With all the color and glamor of the pulsating Orient used as an effective frame-work for its thrilling and often melodramatic story, the new production, East Meets West, which had its premiere last night at the Prince Edward Theatre provides George Arliss with a historic subject and his particular brand of subtle humor.

Laid in a mythical country of the Far East known as Rungay, the picture gives screen audiences an incomparable Arliss as a shrewd and wily Rajah, who finds himself in a key position when England and an Eastern power meet.

East Meets West is full of fast, melodramatic action. And in addition to Arliss' brilliant performance, Lucie Mannheim, as a distinguished cosmopolitan, and Romney Brent as Dr. Shagu, the Eastern emissary, provide the picture with a full quota of entertainment.

Other splendid acting is furnished by Geoffrey Tearle and Ballard Berkeley.

Bigger and badder, madder and merrier, wilder and wackier, those three comedy-mad Ritz Brothers are starred for the first time in Life Begins in College, musical hit featuring Joan Davis, Tony Martin and Gloria Stuart and a noteworthy cast, which opened at the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday.

A hilarious, lighthearted jamboree, Life Begins in College, contains all the essential elements for a gay, entertaining hit—giddy gags, gossamer girls and frenzied fun. The go-rounds, cast, also includes Fred Stone, Nat Pendleton, Ed Thorngren, Dick Baldwin, Joan Marsh, Dixie Dunbar, Jed Prouty, Marie Cass, Marjorie Weaver and J. C. Nugent.

With them is Joan Davis, pretty red-headed comedienne, who attains new heights of hilarity as a love-struck girl on a heart-hunt for an Indian.

The unassuming Tim with only $10,000 a day to spend, is snubbed by all the fraternity boys until the Ritz Brothers take him in and then the fun begins in a riotous frolic of mirth and merriment.

Surrounding the plot are dazling ensembles with hundreds of gorgeous girls dancing to the swimmable tunes of Pollock and Mitchell.

From start to finish, Life Begins in College, is jammed with laughs that leave one hysterical with joy.

Reviews Policy In Collection Of Dog Taxes

Addressing the Sheep Breeders Association on Wednesday, Hon. W. H. Dennis, Minister of Agriculture, said in part:

"Mr. President and Gentlemen, I wish to first express my pleasure in attending the annual meeting of the Sheep Breeders' Association, and wish to convey to you a welcome from our Department as well as from the Government of the province, which I have been authorized to convey to you from the Premier.

"I assure you that with many of the delegates present it was a pleasure for me to listen to your annual report, as submitted to the meeting by your Secretary, Mr. Shnelly. It would be particularly all your attention to the fact that the amount of wool marketed by your Co-operative Association this year of 24,000 lbs. was about double the amount you marketed in the past year, and when you come to think of doubling the output in a single year, it may be encouraged, but I would press the need of continuing the success that you have now arrived at, and would earnestly ask the breeders here assembled to utilize their influence in homes, and among their neighbours, to obtain the co-operation of their friends, who do not at the present time participate in the Co-operative Wool Marketing Board.

"There is one matter which I would like to draw to the attention of the Sheep Breeders, namely, the collection of dog tax. The conditions of the Act were that if action was taken against any owner having paid dog tax, apart from the cost in connection with the trial, the dog owners were fined ten dollars. If the owner failed to pay the tax, he provided that he should be imprisoned for ten days; and I wish you present to remember that in our country we have not to consider the well being of all the people of the Province, and for this reason I hesitated to move in the matter in such a drastic way. It would mean a great deal of hardship to many people, and vast sums of money wasted, so that I tried to persuade the people in every way to pay this tax, as it was just and right.

"We postponed the date of payment from one period to another, but I fear our leniency was interpreted by many as weakness and our generosity was imposed upon. We did succeed in collecting four thousand dollars in the past year, and fifty-five dollars from our law-abiding people, who had a respect for the laws of the province in which they lived. It is incumbent upon us on account of the fact that those people had paid their dog-tax, that we should see that others who had not done so would be forced to pay.

