THE OUTLAW The Story of a Girl Who Didn't Want to Marry. By ETHEL LLOYD PATT. Chapter XVIII

When the tailor for whom I worked dismissed me summarily because his son had kissed me, I was too angry to cry.

As I left the little group of staring girls who had witnessed the scene, my throat felt dry and hard and the tears would come. But for the minute I walked stiff and straight, possessed by a rage that gave me courage.

Of course, I didn't dare really to think. Already my mother had come to depend on the three dollars and a half I brought her each Saturday. My father now knew that I worked and that I gave as much of my wages as I possibly could spare toward the maintenance of our home. In consequence, he had spent just that much more on liquor. So now, the loss of my position was not only a blow to my pride, but an actual financial loss to the whole family.

Also, in common with all young persons who start to earn their livelihood, I lived in terror of never being able to get another position, once I lost the one I had.

At the end of the scene which had culminated in my discharge, Dora, the telephone girl, had told me to stop and speak to her on my way out. I obeyed her request automatically. Anyhow, she was the one friend I had in the place. It was natural for me at least to say good-bye to her.

With my hat on any old way and my gloves clutched tightly in my fist, dry eyed, I stopped at Dora's switchboard. She looked me up and down. Something very like respect came into her glance.

"See kid," she said, "I've got to hand it to you. I expected you would bawl."

"Cry?" I said furiously between my teeth. "Cry!" And let that word old man see me do it? I'd little quiver in my voice; "It was unfair! It was hprid and unfair!"

"Of course," said Dora easily. "You didn't expect anything else, did you? You're old enough to know better than that. You didn't expect any man to be fair to a pretty girl, did you? If they don't love you one way, they'll do you another."

"But why?" I protested. I wasn't doing any harm. I didn't pay any attention to him. Why should he want to hurt me? Why didn't he let me alone?"

"Aw!" said Dora, "they can't do it, that's all. They just got to be making love to you or deviling you. Let me tell you something, kid. Don't you ever believe any of this equal suffrage business and all that. There ain't no such animal. There's just one thing for you to learn: If you don't get men under your thumb, they'll get you under theirs. Why, look at me! I don't need my job. I don't care whether that old goat fires me or not. That's why he doesn't do it. No, sir! He picks on some little kid like you who's got to stand his nonsense or lose her little pay envelope."

I drew a little closer to the girl. "Say, Dora," I asked wistfully, "don't you suppose there are any good men in the world?"

Dora's face was grave for a moment. Then she laughed. At the sound, involuntarily I stepped back again.

"Maybe there are some good men—somehere. Only I've never met them that's all. No, kid, let this be a lesson to you. Use 'em and use 'em quick, before they can use you. Make eyes at 'em till you've got 'em crazy. Then laugh at 'em and snap your fingers in their faces. Maybe some of them are nice for a while; but if they lasts, they'll want to look out for your future, haven't you? I'm telling you, I've been through it all and I know."

There was a little silence. "I'm afraid you're right, Dora," I said, "only I don't know why, but I hate to do it. I don't see why a girl can't go on without men at all—just work and earn her own way."

"Well, you can't," Dora told me. "That's all there is to it. They won't let you. Go on now, don't look like that. I want to tell you why I wanted you to stop. I was thinking—when you stood there so mad, with the color in your face—that you were awful pretty. You're a little thing, but you're kind of cute. I was thinking, maybe they could take you in the movies. I know a guy in the advertising department of the Champion Film Company. Wait a minute, there's the address. You go see him tomorrow morning. I'll phone and tell him you're coming. You can't tell, kid—maybe you'd make a movie queen!"

Childlike, my imagination was caught at once.

This Man's Food Did Him No Good HAD GOOD APPETITE BUT WAS VERY THIN AND COULDN'T GAIN A POUND

"I was not a sick man when I began taking Tanlac," said William McAnulty, of 734, 17th St., Oakland, Calif., "but for some reason or other, I had for fifteen years or more been considerably under my normal weight, and felt so much concern over the fact that I made repeated efforts to find something that would build me up to my old self again."

Mr. McAnulty has lived in Oakland nearly all his life, is a member of the Real Estate Board, office phone, Oakland 1750, and is well-known and respected throughout the city. Mr. McAnulty further said:

"It is very evident that I could not assimilate my food properly, for I would eat good substantial meals, but in spite of all I did in the way of foods and medicine I remained under weight, and could not gain a pound."

"Finally, nearly a year ago, after hearing so much about Tanlac for run down systems, I concluded to see what this medicine would do in my case. So I started taking it and kept it up till three months ago before I began taking on weight. Tanlac kept me with a fine appetite and feeling fine all the time, however, and when I found myself getting heavier I was very much delighted."

"I now weigh one hundred and forty-two pounds, have gained fifteen pounds by taking Tanlac—which is just the right weight for a man my size and build. I could not feel better if I wanted to, for I am as healthy a person as could be found. I'll recommend Tanlac to anybody who wants something to build them up, and if they stick to it as I did I don't believe they will be disappointed."

"Oh, Dora!" I said, "I'm afraid I'm not pretty enough, but I could do it." Wouldn't that be wonderful! They say some of those girls get a hundred dollars a week. Dora, if I ever do, I won't forget you. You'll see whether I'm grateful or not."

But on the way home in the train the wheels seemed to be saying over and over again. "Use 'em—use 'em!"

At last the tears came to my eyes. "Oh, I don't want to use people I don't like—take things from people I hate! If they'll only let me work and earn it!"

And then the wheels again: "Use 'em! Use 'em!" They seemed to say.
