London Letter

By Glanville Carey (British United Press)

LONDON, August 14—The question whether or not, in the good providence of whatever gods may be, Mr. Lloyd George makes a good recovery from the very serious operation just performed on him, rests at this moment on the knees of those deities.

Political friends one might have expected; social friends and acquaintances, neutrals too. But I saw political enemies of long standing and of every shade of antagonism calling continuously and with sympathy for news, and the telephone must have accounted for many more.

One thing is clear. If no man ever had more enemies, none has ever had more friends.

'Somewhere in France' there has been going on a marathon dancing competition. It is a test of physical endurance, not of dancing skill.

Yet we might perhaps look at home for a sight bearing more than a casual resemblance to the antics across the Channel.

A marathon might have been witnessed in the House of Commons the other morning during the last part of the 19 hours sitting. Or rather, not a sitting but 19 hours of obstruction in the House—19 hours of intermittent walking in the lobbies.

Night after night during the past session of Parliament a howl of protest has greeted the belated uprising of this or that marionette figure. However the summer vacation is upon us.

The Duke of Wellington has had his window broken and it will take some time to mend it.

At the south east corner of Hyde Park, just at Hyde Park corner, easily the busiest traffic spot in the West End, or for that matter in all London, there stands a brown stone house which is easily the gloomiest the drabbiest house in all London.

It is Apsley House, the London tomb-residence of the Duke.

The side of Apsley House facing Hyde Park contains many windows. High winds are continually breaking the windows on that side of the house. Most of them are mere dummy windows and the wind, blowing unobstructed across the Park and Kensington Gardens, gets between

What How Why PLYMOUTH FLOATING POWER THE WHOLE NATION WANTS TO KNOW MORE ABOUT IT

The revolutionary character of the New Plymouth has created a great flood of interest. Even the hardest of skeptics are so amazed at this new four that they ask eagerly for the facts behind this tremendous accomplishment.

Why does Floating Power succeed when all other methods fail? Because Chrysler Motors engineers have achieved an entirely new principle which dissipates the motor impulses so that they never reach the body and frame.

Why and How is Power Increased? Because the elimination of vibration allows higher compression, which gives greater horsepower without increasing cylinder size.

What does Floating Power do? The live-rubber mountings allow the engine to rock upon its natural axis as if in a cushioned cradle.