"The Act also provided that the dogs might be destroyed, consequently the Attorney General and Inspector Friggs of the R. C. M. P. with tags and receipts, which would enable them to accept tax from parties who did not wish their dogs destroyed. I would earnestly ask the Sheep Breeders' opinion as to whether they approve of my action in this matter. In the hall expressed their approval of the actions of the Minister of Agriculture and his

Personals

Mr. J. P. Simmonds leaves this morning on a business trip to Montreal and Toronto.

Mr. Gibson Gives Encouragement

Mr. T. A. Benson, an old and valued friend of the poultrymen here, was a welcome visitor from Toronto for Farmers' Week and was principal speaker at the Poultry Association's annual meeting. Subsequently interviewed by a Guardian representative, Mr. Gibson said:

"I had the pleasure of looking over the new Prince of Wales College and the 'headquarters' of the Prince Edward Island Free Public Library. I consider that this a wonderful innovation, which together with its 20 branches distributed over the province should be an invaluable educational feature, which sincerely hope the people of Prince Edward Island generally will avail themselves of to the fullest extent.

"In looking over what I hope I might call my old home city of Charlottetown, I find progress in almost every direction. In looking over the rural situation I find that the co-operative spirit amongst the farmers still is strong, but the farmers should be warned against this co-operative movement very jealously, and one of the best suggestions to assure this that I have heard for some considerable time was to hold the annual meeting of the P. E. I. Egg and Poultry Association held in Charlottetown yesterday and that in different parts of the province, which all the farmers may attend but which the rising generation of young farmers should avail themselves of to the fullest extent.

"A very similar movement to this was the foundation upon which Denmark's success was built, and in spite of the fact that Denmark as a country has often been sarcastically referred to as a 'sard head' all the world knows of the tremendous success in agriculture, the first of all to the splendid co-operative spirit which prevails throughout the country and the thoroughness in all farming operations.

"My sincere hope is that this effort will succeed like measure in Prince Edward Island."

The Feed Situation

Referring at considerable length to the feed situation, and in particular to the move to have duty removed or greatly reduced on American feedstuffs, the president of the Association pointed out that under the Empire trade agreement South African corn was admitted duty free. The duty on feedstuffs from the United States was not sufficient. Last December because of diminishing supply of corn the South African government put on an embargo preventing further export.

Duty on corn from the U.S. or Argentine Republic for feed purposes was reduced to 20 per cent. Mr. Reid said, while distillers were able to import corn from the same countries by paying 7 cents per bushel duty. Manufacturers of corn products could import corn duty free. "We as producers are as much entitled to cheap corn as anyone," Mr. Reid declared.

Review by Fieldman

The swine industry in this province during the past year gave an excellent account of itself, he said. Mr. S. D. Irvine, senior fieldman, declared in beginning his address. The past year saw a material increase in the number of live market hogs, and a smaller number of weaned pigs exported to Newfoundland was a factor which contributed to this success, he said.

"With the exception of one district, namely the Wellington-Egmont Bay district," he continued, "it is believed that this increase was due generally to the fact that the keeping of more hogs in districts where pigs are more or less always grown than by the swinging into hog production of districts which had been previously idle."

The average price of boars was maintained higher than the previous year, he said, and although the swine show held under the auspices of the Swine Growers Association had been discontinued last year, it was held at New Brunswick and eight to Newfoundland.

After dealing with advanced registry and rail grading, which was dealt with generally in a summary way, Mr. Irvine said that the question of parasites in hogs. Worms still constituted a serious loss factor in the industry and much feed was unnecessarily wasted, the maturity of the hog delayed by their presence.

Suitable Feeds Essential

Suitable feeds essential to proper growth was a very important factor for success in the industry. Improper feeding practices had to be discouraged against the raising of hogs, Mr. Irvine continued.

Early maturity was important if farmers wish to get the best results out of hog raising and get pigs to market as early as possible.

