THE QUEBEC LABRADOR

Q. Where is the Quebec Labrador? A. Lying along the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence is a long strip of land known as the Quebec, or Canadian Labrador. Here, on the outskirts of France's old domain in Canada, exists a little half forgotten colony of English-speaking people, the descendants, most of them, of settlers from Channel Islands. The Canadian Labrador begins roughly at Natashquan, and stretches from there right down the boundary of the Newfoundland Labrador, a distance of 250 miles. Along this wild bleak strip of coast is scattered a population of about 700 people. To minister to their needs the Anglican Church established many years ago the St. Clements Mission, and until recently the missionary was practically the only link between the lonely colony and the great world beyond. The "Coast" is still very isolated in winter.

the observation that their wounds heal rapidly and without the attendant infections frequently encountered elsewhere. This is believed to be the result either of a scarcity of pus-producing bacteria in those regions or to exceptional quantities of resistance in the skin of the Eskimos.

"No history of scarlet fever, diphtheria or measles could be obtained," the paper says, "and it seems quite unlikely that these illnesses ever have occurred in this region during the lifetime of the present generation."

Their immunity to these diseases, which other peoples are thought to develop only through exposure to the germs, is attributed to heredity.

The Sceptator

The London Sceptator, one of the sanest and, at the same time, one of the most liberal-minded of English weekly reviews, has been celebrating its centenary, and several interesting things have been done to mark the occasion. Major Astor of the Times gave a Sceptator banquet, the other evening, at which the Prime Minister spoke in eulogistic terms of the Sceptator and its founder and the men who had carried on the generous tradition he had set going. Sir William Beach-Thomas has written a book on the Sceptator and the Sceptator's policies and the great men who contributed to the columns of the review through ten decades. And now the Sceptator itself has come out with a great centenary number crammed with historical matter and reproductions of old pages and sketches of old editors and excerpts from notable contributions.

The Sceptator was founded in 1828 by Robert Rintoul who had been first printer and then editor of the Dundee Advertiser. After leaving Dundee, Rintoul was concerned with two unsuccessful newspaper ventures, first in Edinburgh and then in London. Then, with the financial backing of Joseph Hume and Douglas Kinross, he launched the Sceptator with the intention of giving the journal a reflective and critical character and of making it "an historical record of facts as seen week by week through the mind of an active and zealous reformer."

As a reformer, Rintoul took his paper wholeheartedly into the fight for the great Reform Bill, and when that was won, he championed various emigration schemes, notably the one with which Edward Gibbon Wakefield was concerned, and which had much to do with building up New Zealand. For a year or two after Rintoul's death, things were quiet with the Sceptator. Then Meredith Townsend, just home from India where he had made a great name for himself, became proprietor, and soon took Richard Hutton into partnership. They made a great team, these two, and the Sceptator became widely known for its weekly comments on literature, politics, religion and philosophy. It lost subscribers by championing the cause of the North during the American Civil War, but won prestige when the armies of the North prevailed. Strongly Liberal and strongly Imperialistic, the paper was at the high side of its influence in the days of the partnership.

Lord Asquith, who, in his lean early days at the English bar, added to a narrow income by writing articles and reviews for the Sceptator and the Economist, has some interesting paragraphs in his Recollections on Townsend and Hutton, the latter of whom, by the way,

WINTER SPORTS BEGUN—For the first time this season the boys were "in" on Government Pond yesterday, some of them up to the neck, others to the knees and under. While the water was uncomfortably cold, the youngsters appeared to derive as much pleasure out of it below as above. Another night or two will probably do away with the ducking part of it, and allow the boys time for skating and hockey.

LAD TO REST—The funeral of the late Mrs. James M. Hennessey was largely attended, was held yesterday morning from the lake residence to St. Dunstan's Cathedral where a Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Right Reverend Monsignor Maurice McDonald. The pallbearers were: Messrs. Michael Murphy, Wendell McDonald, Thomas Hughes, Alex. Coady, Frank McDonald and Patrick Murnaghan. Service at the grave was conducted by Rev. P. Walsh.

FIRE AT TRACADIE—Fire which was discovered in the residence occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Roberts, Tracadie, at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon destroyed the building and contents, so quickly did the flames spread. Mr. Roberts at the time was in the barn preparing to harness his horse and quickly gave the alarm, but when the nearest neighbor arrived it was impossible to save anything except two chairs and a small quantity of pork. A considerable sum of money was also lost as it was impossible to get near it. The house is owned by Mr. James J. McAulay. It is not known if the loss is covered by insurance.

has a famous nephew in Canada Dr. Maurice Hutton, long principal of University College, Toronto. The Sceptator was enthusiastically Gladstonian in those days, but it would not follow Gladstone on Home Rule and from the day of parting has been Unionist or Conservative in politics. It has, however, remained steadfastly liberal in outlook.

Asquith left the Sceptator on the Home Rule break, and his place was taken by J. St. Loé Strachey just fresh from Oxford. Strachey fascinated both Townsend and Hutton and they thought of making him their heir-apparent. While he hesitated, it is said, the office cat, the most sagacious animal, jumped on the young man's shoulder, and that clinched the decision. Strachey spent fourteen years as assistant to his partners, and in 1898, on the death of Hutton and the retirement of Townsend, he became editor and proprietor. He brought the journal a freshness which had been lacking for some time in the writings of the two old men, and made it more vital and less bookish. His regime lasted through the great reform campaigns in which he resolutely stood by free trade, and through the war. Like his predecessors, he was an Imperialist. But he was something more. His passion was the unbreakable friendship of the English-speaking peoples.

