The Surprising Sanctuary By Leslie Cargill

'Why would he be imperiling his immortal soul for ten shillings?' asked Ogilvie reproachfully. 'I'd advise ye to gie me ten shillings, and I'll advise ye to pay over the counter at Blawarne and bring the paper when next we come.'

CHAPTER XII INVESTIGATION Hugh walked wearily back. It was heart-breaking to have to let the fine old Scotmen depart without being able to give some indication of their plight. Ellendorf had evidently arranged it so that he would be taken by surprise.

'I was on the verge of having you taken care of the captives.' Hugh returned. 'Can't even start a beacon fire?'

'I'd contemplated signalling in some way,' Mr. Mason said. 'Hit-and-miss method, but preferable to continuous illumination.'

IN MEMORIAM In memory of John H. Morrow, who passed away Westford, Mass., February 15, 1943. Always so true, faithful and kind. Few in this world his equal you'll find. A beautiful life that came to an end He died as he lived everyone's friend.

IN MEMORIAM In cherished remembrance of Captain John A. Munn, of Murray River, P. E. I., who passed to eternal rest, one year ago, February 14, 1943.

He leaves to mourn: First Family Sydney, Hilda, John, Sibyl, Joseph and Vera. Second Family, His Widow, formerly Christie MacLeod and children, Anna, Clarence, Lull, Alva, Olivia and Vaunda.

I cannot say, and I will not say That he is dead, he is just away. With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand, he has wandered into unknown land.

And left us dreading how very fair It needs must be since he lingers In his not dead... he is just away.

Inserted by His Daughter, Mrs. Hilda C. MacLeod, Boston, Mass. 2-15-44.

The Board of Appeals from City taxes and assessments will meet in the Court Room in the City Building at 9.30 a.m. on Monday, February 28th, 1944, to hear all appeals from Civic assessments and valuations, and will continue thereafter by adjournment if and as circumstances may require. Charlottetown, Feb. 14, 1944.

J. A. FULLERTON, City Clerk

'There was too much talk, my friend.' 'By gosh, couldn't you hear? No, of course not!' Realization came too late. It was all part of Ellendorf's cunning in jockeying him into an inferior position. Not for a moment had he been able to think clearly. At the landing stage he had divided his attention between the menacing rifles and the general conversation, always feeling that a false step would prelude a wholesale massacre. Granting the impracticability of a written message, he had been extra puzzled to see 'I see' the German said slyly. 'What you were circumspect, Sehr Gut! You play ball with me, as the saying goes. Auf Wiedersehen, mein Sie Wohl!'

'Sleep well be hanged,' Mr. Mason grunted. 'Now completely and irrevocably, they did feel abandoned. The last vestige of hope had faded. Intense activity prevailed on the opposite side of the island. The submarine went away for several days. After an interval another trip was made. Each occasion found a long guard left behind to take care of the captives. Hugh returned. 'Can't even start a beacon fire?'

'I'd contemplated signalling in some way,' Mr. Mason said. 'Hit-and-miss method, but preferable to continuous illumination.'