Hoped For Further Expansion

"A further expansion in the industry whereby more dairy farmers would keep at least one brood sow as well as the greater use of suitable feeds for the proper growth and finishing of hogs, together with more control exercised over parasites, should do much to enhance the swine industry. When one considers the degree to which farm revenue in this province has been supplemented this past fall, through the sale of hogs as well as the additional advantages to be gained by keeping pigs, such as the adding of fertility to the soil and continuity of marketing org-

URGES NEED OF PIONEER SPIRIT IN DOMINION

Montreal Club Addressed By Hon. Cyrus Macmillan.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21—Hon. Dr. Cyrus Macmillan, McGill University, said today, in speaking before the Royal Montreal Curling Club at their weekly luncheon that Canada today could use a lot of the old pioneering spirit and their ability to work for a common goal. "There is no doubt," he said, "that we are not as close together today as our fathers dreamed we would be years ago."

Hon. Dr. Macmillan in his 12 minute speech made the point that Canada would do well to get back to pioneering beginnings, as far as spirit was concerned, and this he stressed from the outset. He did not want to be an alarmist, and he did not want to give offence, he said. But never in the 70-year history of Canada were the responsibilities resting on home and school and university so great as now. Because it was 18 years since peace was signed, and efforts had been made in that time to bring about peace, these efforts had failed.

Canada at present suffered from two types of Canadian, he complained. One was the man who looked at everything from the provincial, parochial attitude. The other was the man who did not bother about Canadian affairs at all, and saw everything from a completely international outlook.

"It is time we developed a third type—one who will take the viewpoint of the whole of Canada," he said.

Dr. Macmillan pointed out that in earlier days, the frontier and the backwoods were a sort of safety valve. They offered a chance to carry out a career in the west, and with it the decay of self-reliance. While it was quite true that one could not have James McGill of Alexandria, or a Beaver tail pill his big name, or a name that might probably be used.

Dr. Macmillan complained that never was it so easy for demagogues, charlatans, and impostors to get a hearing as today. Unfortunately, their victims were mainly youths. For the most part these youths were headed by intelligent, world-wise men, but they were to Canada's trouble was not something that came to the Dominion through alien tongues. He quoted the lines "Never but by British hands should British wrongs be righted."

In summing up, the speaker complained of the lack of unity in Canada. He asked how far the provinces were now compared with 1867, and he felt they were very far indeed. He asked if it was true that the provinces were together, had the radio done its share?

"There is no doubt we are not as close as our fathers dreamed we would be, years ago," he said.

In spite of all this Canada could look back on the past with knowledge of very great achievements. Then, turning to the future, he believed there was sunlight beyond the present mist. But in navigating the ship of state, it might be well to go back to the old reliable stars that so successfully guided the Canadian pioneers along the right route.

a peace honorable to both sides and end five years of fratricidal strife.

With particular emphasis, the Chancellor reminded his listeners that Hitler—whom he had not once mentioned by name—confirmed in his speech last Sunday to the German Reichstag that the Austro-German accord assured Austrian independence and non-interference in internal political matters.

REFERS TO DOLLFUSS

Von Schuschnigg referred eight times to Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, assassinated by Nazis in the Vienna putsch of 1934.

After declaring he had no desire to reopen old wounds "between the two countries, or to pose the question of responsibilities" for the long-standing "fratricidal strife" which he declared had endangered world peace, he said: "I recall only the last words of Chancellor Dollfuss, as he lay dying: 'I have never wished anything except peace.'"

Von Schuschnigg accused the Austrian Nazi Party of past efforts to sabotage the 1936 Austro-German accord, and declared: "We solemnly affirm before the entire world our unshakable will to defend the freedom and independence of our Fatherland."

In passage after passage the Chancellor reminded that Austria was not a synthetic state, like some of these created after the Great War, and that the will to endure which has characterized its past history would continue to keep it "a Christian state, a free state" where "everyone is equal before the law."