Mr. Strachey suffered much from ill health, during the latter year of his life, and in 1925 sold control of the paper to Mr. Evelyn Wrench. The Sceptator, like the Times, has become a national institution. In England and it is interesting to reflect that, as in the case of the Times, a trust has been formed which will see that the Sceptator never falls into hands which divert its policies from a line which coincides with the public interest and with the desires of the men who by their genius and their toil made the journal great.

DELEGATION TO OTTAWA—A delegation will go from Prince Edward Island today to interview members of the Federal Government on a number of matters of interest to Prince Edward Island. The question of a new car ferry will be brought up, before Sir Henry Thornton at Montreal and Hon. Chas. Dunning, Minister of Railways, at Ottawa, and the necessity of having a boat constructed that will meet the requirements of both the present and future traffic will be discussed. The resolutions passed by the various Boards of Trade will be submitted. The request of the mill contractors of Prince Edward Island for the abolition of the tender system, and the payment on a mileage basis, will also be presented. The delegation will also take up the appointment of a fourth Supreme Court Judge, who will also act as Judge of Probate. A provincial statute provides for this, having been passed some years ago. Provisional subsidies will also be dealt with. The delegation will include Premier Saunders, Hon. John E. Sinclair, M.P., R. H. Jenkins, M.P., A. E. MacLean, M.P., Senator MacArthur, Mr. C. G. Duffy, K.C., and Mr. Claude Holman of Summerside.

DWELLING DESTROYED BY FIRE—The dwelling house of Mr. R. G. Frizzell of Bonshaw was completely destroyed on Monday last by fire which broke out between one and two o'clock. It started in the attic, apparently from a defective flue. Mr. Frizzell and his family were in bed at the time and he and his wife and their four year old child had a very close call, the bed being on fire before they managed to escape. They lost the greater part of their furniture and almost all their effects, also all the produce that was in the cellar. The damage will amount to about $3,000, there being $800 insurance. Fortunately the wind was from the westward otherwise the barn and outbuildings would likely have been destroyed. The neighbors quickly gathered and rendered what assistance they could but the fire had made such headway when discovered that the dwelling could not be saved.

CORNWALL-YORK INSTITUTE—The annual meeting of the Cornwall-York Institute met at the home of Mrs. D. White, York Point, with an attendance of seventeen members and two visitors. After the business of the year was finished, Mrs. E. J. McMillan, the retiring president, gave a splendid report of her work done. It was carried that a letter of appreciation be conveyed to the Misses MacKinley for their very efficient institute work. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. W. W. Crosby; vice president, Mrs. E. J. McMillan; secretary treasurer, Mrs. Hazen S. Howard. After a delicious lunch served by the York Point ladies, and a sing-song led by Mrs. Leslie McEwen the meeting closed with the National Anthem. The next meeting is to be in the form of a Christmas bazaar at the home of Mrs. Annie McDonald, Cornwall, Monday evening, Dec. 3rd.

SOME OBSERVATIONS FROM THE RESULTS OF THE 1927-28 EGG LAYING CONTESTS. (Experimental Farms Note)

The Egg Laying Contest year just ended in many respects, not as satisfactory as had been anticipated. Lack of sunshine and frequent rains seemed to retard production in the spring and early summer. Generally speaking, production was much the same as in the previous year and egg size seemed to show a slight improvement.

Seven of the thirteen contests showed an improvement in average egg yield while eight of the thirteen showed an improvement in the average weight of eggs laid.

The Canadian Contest, at Ottawa gave an average egg yield which was six eggs per bird lower than that obtained the previous year, and the egg weight suffered in about the same proportion. The Nova Scotia Contest also showed a lower average egg yield. The Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia Southern, New Brunswick, Quebec Eastern, Quebec Western, Ontario and Saskatchewan Contests all showed an improvement in egg yield over the previous year and in some cases the figures were quite marked. On the other hand, the Manitoba, Alberta, British Columbia and Vancouver Island Contests all gave a lower average production per bird than was the case the previous year. It is fair to state that while the Vancouver Island Contest gave a lower average egg yield than in the previous year there was an improvement in the average weight of eggs.

An outstanding observation in connection with the contest year just ended was the figures which were worked out on the correlation of body weight to egg production and size of egg for the previous years' contest birds. In brief the findings showed a very marked correlation in all three characters in favour of the larger birds and it is safe to say that other things being equal the bird well up to standard weight will lay more and larger eggs than her pen mate that lacks body size. This information was published in mid-summer and from general observations made of the Canadian Contest birds which have just arrived for the 1928-29 Contest at Ottawa, breeders have selected pullets which give promise of making standard weight as hens. It is very gratifying to learn that the information which the egg laying contests have and are securing is being taken full advantage of by the poultry breeders throughout Canada.

Exkimos Are Healthy People

(Canadian Press)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 26.—Although the Eskimos of Baffin Island are very susceptible to the common cold and other infections of the upper respiratory tract and live in a climate which might be expected to foster such conditions, they apparently never are attacked by these diseases except when they come in contact with the less frigid outside world.

This point is emphasized in a paper by Dr. Peter Keimbecker, fellow of the National Research Council in medicine at Washington University, who was a member of the Greenland expedition of the American Museum of Natural History in 1926 and of the Putnam Baffin Island expedition last year, in collaboration with Dr. Edith M. Irvine-Jones, Theresean Catlin, fellow of the St. Louis Children's Hospital.

"In the summer of 1926, as the members of the Greenland expedition of the American Museum of Natural History made their way up the west coast of Greenland," the
