IN MEMORIAM

JOHN C. MCDONALD.

The oldest of Fort William's early pioneers has passed away in the person of John C. McDonald, of 515 east Brock street, who passed away at his home Fort William, at the age of 95 years.

The late Mr. McDonald was born in Prince Edward Island and followed the occupation of bridge builder and construction foreman of railways in Ontario, Quebec, Wisconsin and Minnesota, coming to Fort William forty years ago, where he was engaged in the building of the Canadian Pacific railway, being connected with the company during the period of construction east of Port Arthur, later on he was associated with James Murphy as ship carpenter, in charge of repairs to Mr. Murphy's tugs.

Mr. McDonald is survived by his widow, who is 86 years of age, and whose marriage was celebrated sixty-seven years ago, and by four sons, B. D. McDonald, yardmaster for the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway, at St. Paul, J. J. McDonald, of Fort William, Edward McDonald, of St. Paul, and William McDonald, of Cameron Falls, and three daughters; Sarah, Mrs. P. Smith of Winnipeg, Kate, Mrs. H. S. Shannon, of Chicago, and Nellie, Mrs. A. Bullock, of Duluth.

Mr McDonald was said to be the oldest inhabitant of this city, and had a wide circle of friends, including all the old-time pioneers of Fort William and the district.—Ft. William Ont., Exchange.

WHEN I AM DUST

When I am dust I wonder if the flowers
Shall bloom, and know the charm of summer's hours;
I wonder shall the tender little grass
Low whisper when the winds of morning pass;
And shall the stars smile at the large gray sea,
While filmy waves croon sweetest melody.
Shall little children's eyes, like heaven's blue
With wonder-light look, oh, so long at you.
Shall trailing clouds, touched by the steadfast sun
Creep o'er the far-off hills when day is done;
Shall eyes that dearly loved me leap to flame
And weave fond recollections round my name.
When I am dust, shall sunset's tapers burn,
And shall Love's heart to me in memory turn;
Why muse I thus? It matters not: away
My soul shall drifted be to Perfect Day.

League of Nations Only Salvation

LONDON, May 29.— Lord Reading in his presidential address at the opening of the conference of the International Law Association yesterday at Portsmouth, said he believed international law would never completely recover from the blow which was struck it during the war unless the League of Nations became an effective organization.

"I don't say the League of Nations covenant is a perfect instrument," Lord Reading proceeded, "but nevertheless it is a great document of world importance. What America will do in the future it is not for me to prophesy. She will decide according to her own views and the ideas of her own people. But of this I am convinced—whether she signs or does not—she will remain the supporter of justice and truth in the future as she has done in the past, and these tribunals of nations associated in the League will be able to rely on her when they give their views founded upon reason and based upon justice.

JUST A GIRL

BY JANE PHELPS

A NEW MAN WITH A NICE NAME

Chapter 21

We had a wonderful afternoon at the opera—at least I did. Jack had asked a new man, some college friend of his, Granville Dawson, a young Englishman. I thought him charming, and he appeared to think me nice also. Anyway he showed me lots of attention.

He was tall, slender, and very distinguished looking. Very English in his speech and manner. Jack acted terribly peeved, was almost rude once or twice. But I didn't pay the slightest attention, unless it was to be still more interested in Granville Dawson.

"May I have the pleasure of calling upon you?" he asked.

Mrs. Shephard heard, and nodded to me that it would be all right to say yes. I knew then that she had "looked him up," as Claudia used to say she did with every young man she was allowed to know.

"I shall be glad to see you. Mother and I are at home nearly every afternoon at 4."

I took that "thank you" to mean he was coming. Jack had heard and remarked:

"We'll call in a day or two, Dawson."

I could have slapped Jack! I didn't want him listening to everything Mr. Dawson might say to me.

I told Mother all about Granville Dawson—all I knew, rather. When I told her he was going to call, and that Mrs. Shephard had practically told me to allow him, she smiled and remarked:

"It makes me feel almost like an old lady, Zena, to have the young men want to call, and for you to be old enough to receive them. I suppose it is only natural that a woman with a grown daughter should feel rather aged."

"You look almost as young as I do and you know it!" I declared.

Granville Dawson and Jack Pryor came in the very next day for tea.

"He wouldn't wait any longer, Zena," Jack said after they had spoken to Mother. "I could hardly keep him until now."

"Really!"

"Yes, really! Drat him! What he wants to come butting in on my—"

"There, Jack, that will do! I don't belong to you as it happens, and I am very glad Mr. Dawson wanted to come. I think him charming."

"Go on praising him. It makes me so happy," Jack grouched. He acted peeved all the time he was with us. Mother saw, and wrinkled her placid brow in a little frown of caution. But I pretended not to see, and went right on talking with Mr. Dawson, who paid me the nicest compliments, and was entertaining me instead of expecting me to entertain him as Jack always did.

"Isn't he charming?" I asked when they had gone.

"Isn't WHO charming?" Mother returned, "Jack?"

"No indeed, Mr. Dawson."

"He seemed a nice agreeable young man. I prefer an American, however."

"You mean you like Jack best?"

"Yes. Perhaps it is because I know him better." Mother always tried to be fair in her judgment of people. "Jack wears well."

