

IN MEMORIAM

MR. FRED L. CAMPBELL.

The people of Garfield, Belfast, were very much shocked at the sudden death of Fred L. Campbell which occurred on the morning of the 14th ult. He went about his chores as usual on that day, but complained of a slight pain and his wife noticing his prolonged stay about the barns went out to find him in a dining state. In a few minutes he had passed away. The deceased was born in Kirkcubright shire, Scotland, and was in the 49th year of his age. He came here from the U. S. after the Titusville flood in which he had the misfortune to lose a wife and two children. He was a man of splendid physique, sterling character, quiet, intelligent, and enjoyed the esteem of all who knew him, and his death is very much regretted. To his wife, friends and relations everywhere is extended sympathy for the loss of one possessing the attributes of a noble Christian manhood.

A CRUEL JOKE.

In yesterday's Guardian appeared an obituary notice of Mr. J. P. Bradley, Kelly's Cross. This notice in the Guardian along with other matter by a correspondent who signed his name. It transpires the items were untrue, and evidently sent for the purpose of annoying the parties referred to. The Guardian regrets that it should have been made the medium for this annoyance and cruel joke, and has taken means to bring the perpetrator to book.

MOTHER NATURE.

Dame Nature worked in her shop with care To fashion a flower wondrous fair; She made it perfect in shapeliness And robed it rich as a monarch's dress.

"Nay, mother," cried, "why toil to speed A fragile beauty that none shall heed?"

For thrones are crashing and Kingdoms slay And dead men carpet the earth to-day."

The dame paused not at her task, but said: "Now wait to me are your wars and dead?"

My plan was made an aeon ago That this identical bud should blow." McLANDEBURGH WILSON.

OF FIRST IMPORTANCE.

The teacher was examining the class in physiology. "Mary, you tell us," she asked, "what is the function of the stomach?" "The function of the stomach," the little girl answered, "is to hold up the petticoat."

Great Difference in Corn Cures

Many are destructive to the flesh and dangerous to use, but the old reliable Putnam's Corn Extractor removes Corns, Warts and Bunions, without pain in 24 hours. No pain, no failure. "Putnam's" cures. 6926.

"THE PRINCE CHAP"

The Prince Chap which is to be presented in the People's Theatre on Tuesday evening, December 22nd, under Miss Gorman's direction, promises to be a brilliant success. In its original dramatization this play had an unusually long run in New York City a few seasons ago. In the dramatization by Miss Gorman of the novel, "The Prince Chap" climaxes of dramatic power hold one spellbound.

The thorough training Miss Gorman received in dramatic art and stage technique blended with that subtle gift—a rare insight into human nature—makes Miss Gorman an artist in her work.

The Prince Chap sparkles with humor, and is a symbol of the festive season—some of the strongest scenes being played on Christmas Eve in the development of the play.

The cast is a strong one, Dr. Robins playing the role of Wm. Peyton, Prince Chap, ably supported by Mr. C. B. Morris as "Jack Rodney, Earl of Huntington", Mr. Whitlock, as "Marcus Runion" and Eleanor Lowe, as "Puckers", are conspicuous comedy characters, while little Miss Davida Baker will star as "Claudia", the orphan waif.

It will be interesting to Charlottetown theatre-goers to again see old "Star favorite"—Mrs. Patterson Forsythe—in the role of "Claudia" in act three.

Miss Gorman will appear in a double role—in act one as Claudia's mother, and in acts two and three, as Alice Travers, fiancée of William Peyton. 6953.

SOMETHING GOOD.

When the world goes wrong, and life seems to hold few joys for you, And the days with toil are rife, Then find something good to do.

When your skies are dull and grey, Make the blossom forth anew; All along life's rugged way There is something good to do.

Do not stop to grieve or fret— Time is precious, toilers few; Care and wrong you'll soon forget When you've something good to do.

UNGAVA.

Nine men in 10, it may safely be guessed, if asked to speculate where Ungava was, would feel pretty certain that they had heard of it in interior Africa. It told that it is twice as big as Texas, they might marvel a bit that anything of that size, even in Africa, should have escaped them.

But Ungava isn't in Africa at all. It is one of the big pieces of unknown America, and constitutes, in fact, approximately the north half of the province of Quebec, Can. It was turned over to Quebec a few years ago, and has recently been made the subject of a curious report prepared by the provincial Government.

It appears that various people have in the last two or three centuries taken the trouble to explore bits of Ungava and write more or less about what they found; and these writings have never till now been gathered together so as to provide a general view of the huge country. This work of collation has been done by the provincial authorities.

The Ungava region is in general a vast plateau, 1,500 to 2,000 feet high. Perhaps a fourth of its area is occupied by lakes. There is a great network of rivers, among which are some of the most wonderful waterfalls in the world. One of these falls is declared to have a sheer drop of 302 feet; its potential water-power development, at lowest stage of the river, is calculated at 120,000.

It is gathered from the authorities that the country's climate is so severe that little of it will ever be useful for agricultural purposes. That, however, will be taken with allowance by people who know what northern Russia and middle Alaska can do agriculturally. The timber has largely been burned over and large trees are now to be found mainly along the rivers only.

Ungava is almost twice the area of Germany, and in all the world there are few regions, so extensive that are so little known.
