

2 MEN HAD TO WASH THE DISHES

Snowflake Ammonia advertisement with image of a man washing dishes and product packaging.

The Girl Who Had No Chance

By MARION RUBINCAM

THE OLD BURDEN

Chapter 49

So Ruth turned her back upon the city that meant so much to her, and started home. The night train ran through the tunnel that went under the river and under the Great Hill bridge, and came out upon the marshy flat between New York and Newark.

No Longer Fears Whooping Cough

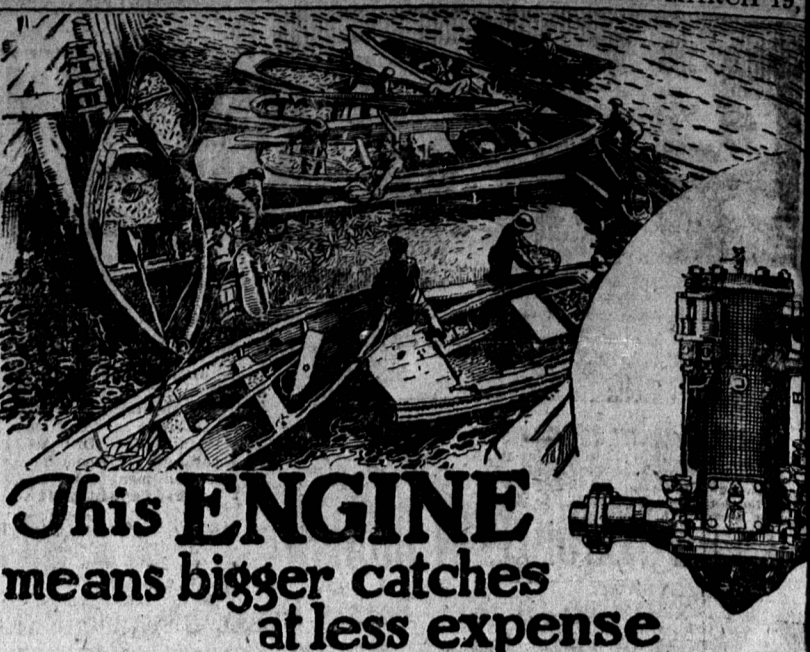

TORONTO MOTHER TELLS OF NEW VAPORIZING SALVE.

The quick direct treatment for colds of children and grown-ups, too, is an application of Vicks Vapo-Rub and chest at bed-time.

W. B. Yeats, A Character Sketch

By J. M. HONE

Mr. Yeats, the Irish propagandist, and Mr. Yeats, the Irish poet, are the same personage; but in the one capacity, that of propagandist Mr. Yeats is chiefly famous in Ireland; in the other, that of poet, he is chiefly famous in Great Britain and abroad.

This ENGINE means bigger catches at less expense

A wider cruising radius - more time to fish - freedom from delay caused by breakdowns - more miles per gallon of fuel - less need of lubricating oil, and consequently greater profits come to the Fishermen who equip their boats with the simple, sturdy

FOR SALE AT ORWELL

For sale at Orwell Cross Roads, a lot, consisting of five acres of No 1 land, also eight roomed house and good outbuildings. For particulars apply to S. C. GAY, 11985-5-6th.

Ramsay McDonald Dines With King

LONDON, March 17.—For the second time within a fortnight, J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor party tonight dined with the King and Queen. The dinner was at a semi-state chateau and forty guests were seated at a number of round tables.

NOTICE

Carriage building, repairing and horse shoeing. Now is the time to have your wagons, carts and riggers put in shape for spring work. Wire wheels repaired, rubber tires set. Wagons of all kinds made to order at reasonable prices. We have a sample express which can be inspected before leaving your order.

Why Not Satisfy Your Wish

If you would like to have a nice 42 piece Dinner set of Lamoges China, to set your table with. Or if you prefer to use the latest pattern of Silver Tableware, why not do so?

FOR SALE

8 acres of land 1 mile from City, in high state of cultivation with a good house, barn, granary, implement house and orchard. K. F. McRAE, East Royalty

Mammoth Clearance Auction Sale

Which was to have taken place at Orwell Cove on Wednesday the 17th day March, 1923 has been postponed until Thursday, March 22nd, at 12 o'clock noon sharp. Two farms, stock, crop and farm implements.

