Slogan Contest

$10.00 FOR THE BEST SLOGAN

The Economic Committee appointed by the Associated Boards of Trade to inquire into how trade conditions may be improved in our Home Province, desire to adopt a popular slogan that can be generally used by Islanders.

The slogan must be short and to the point and express the ideas contained in the following statement:—"Buy Island Products—Patronize Home Stores. Money spent abroad gives employment abroad. Money spent at Home gives employment at Home."

The Contest closes on November 30th, 1925, when the slogan will be judged by three well known Islanders representing both Town and Country interests.

The Contest is open to any one and there is no restriction as to the number of slogans which may be sent in by any one person.

One good slogan is required and $10.00 will be paid for the slogan winning the Contest.

Yorkshire Lad To Complete London Hotel

In the past ten years some hundreds of thousands of Canadians, most of them in khaki, have seen on Piccadilly near Hyde Park, the gigantic skeleton of a still uncompleted building. It looks like a ruin, but as a matter of fact it is part of a huge hotel that was to have been built had the war not broken out. It adjoins the home of the Duke of Devonshire and the property is owned by the Surton family, people of wealth and leisure for generations. One of them decided he would go into business and build a hotel on the property. His partner was to be an Austrian hotel manager who had lived many years in London. They cleared the ground, ran up the steel work for ten stories and were getting the lower floors ready for occupancy when the war broke out. The Austrian was sent to his native land to buy some fittings that could be had nowhere else. When he was there war broke out. The Austrian was imprisoned because he said that he desired to become a British subject. In the meantime young Surton had joined the army and the hotel project came to a sudden halt. Months passed and the Austrian was sent back to England in return for an Austrian prisoner. But it was no time for hotel projects.

The Champion Builder. To make matters worse he fell under the suspicion of British secret service agents. They declared that he was an Austrian spy. Once more he was interned and from this confinement he never again emerged. What happened to him is not known. One story is that he went to Russia and committed suicide. Young Surton returned but broken in health and it was not long before he died. There being nobody else to take hold of the hotel project the building has stood for twelve years now. But it is about to be pushed forward to completion. It has attracted the attention of Harry Wardman, one of the most remarkable builders since the Cheaps. With certain English associates he has bought the place and will make it one of the best hotels in England. It will be the only hotel with a bath for every room, and will have other features that are new to the finest of American hotels. Mr. Wardman, however, is not an American. He is an Englishman who in the past twenty years has built homes for one tenth of the people who live in Washington.

Satisfied to be Carpenter. Harry Wardman was born in Yorkshire and went to the United States when he was seventeen. He landed in New York with seven shillings and immediately went to work. He held various unimportant jobs, the one he kept longest being that of timekeeper for a Philadelphia building contractor. Then he met another Englishman with a little money to invest, and the two built a small row of houses. They sold them and made a profit of $5,000 each. It was Wardman's first lesson in the art of making money and he was hungry for more. He began to take small carpentering contracts. Then he met another Englishman with a little money to invest, and the two built a small row of houses. They sold them and made a profit of $5,000 each. It was Wardman's first lesson in the art of making money and he was hungry for more.

Has Built 5,000 Houses. Wardman put his profits in other building speculations and sold out at a profit. After each deal, living as before, he expanded his operations and soon was building large rows of houses. He broadened out, and bought subdivisions in which he built. Sometimes he sold out, and sometimes he held on and took his profits out of rentals. In all he built between 4,500 and 5,000 houses. Years ago Washington used to be a city of boarding houses. Wardman thought that government clerks would rather live in modest homes of their own than live in boarding houses and this thought is what made him wealthy. He built all kinds of places to live in from bungalows to huge apartment houses. His present pride is the Wardman Park Inn, which has all the features of a resort hotel although it is an established apartment house. It has twenty acres of ground about it and is made up of wings that stroll out into the sunlight in a most picturesque and delightful manner. It has swimming pools, tennis courts, garages, a theatre and stables. It will house 2,000 people.

A model landlord. He made another stroke one time when he bought a rocky hill out on Connecticut Avenue, near Cleveland Park. Others had refused to touch it because the cost of leveling it would be too great. But Wardman saw another tract of land not far away which was full of gullies and hollows. He made a deal with the owner whereby he got his own lot levelled and the surplus earth and rock carted away to fill in the gullies. The operation cost him nothing. When the war broke out and there was the greatest rush of people to Washington in that city's history, rents were shot skyward by the best landlords. Some of them proved to be hopeless profiteers. But not Wardman. He did not advance his rents a dollar. He appeared before government agents and said that five per cent net profit was enough for him. Others got 25 per cent. Others doubled or tripled their rents. But Wardman was not envious, and Washington has not forgotten him. Now he has gone back to England.