"I think he gets a bit frayed around the edges at times," I declared. I was a little disappointed that Mother hadn't enthused just a little over the handsome Englishman. "Claudia has invited him to her dance next week."

"Of course!"

"Oh, I didn't mean Jack! I was thinking of the Englishman."

"I am afraid you are inclined to be rather impressionable, Zena. Your Englishman is all right, but the boys you have known all your life are the ones to hold fast to as friends."

I didn't say so, but I wanted to tell her that Jack Pryor wouldn't be just a friend. He wanted to be "friend husband." It was so silly in him when I had told him I wasn't going to marry.

Granville Dawson was a very nice sounding name, I decided, as I said it over aloud when I reached the privacy of my room. A very nice name indeed.

HINTS FOR The Motorist

BY ALBERT L. CLOUGH

LIVING UP TO THE LUBRICATION CHART

Oil by Mileage Not by Guesswork.

There is furnished with every new car a very clear diagram of its various parts, with the intervals at which each should be lubricated and the kind of lubricant required, plainly marked in connection with each and this "oiling diagram" is, by all means, the most important instruction furnished the owner by the manufacturer. If its directions are faithfully followed, satisfaction will be great and repair bills small and vice versa. It should be posted up in the garage where it can always be referred to and any motorist who may have lost his copy should obtain a new one from the factory. The well prepared lubrication chart gives the oiling intervals in miles run, for instance: "Fill rear axle housing to plugged hole each 1,000 miles," and this is the only reasonable manner to express the lubrication needs of the various parts. Such instructions as "pack with grease once a season" or "turn down this grease cup every three weeks" are almost worthless, for the season's mileage of a car may vary from next to nothing to 15,000 or 20,000 miles and "every three weeks" may include a tour of 1500 miles or hardly any driving at all. Five or six thousand miles a year being the season's work of an average passenger car, it is very easy to translate these "time" directions into "mileages" or individual owners own annual mileage can be used as the basis, to even better advantage. In order to live up to oiling instructions expressed in terms of distance traveled, the first consideration is, of course, that the mileage register of the speedometer shall always be in working order, and it is equally important that a memorandum of the odometer reading at which each part is lubricated shall be made, at the time of its performance, for it is no use to burden the uncertain memory with such details. It is only necessary to mark upon a sheet of heavy paper in vertical column, the names of the parts requiring lubrication, rule horizontal lines from these and tack this form upon the garage wall. Then, whenever a certain oiling job is done, the odometer reading is marked opposite it and a glance at this reading and the lubrication chart will at any later time, inform one whether or not it is time to perform it again.

Mrs. Helen Griffin Bastedo.

Less than twenty-four hours after the death of her husband, George Francis Griffin, Chicago capitalist, his widow, who was Miss Helen Prindville, was married to Lieutenant-Commander Paul H. Bastedo, U. S. N., in San Diego, Cal. Attorneys in charge of the Griffin estate, which has been estimated to be worth as much as $9,000,000, said that her marriage to the naval officer would not affect her rights and that she and her two small children would inherit the entire estate. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin had been separated for several years and she had instituted an action for divorce which, however, was not pressed.

Minard's Liniment For Burns, Etc

Canadian Pacific

Many favorable comments are being expressed in press and public upon the inauguration of the improved Canadian Pacific summer train service between Montreal and the Maritime Provinces, particularly in reference to the double daily service each way every day in the week, and Sundays too.

Never before in the history of railroading have such exceptional facilities been provided for taking proper care of the passenger traffic over Canadian Pacific tracks between St. John and Montreal and vice versa. The trains themselves, in the matter of equipment and constructive art, are the last word in the master builders ingenuity. Palatial sleepers with electric lighted berths, scientific ventilation—in fact, every modern conceivable contrivance for comofrt and luxury. High grade coaches, and luxurious din?ers; everything of the best, plus Canadian Pacific courtesy and efficiency. The schedules of the expresses are fast and regular, and patrons of the direct short route are assured that "time" is a permanent feature with every adequate regard for safety. Passenger traffic originating in St. John has the choice of trains leaving at 4 p. m. or 7.45 p. m. atlantic time, the former being due in Montreal at 7.20 a .m. making direct close connections with the "Canadian" for Toronto, Chicago, etc., also Ottawa Traffic directed Via St. John which originates in Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and points in New Brunswick east of St. John, is take ne care of on the 7.45 p. m. train, as also passenger from Nova Scotian, etc., via Bay of Fundy service. This train is due at Montreal at 11.35 a. m. At Montreal both trains from the East connect with Canada's most famous train. The Trans-Canada Limited, leaving at 5 p. m. and completing the run to Vancouver in ninety-two hours, and the only change is from track to track in the depot in Montreal.

Toronto to Vancouver eighty-eight hours; Montreal to Winnipeg forty-one hours, fifteen minutes.

Coming East, the first train arrives in St. John at 6.30 p. m. making direct connections with Nova Scotia, via Digby, and points East of St. John via Canadian National system. The second express arrives in St. John at 1.00 noon making close connections with C. N. R. train for the East.

The establishment of this new Canadian Pacific double service each way seven days in the week provides a wonderful connecting link in travel between the Lower Provinces, Quebec and the West, in fact, between all points East with all points West, the importance of which is apparent, and must appeal to all classes of travel, and at the same time marks a new era along lines of national development and commercial prosperity.
