forcements in men, tanks and planes from the west in an effort to crush the Tobruk-Rezegh link.

Rezegh itself has become a tank-littered graveyard, the spokesman said, adding that casualties have been heavy on both sides, and the end is far away.

"Our objective still is to wipe out the Axis tank units in Libya," he pointed out, "but it will take a lot more hard fighting."

Meanwhile some observers here saw a German threat to British communication lines at Sidi Omar near the Egyptian border where small units of Axis tanks, originally part of a raiding column, still were roving in apparent division manoeuvres.

Interpreting The War

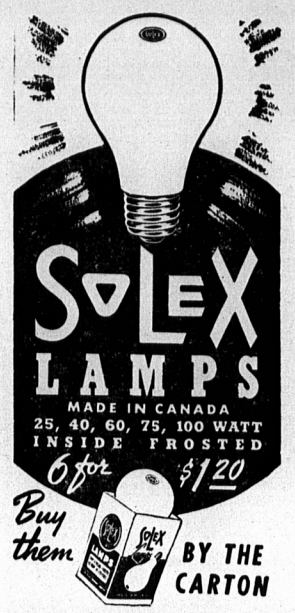
dare write off as ended, could grimly point the way to Hitler's waterloo.

Vaster forces are engaged on the long Nazi-Russian war front. The toll of bloodshed and destruction is incalculably greater there. Yet against stoic Russian resistance, which Hitler told his people five weeks ago was already broken, his forces in Russia still are far from a conclusive victory.

Moscow's outer defences, deeply penetrated on the north, under terrible pressure in the west and ominously folding backward to the south, may be tottering. Eastward to the beleaguered city itself, however, still lies a wide arc seamed with transportation routes to Archangel, to the Volga and to all vast Asiatic Russia.

Northward of Moscow, where the most menacing steel-tipped Nazi finger has thrust closest to the city through the Klin breach, the Germans make no claim of further progress. That slender prong of attack appears blunted and dangerously slowed down if not definitely halted.

Turn back to the clash in Libya, Cairo says the British forces have closed the Rezegh-Tobruk gateway through which the Axis forces might have escaped an annihilation trap.



Tobruk's stout-hearted garrison has joined hands with comrades advancing westward to seal the trap with steel.

If counter attacks to reopen it can be warded off, Axis forces on the Tobruk-Salum-Side Omar-Rezegh rectangle are doomed.

ner, Canon E. M. Malone, Hugh Miller, T. H. Bussell Somers, M.A., S.T.M., Archibald Macdonald, I. J. Levy, Neil Herman and Capt. W. Mercer of the Salvation Army; Messrs. William Moran (auditor), Philip Rossiter and C. St. Clair Trainor, K.C.; Mrs J. J. Hornby, Mrs. W.J. McIntyre, Miss Jessie Fullerton, Mrs. W. G. Bruce, Mrs. H. S. Henderson, Sister John of the Cross, Mrs. J. D. MacGulgan, Miss Eva Beers and Mrs. S. G. Peppin.

His Worship, Mayor B. Roy Holman, in an address to the Society, said that he had contended for some years that serious consideration be given the matter of trying the curfew law again. He "hoped this Council (City Council) will arrange that before the end of this term." He blamed the parents for the children being allowed to be on the streets at night and said there "is a great disregard for law and order." He paid tribute to the police "who are anxious and willing to do their duty."

He explained that the City had cut out direct relief because the Dominion and Provincial Governments had discontinued their contributions. The City was unable to carry on the burden alone. However, the various clergy in the city had promised to take care of the matter. The situation has been relieved somewhat by the fact that many former recipients had enlisted, he said.

Conduct of Children

Dr. MacMillan, in his comprehensive report of the year's activities, the text of which appears below, brought up the problem of children running wild on the streets. He referred to the "disgraceful" conduct of the youth of the city during the Armistice Day celebrations, the occasion of Major Nev's lecture given in a theatre recently and on other occasions. He thought "the police in the City should exercise more jurisdiction and power" in dealing with such disturbances.

Rev. Hugh Miller declared that the "disturbance of boys and girls is worse today than it was two years ago." He cited the need of the church, school and other societies "combining to teach better civic pride to citizens."

Rev. G. C. Webster said that the matter of a curfew law had been considered for three or four years. It is difficult to enforce, he pointed out. "The time has come when we should move forward to the end when we must express our belief that we should, at least for a season, have the curfew law placed on the statute books again." He then moved that "we go on record as being in favor of the establishment of the curfew law in the city of Charlottetown within the near future."

Rev. I. J. Levy, seconding the motion, said that the problem was not the children but the home.

Rev. P. D. McMahon, supporting the motion, suggested that in framing the law, the city authorities cast an eye on its method of enforcement so as to avoid making the policemen ridiculous chasing children about the streets; also to definitely settle the sanction of the law—know whether the punishment would be on the child or the parent.

Referring to "the majesty of the law" which is seen in policemen patrolling the streets, he said he was in favor of progress and wished to see the patrol and radio used. Recently it had proven useful in rounding up a mainland car the occupant of which was soliciting advertising without authority for a Catholic organization. In this connection "a civic license had been rather hastily given" the offending party, Dr. McMahon stated.

The parish would look after the poor as long as it was able to do so but if this became impossible the Government would have to assist, he said referring to the discontinuance of relief.

Major MacNutt referred briefly to the former curfew law in the city but added that the real responsibility rests with the parents.

Mr. Donald MacKinnon also told how the law had worked when tried out on a former occasion. He suggested the taking of a census to find "the really needy" people in the city.