FOR SALE

Attractive Farming Property of Eighty Acres, all clear, good state of cultivation, overlooking Cardigan Bay. Convenient to churches, School and Shipping. Will sell with or without farm implements. Has large house and outbuildings in good repair. Will also sell forty acres of land adjoining above property, one third cleared, balance covered with spruce and fir. Also eighty acres of choice timber land about three miles distant. Can be bought either separately or together. Terms reasonable to suit purchaser. Apply to F. D. CAMPBELL, Georgetown, 11871-26-27th

Professional Cards

W. Miles Garrison, A. B., M. D. Pulmonary Tuberculosis Specialist, 120 Brighton Road, Charlottetown. Gas Treatment in Selected Cases. Telephone 207.

MacDonald & McPhee, B. A.

L. A. MacDonald, H. F. McPhee, Barristers, Attorney, Etc. Money to Loan. Riley Building, Charlottetown

Mark R. McGuigan, B. A.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, ETC. Money to Loan. Cameron Block, Charlottetown, P. E. Island

DR. CLIFT Chronic Diseases

Treatment in person or by letter. Address: Purdy Station, Westchester Co., N. Y.

Dr. C. C. Archibald

Graduate on N. Y. Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital. Practice limited to Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat. Office Bayer Building, Great George Street, Opposite Guardian Office. Telephone 850-J. Office Hours—9 to 12 a. m. 1 to 5 p. m.

Palmer & Palmer, H. J. PALMER, K. C.

Barrister, Etc. Money to Loan. Bank of Nova Scotia Building, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

J. D. STEWART, K. C.

Barrister and Solicitor, 84 Great George Street. Solicitors for the Union Bank of Canada.

S. S. HESSIAN

Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public, Etc. MONEY TO LOAN. Montague, P. E. Island

THE CHARLOTTETOWN MILLING CO., LTD.

PARMS AS FOLLOWS:—No. 1 containing 60 acres choice land, all clear in extra good state of cultivation, good buildings, well fenced. No. 2, 36 acres, adjoining No. 1, good buildings, overlooking Orwell Bay, 1/4 mile from all kinds sea manure, shore front. Close to church, school and shipping, beautiful location. Open for sale private till above date. Inspection any time.

L. O. A. Meeting Postponed

Owing to the break-up of the railway the annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of P. E. Island is postponed until March 22. On this date it will be held in Summer side, opening at 10 a. m.

QUICKLY RELIEVES CONSTIPATION

Don't let constipation poison your blood and curtail your energy. If your liver and bowels don't work properly, take CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS today and your trouble will be relieved. For dizziness, lack of appetite, headache and blotchy skin try them. Purely Vegetable. Small Pill—Small Dose—Small Price.

CLOVER SEEDS

Write for special price list of Clovers for Spring seeding.

TODD & COOK

Seed Merchants, Stouffville, Ont.

O. D. Geldart

PROVINCIAL MANAGER. Fuller Brush Co., Ltd., 79 Sydney St. PHONE 448

Jeoply Ruth was hurt, and these people in Marketown should never know how truly she cared for the man who had left her.

She had kept her promise, she had deceived them all—all but Tim and Gaby, and the secret was safe with them. Even the 11-year-old Kenneth was convinced—the home gossip of small children was a thing to be dreaded.

And now she was free of it all—free, and most terribly alone. She was almost glad to be back in the old room again. She could enjoy the physical comfort of the large bed, for the couch she had been sleeping on was too narrow for real rest.

The next morning Mrs. Belding tapped on her door to wake her. Ruth stood a moment looking out at the garden—a careless confusion of flowers, weeds, and untended grass, but beautiful in its fragrance and freshness. She put on her oldest working dress and went down to help get breakfast.

An hour later she was ironing. Two hours later cleaning the top floor. Early in the afternoon she did some special baking and, when her father begged her to rest and read to him, she suggested he sit out on the lawn and talk to her, while she weeded the flower beds.

"I never quite trusted theatrical folks," Mrs. Weed said again. "But this girl seems to be a good friend of Emily's, and for all her wild ways Emily is thoroughly trustworthy. And now you say you like her, why, why I feel easy in my mind."

"Gaby is a wonder," Ruth answered. "She could only be a good influence." "Well, Myra's so interested in her singing lessons and working so hard I hated to take her away. But I was getting worried about it. It is so overworking, do you think?"