Farewell Reception

On the evening of Wednesday, Nov. 25th, a farewell reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Storey, Winsloe. Recently Mr. Storey sold his farm and in the very near future Mr. and Mrs. Storey and family intend moving into the city of Charlottetown, where for some twenty-eight years Mr. Storey has held an important position with the firm of Auld Bros. A large number of people from the surrounding districts assembled to do honor to their departing friends.

Shortly after their arrival Mr. A. A. McNeil was elected chairman and called the meeting to order. In a brief speech he stated the purpose of the gathering and then called upon Rev. R. H. Stavert who read an address to Mr. and Mrs. Storey and family. The following when the Austrian went to his native land to buy some fittings that could be had nowhere else. When he was there war broke out. The Austrian was imprisoned because he said that he desired to become a British subject. In the meantime young Surton had joined the army and the hotel project came to a sudden halt. Months passed and the Austrian was sent back to England in return for an Austrian prisoner. But it was no time for hotel projects.

Dear Friends:— During the past few months, we the residents of Winsloe and Highfield have from time to time been hearing reports to the effect that you and your family were soon to move away from our community. We had hoped that such reports would in time prove to be untrue. But of late we have learned to our sorrow that they are all too true. You are indeed going away and that too in the near future—yet even on the day after the moving.

Some six years ago you and your family came into our midst as total strangers. You had not been here very long though before we began to realize the true worth of all—sons and daughters as well as parents.

In whatever pertained to the welfare of the whole community you were always ready to do your share. Those of us who are Presbyterians will remember that you had not been here very long when a call was sent out from the Highfield Presbyterian church asking for several new Elders.

In the election which followed you Mr. Storey was one of the men who at that time were chosen to fill that sacred office. This surely was all of the evidence you needed to show how great was the confidence the people reposed in you.

Both as Clerk of session for several years and as representative Elder as well during the present year you have ever sought to do your part in looking after the spiritual affairs of the congregation.

Under the leadership of the present session the pulpit has been kept well supplied. The Church Union has been weathered triumphantly and things in general have gone along quite smoothly. Through the carrying out of all these affairs your influence has made itself felt. In the future the rest of the session will miss your wise counsel and your kindly help.

In matters of education and social advancement in the community you have taken a leading part. Your ambition has always been to secure the best possible teacher for the school and at the same time to have the school building well equipped. And it mattered very little what the expense would be you always willingly assumed your share.

In all agricultural and other social welfare organizations you were ever recognized as an outstanding leader. In these several sources of life you will be very much missed.

And now you, Mrs. Storey, we would say that ever since we came to know you that we have all admired you greatly. That calm, sweet and ever thoughtful manner of yours which speaks to us of what a great heart beats within has won the esteem and the affection of all. We might say that you have been about the matter and say to you right here that we have all come to love you for your real goodness.

It mattered not who needed help or when—you were always ready to give of your best. It was always a joy to you to visit you in your own home. You certainly have been a great degree that beautiful art, not skilled in by too great a number—that beautiful art of making people feel perfectly at ease in your own house.

Since the organization of the Women's Missionary Society you have taken a leading part in its work and at present you are filling the position of treasurer. In all of our gatherings of every kind we in the future shall miss your genial, restful and ever inspiring presence and sometimes we feel that that no one else will ever be able to fill to the full the place which has been made vacant in our affections by your going away.

To all of the members of your family who are going away with you we would say that we are indeed sorry that you are leaving us. In all of the work of the church, the Sunday school and the day school and in all other social organizations you have taken a keen interest and have played well your parts.

We shall indeed miss you, one and all—down even to the youngest. We are glad to know that Mr. and Mrs. Harold Storey are to remain in Winsloe for some time. We shall continue to hold them in the high esteem in which they have always been held, and because of their presence in our midst we shall hope to see the other members of the family coming back from time to time to visit in our midst.

where he expects to spend the rest of his days. He is only fifty-three years old, and is wiry of body as he is keen of mind. He will continue his building operations in the Old Country where he believes there will be an appreciative market for many American ideas in apartment houses and hotel buildings. The Hon. Curzon will be his first great job.

