Damage Action In Supreme Court

When the Supreme Court resumed yesterday morning with Mr. Justice Saunders presiding, the only civil jury case was called.

ACCUSED

Thomas W. Trenchard, presiding, rebuked him quietly.

Initial outburst The outburst, Hauptmann's first open display of the emotion that has been gathering in his pale face for the 12 days of his trial for murder of the Lindbergh child, came as state witnesses told how the carpenter spent and hid part of the $50,000 ransom.

Special agent Thomas H. Sisk of the Department of Justice was on the stand, relating how officers found more than $10,000 of the ransom money in Hauptmann's Bronx home and garage last September. Some of the ransom bills were in the garage woodwork, but Sisk told of an empty crock he found near the floor.

"We questioned Hauptmann as to the jug," said Justice Trenchard. "Let me suggest to the defendant that he keep quiet. If he has any observations to make, let him make them quietly through counsel."

"One moment," said Justice Trenchard. "Let me suggest to the defendant that he keep quiet. If he has any observations to make, let him make them quietly through counsel."

"In that jug," replied Sisk. "A few feet away, Hauptmann jumped from his chair and shouting the command to 'stop lying.' His face was pale, his accent harsh and guttural."

Quietly Rebuked "One moment," said Justice Trenchard. "Let me suggest to the defendant that he keep quiet. If he has any observations to make, let him make them quietly through counsel."

Five New Members Five new members were introduced, four by W. P. Mulock, North York; Colin Campbell, Frontenac-Addington; H. B. McKinnon, Knapton-Rainy River and W. H. Mills, Egin West. The new Conservative member is T. L. Church, Toronto East, a colonial veteran of many parliamentary fights.

Two former cabinet members, Hon. H. H. Stevens, who resigned some weeks ago, and Hon. Murray MacLaren, were shifted to front-row seats along the Conservative side of the chamber.

The first major debate of the session, arising from the Throne Speech, will open Monday when the formal motion in reply will be moved by Earl Ross (Dufferin-Simcoe), C. N. Dorion (Quebec-Montmorency), English and French speaking Conservatives. The Liberal leader will lead off the attack in a speech which is expected to disclose the attitude of his party toward the reform platform announced by the Prime Minister.

George Black was the first speaker in Canada's history to resign the office and the vacancy today resulted in delays in the opening ceremonies. When the House met at 3 o'clock, the members, in response to the summons of the gentleman usher of the black rod, the Senate's traditional messenger, trooped down the corridors to the Senate.

They found Chief Justice Duff of the Supreme Court sitting on the Throne who, finding they had no speaker, sent them back to hold the election.

Speaker Bowman was elected unanimously and then came the official summons to the Senate with the Governor-General ready to read the speech. A few minutes later the House adjourned until tomorrow when debates will be held to members who died in the recess.

G.N.R. Influences Progress of Quebec Province

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 17.—The contribution of the Canadian National Railways toward the city of Montreal, the Province of Quebec and the other parts of Canada served by the lines of this system was stressed by Mr. J. Edouard LaBelle, K. C., trustee of the National system in addressing today the members of section D'Ormeau, St. Jean Baptiste Society at their annual luncheon meeting. M. Telesphore Brassard presided.

The railways, said Mr. LaBelle, were an integral and indispensable part of Canada's National life, influencing her economic and social structure at all times, important phases of the progress of Canada were pointed out by Mr. LaBelle. The railways had first made possible the development of industry and settlement in the nation and in the province of Quebec.

Canada had become a figure in the world market with increasing exports as her transportation facilities had been built up. As an instance of the railway's importance to industry, Mr. LaBelle said that in 1933, which was not a normal year, the Canadian National system had carried 37,871,201 tons of freight and 9,894,812 passengers.

It employed almost 75,000 men and women paying them wages and salaries amounting to $100,305,000 in a year.

The Province of Quebec owed much to the Canadian National and its constituent companies. The first railway built in the province, the Champlain and St. Lawrence, was part of the National system.

Mr. LaBelle, another former member of the National system, had brought about development of Montreal-Chicoutimi and opened up the route to the West coast of the province itself the National system had aided in the development of Lake St. John and the Saguenay area, Quebec, and the rich agricultural and mining areas of Manitoba.

The City of Montreal derived direct benefit from the operations of the Canadian National which was an important aid to business in the metropolis. Directly and indirectly an average of 2,300 tons of merchandise freight were handled in and out of Montreal by the railway. In active employment there were 9,500 men and women with an aggregate and a payroll amounting to $14,000,000. The railway also figured as an important purchaser of commodities of all sorts. In 1933 it had bought with an aggregate value of $37,211,460. The National system contributed $900,000 a year in taxes to the city of Montreal and its total tax bill was more than $6,500,000.

There was also a human side to railroading said Mr. LaBelle. The railroad carried colonists (more than 35,000 in two years) at reduced rates to aid in the back-to-the-land movement. It carried mail, 3,000 bags a day in and out of Montreal. It transported milk necessary to the welfare of infants and youths, handling 778,000 gallons of milk and cream into Montreal in a month, and performed many other services for the public welfare. Within its own organization the railway had many "human" activities, including its pension fund, medical clinic, first aid work and other developments for the benefit of its employees and others.

Among the employees of the Canadian National in the province of Quebec were many thousands of French-Canadians. Some of them had grown up in railroading, grandfathers, fathers and sons having been railroad employees. Mr. LaBelle instanced families in Montreal district who, between their mem-

LACK OF SNOW IRKS TRAPPERS

(By The Canadian Press) REGINA, Jan. 17.—Trappers of the prairie wolf in Saskatchewan report meagre bags of the wary animals during the past month in districts where they are known to exist in large numbers.

When four or five inches of snow faster than hunting dogs and easily makes a getaway. Lack of snow is blamed for the poor return.

For the same reason, many trappers report a meagre catch of weasel which will considerably lower the output of ermine for winter fur garments.

SHEEP GRAZING DESPITE SNOWS

(By The Canadian Press) LETHBRIDGE, Jan. 17.—Sheep on the ranges of southern Alberta are still feeding on grass and have reached the new year in the best condition in years. Despite light snowfalls in winter feeding has yet been necessary.

A number of sheep herders use snow-plows to keep the snow broken up and make the range more accessible to the flocks. Due to the mild weather this winter, however, the light snow has not crusted. A "reasonably good" market for 1935 wool is reported.