And Ruth had to answer she did not think so—remembering how successful Myra avoided all exertion, and how little time her lessons really took. "Anyway, I was glad when she wrote she was engaged to young Turner. Mr. Weed put in a great man whose voice and whose presence filled whichever room he was in. 'He's a sensible lad, and a hard worker, and I like his family of course. They're both too young, but he has nothing yet, but he'll be a steady influence for Myra. Ruth was glad her mother answered this. It saved her, and she did not want to use her voice just then.

"We thought," piped up Kenneth the small brother, "that you were crazy about T—"

Tomorrow—a Letter

And the world's altered since you died. With the loud hoot before the sea, That thick sword strokes were better meant— Than lovers' music—let that be so that the wandering foot's content."

Of the little band of devoted poets who met round the "Chester" during the closing years of the last century, Yeats is now almost the sole survivor. Davidson committed suicide, Dowson died of consumption at the age of thirty, Lionel Johnson had a tragical and mysterious end. The minor figures perished as miserably. "Twas wine, or woman for some cause," says Mr. Yeats in his recent mood. But he remembers that a companion said, "Never made a poorer song. That they might have a heavier curse."

Luckier than the rest, Mr. Yeats was an Irishman, and could seek his consolation in politics. And when the worst is said of patriot, it will be allowed that it need do no ill-effects upon the health of a man who has published a Calendar of Erin and established an Irish national theatre, an Irishman who dares to say what he thinks and encounter public disfavour; and is now an Irish Senator.

Mr. Yeats was born in Ireland, and is, by extraction, a member of the "Protestant garrison," like Shaw and Wilde and Synge. But who believes in race, that there must be in his composition a Celtic, if not a pre-Aryan strain. When one learns that he is addicted to astrology, the suspicion is strengthened. His black eyes, raven hair, and look of an artist purring do not constitute a typical Irish type; but Mr. Yeats may say with a fellow-countryman, Lord Morris, that he is one, drunk or sober, ever took him for an Englishman. George Moore, in his amusing book of Irish reminiscences, "Ive," tells of how an old French gentleman, probably a student of Giffenau, on hearing that Mr. Yeats practised magic, had the old problem of the poet revealed to him in a flash. "A Finnish ancestor," he muttered; "some Finnish ancestor, I thought up in Silesia, that is to say, in the heart of Irish Ireland, and the tender and spiritual quality of his earlier work, his preoccupation with Irish legend, and his delight in the folk imagination were derived from this experience. When he went to London as a young man he fell in with Henley, who soon afterwards declared that there were only two Irish poets and that the other was dead."

MR. YEATS OFTEN RUINED BY CARELESS WASHING. If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. The best thing for steady use is Mulford's coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use. Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulford's cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulford's in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rises out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage. You get Mulford's coconut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it is very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure you get Mulford's. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

W.G.Y. Program

TUESDAY, MARCH 20 WGY (Schenectady, N. Y.) General Electric Company. Eastern Standard Time. 12:00 m.—U. S. Naval Observatory time signals. 12:30 p. m.—Noon stock market quotations. 12:45 p. m.—Weather report on 485 meters. 2:00 p. m.—Music and Household talk. 6:00 p. m.—Produce and stock market quotations; news bulletins. 7:40 p. m.—The Value of Insectivorous Birds to Forest and Agricultural Interests, by Cassius A. Johnston, State Conservation Commissioner. 7:45 p. m.—Musical program by Skidmore College, courtesy of Chamber of Commerce, Saratoga Springs. Women's chorus selection, with tenor solo from "The Highwayman" by Taylor. Soloist, John de Heck. A. Stanley Osborn, director. Mandolin Club, "Song Without Words" by Tschalkowsky. Miss Miriam Pitts, director. Chorus with soprano solo, "Gallia" (A Motet) by Gounod. Miss Victoria Munn, soprano. Tenor solos, original songs, by students of Skidmore College. a. "The Rose" Helen Whalen. b. "Invocation" Margaret Armstrong. c. "Unforgotten" Miriam Pitts. John de Heck. Chorus of college songs. a. "Skidmore Marching Song" b. "Shout, Shout, Shout." c. "The Redmen's Trail" d. "Alma Mater" Mandolin Club, "Cavatina" Raff. Chorus selection, "Mother Goose Arabesque" Jessie Take. Piano solos, original compositions. a. "Barcarolle" V. Wallace Virginia Wallace. b. "Reverie" M. Pitts Miriam Pitts. Chorus and Mandolin Club, "View-nese Serenade" Stevenson. Soloist, John de Heck.