Serving our Industries - great and small -

CREDIT is the basis of modern business. Credit it is that supplies funds or goods for immediate business needs, against a future promise to pay. Credit—confidence—faith—they are largely one. Credit is an intangible enough thing, yet some firms value the credit they enjoy as being one of their best assets. In the vast credit structure, with its many negotiable instruments, this Bank fills an indispensable place. Cheques are sent everywhere for collection, foreign or domestic drafts are discounted or held for collection, loans are made and information upon the credit standing of buyers is secured. All the many financial transactions incident upon foreign trade are conducted. More than that, the Bank makes continual surveys of business conditions, markets, transportation facilities, production and consumption figures both at home and abroad, for the use of its customers.

community. It is thus plain to all then that our loss as a church and a community will be a great one. The only small consolation we can have is that what will be our loss will be the gain of others, and we trust that what will come to appreciate your true worth as we have done. If so then their coming to know you will be well worth while. Before saying farewell, we would ask you to kindly accept of these small gifts as slight tokens of the esteem in which you have been held by us. We trust that you will value them, not because of their material worth but rather because of the expression of admiration and of good will conveyed by the giving of them from us to you.

We would have you bear in mind that what shall follow the future career of you all with a kindly interest. As you go out into your new surroundings and take new friends into your affections we shall hope that deep down in your hearts you will keep a warm spot for the old friends at Winsloe and Highfield.

May happiness and good fortune be your constant companions on life's way, and may true success crown your every effort along whatever course in life you each may choose to set out. You more should it be that at any time troubles which may confront you, may God then throw His loving arms around you so that even in the darker days of life that peace which passeth all understanding may be yours. And now "good-bye" and not "farewell" as we hope to see you all again from time to time.

And should it be that at any time in the near or the far distant future you should decide to come back again to live in our midst kindly remember that a hearty welcome will be found awaiting you. Signed on behalf of the residents of Winsloe and Highfield. ARCHIBALD BEATON, STEPHEN HOLROYD.

At the close of the reading of the address Mr. Storey was presented with a handsome electric reading lamp and to Mrs. Storey was given a beautiful brass heart set. The presentation to Mr. Storey was made by Mr. Archibald Beaton and that to Mrs. Storey by Mrs. Stephen Holroyd.

Following this came an address to Miss Helen Storey from the members and the adherents of the Highfield Presbyterian church. This address was read by Mrs. Albert Middleton. The following is a copy of the address: Miss Helen E. Storey, Dear Friend:—

It was with feelings of deep regret that we the members and adherents of the Highfield Presbyterian church learned that you were soon to take your departure from our midst. We at once felt that we could not allow you to go away without in some way trying to tell you how much we have appreciated your services in the church and in the Sunday school. Ever since you came into our community you have always been ready to help along with the work of the church and with every other good cause in every possible way. The members of the choir have always enjoyed having you as their leader and organist.

It mattered not what requests were made of you by any of the members it was always your delight to be ready to please. Then outside of the choir at every concert and social carried on in the interests of the Sunday school or the day school you always had a large share in putting on the musical part of the programme, never did you withhold your best.

In the work of the Sunday school all who have labored together with you there, have come to admire you greatly. The children in your own class have grown to love you dearly. Yes because of your kindly disposition and your truly christian character you have won the high esteem and the affection of all. The precious seed which you have been sowing in those young lives which sat under you in your class from Sabbath to Sabbath will bring forth an abundant harvest in years to come. Very seldom has your position as church organist or as teacher in the Sunday school been vacant.

Being thus always at your post must have meant for you at times, no doubt, no small sacrifice. You have indeed been truly faithful and eternally alone will reveal to you how great your reward for such faithfulness will be. We all both young and old shall miss you greatly. Your place will be indeed hard to fill. We regret very much to have to say "good-bye" but seeing that we must say it we would ask you to kindly accept of this small gift as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held by us. We shall hope that you will value this not because of its intrinsic worth but rather that because through it we have tried to convey to you the greatness of our high esteem and our affection for you. May it often remind you of your faithfulness in the Master's service during your sojourn in our midst. As you go out into your new sphere of life in the days which are to come kindly remember that our best wishes shall ever follow you. Our humble and sincere prayers are for you that God may ever give you abundantly of His best gifts. And may it be, that not only in the past you will be found faithful but even more so in the future—faithful to all that is truest and noblest as when at last life's little day is for you, forever over, you shall be greeted by the Master with the "Well done" of the good and the faithful servant and be asked by Him to enter forever into the joy of thy Lord. Signed on behalf of the members and adherents of the Highfield Presbyterian church, were Neil Campbell, Neil McEachern, John D. McKinnon, John G. Katherine Crabbe. In a few well chosen words Mr. (Patriot please copy.)
