heavy.

Ships Ill-Manned

Of this "Battle of Lake Erie" William Wood, the Canadian historian writes:

"In September, 1813, the scene of action shifted to the west, where the British were trying to keep the command of Lake Erie, while the Americans were trying to wrest it from them. Capt. Oliver Perry, a first-rate American officer, was at Presque-isle (now Erie, Pa) completing his flotilla. He had his troubles, of course, especially with the militia garrison, who would not do their proper tour of duty....But luckily for Perry, his opponent, Capt. Barclay of the Royal Navy, an energetic and capable young officer of 32, was called upon to face worse troubles still.

"Barclay, was, indeed, the first to get afloat. But he had to give up the blockade of Presque'isle, and so let Perry out, because he had the rawest of crews, the scantiest of equipment and nothing left to eat. Then, when he ran back to Amherstburg (Canada) he found Procter (the British military commander) also facing a state of semi-starvation with thousands of Indian families clamoring for food. Thus there was no other choice but either to fight or starve.

"So Barclay sailed out with his six little British vessels, armed by the odds and ends of whatever ordnance could be spared from Amherstburg and manned by almost any crews but sailors. Even his flagship Detroit had only 10 real seamen, all told. Ammunition was likewise very scarce and so defective the guns had to be fired by the flash of a pistol.

"Perry also had a makeshift flotilla, partly manned by drafts from Harrison's army. But on the whole, the odds in his favor were fairly shown by the number of vessels in the respective flotillas—nine American against the British six.

At Close Quarters

"Barclay had only 30 miles to make in a direct south-easterly line from Amherstburg to reach Perry at Put-in-Bay in the Bass Islands, where on the morning of Sept. 10, the opposing forces met. The battle raged for two hours at the very closest quarters till Perry's flagship Lawrence struck to Barclay's own Detroit.

"But Perry had previously left the Lawrence for the fresh Niagara (a U. S. shap which had not been in action up to that time) and bore down on the battered Detroit, which had meanwhile fallen foul of the only other sizeable British vessel, the Queen Charlotte. This was fatal for Barclay. The whole British flotilla surrendered after a desperate resistance and an utterly disabling loss."

On the day after the battle, men of both fleets joined to bury their dead. The vanquished Barclay, wounded twice in the fighting, was supported by Perry, "my generous enemy," as Barclay called him. The two men became fast friends.

Because historians agree that Ohio did the lion's share for the Union in the War of 1812, that state is sponsoring the present celebration, through a special act of Congress. The resolution provides for a formal dedication of the Perry Memorial as a national monument and national park under the national park service. Nine States built the memorial—Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin, New York, Rhode Island, Kentucky and Massachusetts.

Agriculturist's Day Observed At Toronto Expo.

TORONTO, Sept. 7—(CP)—Undaunted by morning rains thousands of Ontario farmers trooped into the Canadian National Exhibition grounds today for Agriculturists' Day. Though the weather made the crowd look slim on the streets and lawns the Coliseum—heart of the agricultural show—was as busy as a beehive.

All day long and into the evening junior farmers and farmerettes competed in the judging contests arranged by the Exhibition with the co-operation of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The contestants, all champions from their respective districts, exhibited samples of their produce and the stock they raised in the last year.

Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, spoke to C. N. E. directors and their guests at noon of the social and economic condition of agriculture in the present day. He urged his listeners whether they be agriculturists or not, to study the rural life, especially of Ontario, and its problems.

To increase the prosperity of the land and those who live on it the farmer of the future must be "more of a scientist, more of a businessman and more efficient than he has been in the past," said Mr. Dewan. He advocated more education and training for young men and women of the farmers.

Orders Inquiry Into Mental Hospitals

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

TORONTO, Sept. 8—Premier Hepburn today created a Royal Commission of enquiry as a probable forerunner to a sweeping investigation into Ontario mental hospitals to determine whether sane persons are being detained in the institutions.

Declaring the Government had "strong suspicion" many persons were being held who should be discharged, Premier Hepburn ordered the commission to inquire particularly into the case of John R. Green, St. Thomas lawyer, who was held in the London mental hospital two years and nine months after being committed for observation on an intoxication charge.

The Premier announced Dr. G. H. Stevenson has been suspended as superintendent of the London hospital pending the investigation. The suspension was a direct result of Green's detention, he added.

Clifford Magone, solicitor in the Attorney-General's department, will act as chairman of the committee with Dr. William H. Avery, Toronto physician, and Lionel Conacher, member of the Legislature for Toronto Bracondale and vice-chairman of the Ontario Athletic Commission.

Suspend Freight Rates Increase

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—(AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission suspended today to April 8 proposed increases in freight rates on carload shipments of potatoes from northern Maine and eastern Canada to South Atlantic and gulf ports via rail-ocean routes.

The suspended scheduled, which would have increased the rates five cents a hundred pounds, was scheduled to become effective today.

Urge Adoption Of Pasteurization Law

OTTAWA, Sept. 8—(CP)—A resolution of congratulation to Ontario on the enactment into its statutes of legislation leading toward the pasteurization of all milk sold at retail in the province was adopted today by the council of the Association of French-speaking doctors of North America.

The resolution recommended to all other provinces the adoption of a similar law. The Association tonight with a banquet and dance concluded its four-day biennial congress here. In 1340 the congress will be in Three Rivers, Que., home of the newly-elected president Dr. Charles DeBlois.

Provincial Health Ministers were urged, in a council resolution to undertake a campaign of education on the benefit of periodical health examinations and "to study the most suitable methods to put such a plan into effect."