"It is time to forget the past catchwords and slogans of conservatives with long beards, of Conservatives and Liberals," he said. "What is healthy in anyone's program will find a place in ours."

four-power agreement to solve Europe's problems.

In Accord With Plans

Dr. Ernest Woermann, German Charge d'Affaires, was understood to have agreed to a plan for the recall of foreign troops in a visit to the Earl of Plymouth, chairman of the European Non-Intervention in Spain Committee.

A similar move, still existed. The withdrawal of troops is linked with recognition of the Spanish combatants' belligerent rights, and Soviet Russia, a member of the "Hands Off Spain" Committee, has not accepted the formula.

Political Storm Rages

The political storm caused by Mr. Eden's resignation meanwhile echoed in the House of Lords, in and out of Parliament the battle over Mr. Chamberlain's foreign course raged.

Lord Addison led Labor peers in charges that France had been neglected in an "invasion of a risky kind."

The Marquis of Londonderry favored a pact among France, Great Britain, Italy, and Germany for "making peace."

In the House of Commons, Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, taunted the Prime Minister, asking: "Do I understand the Passo Roncato (Italy's version of the goosestep) will not be compulsory in this country?"

Reiterates Fear

Winston Churchill, former Conservative cabinet minister speaking to the Conservative Club as an "old servant of the Crown," reiterated his fear of the consequences of Mr. Chamberlain's "awful" responsibility. He has made plain that he would not join in Labor's cry for the Prime Minister's resignation.

"It makes my blood run cold," he said. "I think what might happen if the factor Party should unfortunately regain power."

Mr. Chamberlain saw King George tonight shortly before the Earl of Perth, Ambassador to Italy, arrived from Rome for instructions on the talks into which he will enter there with the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

The King also saw Viscount Halifax, Mr. Eden's temporary successor as Foreign Secretary, after a meeting of the Privy Council.

WORTHY OF INDEPENDENCE

Von Schuschnigg said Austria had shown herself worthy of independence and if her material progress was not as great as that of other nations, "we at least are able to demonstrate a most respectable showing for a land which has been tried as sorely as Austria."

Then he began giving figures—Hitler died his Sunday speech—showing increases in Austrian production, exports and creation of work. He outlined a broad program to combat poor housing and unemployment.

"As the picture of a dying country," he asked.

"We seek to live in harmony with our neighbors and with all peoples of the world," the Chancellor said. "We regard it as our duty to keep our duty to keep on good terms with all, including the great democracies, England, France and the United States."

DENIES INTERPRETATIONS

He attacked foreign newspapers for their reports that his deal with Hitler meant a weakening of Austria's relations with Italy. Pointing out that the 1936 Vienna accord, reaffirmed at Berchtesgaden, specially mentioned the Rome protocols linking Austria with Italy and Hungary, he declared:

"It would consequently be false to talk of enfeeblement of Austro-Italian relations, as the international press has done in recent days." Premier Mussolini, he said, had always shown sympathy with the Austrian people and had scrupulously avoided giving the appearance of interfering in Austrian domestic affairs.

"Austria's future, he said, depends upon the strong will for freedom in every Austrian heart.

"I take courage from the example of Dollfuss and all markers and I place my trust in God who will not forsake Austria."

He ended his speech on that second reference to the assassinated Chancellor.

One of the most attentive visitors at the Diet session was Franz Von Papen, retiring German Ambassador, who helped arrange the meeting between Von Schuschnigg and Hitler.

ance with Soviet Russia and once negotiations for a four-power pact linking Great Britain, France and Italy with Germany were well under way.

Nazis argued that France must accompany Britain into any four-power plan to settle European disputes. Otherwise, Nazis said, France would be forced into isolation in western Europe.

Foreign Office circles give every indication of believing Prime Minister Chamberlain will persuade France to go along with Britain in any such move. Chamberlain's action on that assumption, Germany now is trying to make clear to France that the latest consequence of siding with Britain is to give up the Soviet Alliance.