Mme. Clemenceau Died in Wisconsin

MILWAUKEE, March 17.—Madame Clemenceau, the divorced wife of the Tiger, died at Durand, Wis. She met the former Premier when he was an instructor of French at Stamford, Conn. They were married in eighteen sixty nine and she was divorced twenty three years later.

Mr. Yeats, the Irish propagandist, and Mr. Yeats, the Irish poet, are the same personage; but in the one capacity, that of propagandist Mr. Yeats is chiefly famous in Ireland; in the other, that of poet, he is chiefly famous in Great Britain and abroad. The most remarkable thing one can say about Mr. Yeats is that he is, at the same time, a man of action and the most purely poetical of poets; which perhaps explains why Mr. Yeats, the most authentic voice in the English language today, has not displaced Tom Moore in the popular affections of Ireland. Poets today want to pronounce on current controversies, to deliver messages in verse on the affairs of their "day and generation," rather than on the affairs of all time. But few poets—few modern poets—have been men of action. Now, Mr. Yeats, on the other hand, has never composed propagandist poetry. He can point to a fine record of patriotic Irish work, and yet he can assure that he never wrote a line of deliberately patriotic verse. No one ever thought more deeply of, and for literature, or was so jealous of its purity. Therefore no author of our time has so strictly avoided the platform and the pulpit tone. He quotes St. Thomas a Kempis: "The Holy Spirit has delivered me from a multitude of opinions." "Art," he says, "has no purpose but the praise of life; it is more important than the cause. Addressing his dead companions, the poets of the nineties, he cries out:— "I have kept my faith, though faith was tried, To that rock-born, rock-wanderer-wandering foot. And the world's altered since you died. With the loud hoot before the sea, That thick sword strokes were better meant— Than lovers' music—let that be so that the wandering foot's content."

Yeats was born in Ireland, and is, by extraction, a member of the "Protestant garrison," like Shaw and Wilde and Synge. But who believes in race, that there must be in his composition a Celtic, if not a pre-Aryan strain. When one learns that he is addicted to astrology, the suspicion is strengthened. His black eyes, raven hair, and look of an artist purring do not constitute a typical Irish type; but Mr. Yeats may say with a fellow-countryman, Lord Morris, that he is one, drunk or sober, ever took him for an Englishman. George Moore, in his amusing book of Irish reminiscences, "Ive," tells of how an old French gentleman, probably a student of Giffenau, on hearing that Mr. Yeats practised magic, had the old problem of the poet revealed to him in a flash. "A Finnish ancestor," he muttered; "some Finnish ancestor, I thought up in Silesia, that is to say, in the heart of Irish Ireland, and the tender and spiritual quality of his earlier work, his preoccupation with Irish legend, and his delight in the folk imagination were derived from this experience. When he went to London as a young man he fell in with Henley, who soon afterwards declared that there were only two Irish poets and that the other was dead."

Yeats was born in Ireland, and is, by extraction, a member of the "Protestant garrison," like Shaw and Wilde and Synge. But who believes in race, that there must be in his composition a Celtic, if not a pre-Aryan strain. When one learns that he is addicted to astrology, the suspicion is strengthened. His black eyes, raven hair, and look of an artist purring do not constitute a typical Irish type; but Mr. Yeats may say with a fellow-countryman, Lord Morris, that he is one, drunk or sober, ever took him for an Englishman. George Moore, in his amusing book of Irish reminiscences, "Ive," tells of how an old French gentleman, probably a student of Giffenau, on hearing that Mr. Yeats practised magic, had the old problem of the poet revealed to him in a flash. "A Finnish ancestor," he muttered; "some Finnish ancestor, I thought up in Silesia, that is to say, in the heart of Irish Ireland, and the tender and spiritual quality of his earlier work, his preoccupation with Irish legend, and his delight in the folk imagination were derived from this experience. When he went to London as a young man he fell in with Henley, who soon afterwards declared that there were only two Irish poets and that the other was dead."

Yeats was born in Ireland, and is, by extraction, a member of the "Protestant garrison," like Shaw and Wilde and Synge. But who believes in race, that there must be in his composition a Celtic, if not a pre-Aryan strain. When one learns that he is addicted to astrology, the suspicion is strengthened. His black eyes, raven hair, and look of an artist purring do not constitute a typical Irish type; but Mr. Yeats may say with a fellow-countryman, Lord Morris, that he is one, drunk or sober, ever took him for an Englishman. George Moore, in his amusing book of Irish reminiscences, "Ive," tells of how an old French gentleman, probably a student of Giffenau, on hearing that Mr. Yeats practised magic, had the old problem of the poet revealed to him in a flash. "A Finnish ancestor," he muttered; "some Finnish ancestor, I thought up in Silesia, that is to say, in the heart of Irish Ireland, and the tender and spiritual quality of his earlier work, his preoccupation with Irish legend, and his delight in the folk imagination were derived from this experience. When he went to London as a young man he fell in with Henley, who soon afterwards declared that there were only two Irish poets and that the other was dead."

Yeats was born in Ireland, and is, by extraction, a member of the "Protestant garrison," like Shaw and Wilde and Synge. But who believes in race, that there must be in his composition a Celtic, if not a pre-Aryan strain. When one learns that he is addicted to astrology, the suspicion is strengthened. His black eyes, raven hair, and look of an artist purring do not constitute a typical Irish type; but Mr. Yeats may say with a fellow-countryman, Lord Morris, that he is one, drunk or sober, ever took him for an Englishman. George Moore, in his amusing book of Irish reminiscences, "Ive," tells of how an old French gentleman, probably a student of Giffenau, on hearing that Mr. Yeats practised magic, had the old problem of the poet revealed to him in a flash. "A Finnish ancestor," he muttered; "some Finnish ancestor, I thought up in Silesia, that is to say, in the heart of Irish Ireland, and the tender and spiritual quality of his earlier work, his preoccupation with Irish legend, and his delight in the folk imagination were derived from this experience. When he went to London as a young man he fell in with Henley, who soon afterwards declared that there were only two Irish poets and that the other was dead."

Yeats was born in Ireland, and is, by extraction, a member of the "Protestant garrison," like Shaw and Wilde and Synge. But who believes in race, that there must be in his composition a Celtic, if not a pre-Aryan strain. When one learns that he is addicted to astrology, the suspicion is strengthened. His black eyes, raven hair, and look of an artist purring do not constitute a typical Irish type; but Mr. Yeats may say with a fellow-countryman, Lord Morris, that he is one, drunk or sober, ever took him for an Englishman. George Moore, in his amusing book of Irish reminiscences, "Ive," tells of how an old French gentleman, probably a student of Giffenau, on hearing that Mr. Yeats practised magic, had the old problem of the poet revealed to him in a flash. "A Finnish ancestor," he muttered; "some Finnish ancestor, I thought up in Silesia, that is to say, in the heart of Irish Ireland, and the tender and spiritual quality of his earlier work, his preoccupation with Irish legend, and his delight in the folk imagination were derived from this experience. When he went to London as a young man he fell in with Henley, who soon afterwards declared that there were only two Irish poets and that the other was dead."

Service to Merchants

Every successful merchant knows that it is the advertised goods that move most quickly from his shelves; that minimize sales efforts, speed up turnovers and increase profits. Every P. E. I. merchant knows that The Charlottetown Guardian is the most effective medium for accomplishing these results. With its daily-average circulation of over 10,000 copies—about 50,000 daily readers—The Charlottetown Guardian is the outstanding "Buyers' Directory" of practically all the financially competent households of P. E. I. It is carefully scanned in every household it enters, not only for its news and editorial features, but for its valuable and reliable advertising information. This reader interest and confidence is the fruit of efficient service to both reader and advertiser. The Charlottetown Guardian enjoys, and appreciates, the confidence of its readers and of the dealers to whose advertising's appeal its readers so confidently respond. In excluding from its columns all advertising of questionable character, it serves dealers and readers alike—and advertisers who tie up with The Charlottetown Guardian's advertising campaigns know they are assured generous and profitable business returns. THE CHARLOTTETOWN GUARDIAN FIRST in the Province