Agent's Report

Mr. W. J. Brawders, agent for the society, who was complimented on his work by the various speakers, in a report of the year's work spoke of the checking up on the attendance at school, the care of neglected and dependent children and juvenile delinquency.

He listed the three principal causes for non-attendance at school as being: sickness, poverty and negligent parents.

He described in detail the process which is necessary to make neglected or dependent children the wards of the society; also, if outside the city, how they are made wards of the Superintendent. In this connection, he said, "Although it is difficult to find foster homes for needy children, yet, each year, parties writing to adopt children into their homes, call at one or the other of the orphanages, and in this way a limited number of children do find their way annually into nice homes where they are well cared for."

Mr. Brawders described the procedure followed in the court which deals with juvenile delinquency and read some of the actual cases.

President's Report

In his interesting report of the year's activities, Hon. Dr. MacMillan, President, spoke as follows:

"I take pleasure in presenting a brief report of the work of this Society for the past year.

"Of course, you are no doubt aware of the aims and objects of the organization, viz. the care and protection of neglected and dependent children.

"Children of this class are those whose parents, because of ignorance or neglect, fail to give them the start in life to which normal boys and girls are entitled, or are unable to do so because of poverty.

"Many such children are made wards of the Children's Aid Society, which means that the guardianship is transferred from the parents to the Society, which may then take whatever action is considered best for the future welfare of the children. They are sometimes placed in an orphanage, and transferred from there to suitable foster homes, or they may be sent to such foster homes direct.

"At the present time, eighty eight children are wards of the Society. A large number of these are in good homes throughout the Province. Some are in St. Vincents Orphanage, some in the Protestant Orphanage, five are in Reform Schools and the remainder are with their parents under the supervision of the Society.

"We are most fortunate in having such splendid foster homes for so many of our wards, and when we consider the present condition of the children in these homes, and compare it with what it would otherwise have been in most instances, I feel we have ample justification for the existence of the Society, as there can be no doubt of the value of the work which is being done for these little ones.

"Those in the Orphanages and Reformatories are receiving excellent training which will be most valuable in giving them a proper start in life.

"Those who are still with their parents, under supervision are getting along reasonably well, and in many instances considerable improvement has taken place in home conditions since the children were made wards. This, of course, is very gratifying. I might say here however, that the Society has power to remove children who are wards, from their homes at any time if circumstances should make it necessary to take such action.

"The matter of finding suitable homes is still one of our big problems, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain such homes. Our work is retarded on this account, as it happens sometimes we are unable to take over the custody of children who are sadly in need of better care and guidance than their own homes afford. Those placed in the Orphanages slowly find their way into good homes but there is a limit to the number the Orphanages can accommodate, although they are never known to turn a deaf ear to an appeal on behalf of a deserving case.

Juvenile Delinquency

"A juvenile delinquent is such because in many instances, though not always, he is a neglected child. Therefore, another phase of our work is that of endeavoring to curb delinquency among juveniles.

"Parents are interviewed in all cases of petty annoyance, and for the sake of their boys, their co-operation is requested in seeing to it that there be no repetition of the offence complained of.

"The parents in most cases cooperate wholeheartedly and with excellent results.

"For more serious offences, juveniles are brought to the Juvenile Court, and our statistics show that approximately 85 per cent of those who are brought to the court never give any further trouble.

"The remaining 15 per cent appear two or more times and eventually some of these must be committed to the Reformatory.

"The number of juveniles before the court the past year was fifty four, as compared with thirty one the previous year. It is a remarkable thing that over a period of seven years we find the number of delinquents is high every alternate year, and low the intervening year.

"This happens to be a high year, and we earnestly trust that next year will again be low, and very much lower.

"We are living in an age when home conditions seem to have changed greatly over what they were formerly, and as a result of this change we have large numbers of our children running wild about our streets at night when they should be at home preparing their school work, and retiring at a respectable hour.

"We say emphatically that if the parents of these children were doing their duty, these conditions would not be so serious, but when the parents themselves are away from home at night, and the children left to take care of themselves, it is no wonder they are to be found running wild on our streets, and our young girls associating with very dangerous company.

"This is a matter which calls for the serious consideration of the authorities, and citizens generally to see if some measures cannot be taken to get these children off our streets at night.

"If not, and the situation continues as at present, to grow worse, we shall have a serious problem to deal with later on."

LONDON, Nov 27—(CP)—The Royal Air Force's daylight sweeps of the English Channel and the North Sea netted destruction today of four German ships—two supply vessels and a pair of anti-aircraft boats—the Air Ministry announced tonight.

Two German fighter planes which intercepted the attackers on their way home were shot down in the Channel, the Air Ministry said. Some of the R.A.F. attackers were bomb-carrying fighters.

The day's operations cost the R.A.F. three planes, the communique said.

Heavy bombs were dropped in one district of East Anglia tonight, killing and wounding inhabitants. A hit-and-run raider wrecked two houses on the southeast coast.

$50,000 fire at Port Williams, N. S.

PORT WILLIAMS, N. S., Nov. 27—(CP)—An apple dehydrating plant, which had been filling orders for the British Government, was destroyed by fire here today with damage estimated at $50,000. The plant, owned and operated by George A. Chase of Port Williams, employed 180 persons.

Of undetermined origin, the flames spread rapidly and within 20 minutes the roof of the 200-foot brick structure collapsed. Some 80 men working at the time, managed to save 200 barrels of dehydrated apples and a few of the peeling machines.

Port Williams fire fighters, aided by apparatus from nearby Kentville, prevented the fire from spreading to adjacent storage buildings.
