SOCIAL GATHERING — Mr. and Mrs. Preston Toombs opened their lovely home at Kensington on Friday evening, when friends of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Dunning held a delightful party in their home. The event took the form of a miscellaneous shower for Mr. and Mrs. Dunning who have settled in Kensington, and opened an attractive retail grocery business. The rooms were bright with nicely arranged cut-flowers. The honored guests were escorted to the dining room by Mr. "Jimnie" Clark, where the parcels were opened by Misses Thelma Adams and Edna Mann. The names of the donors were read by Mrs. Ralph MacMillan and Mrs. Fred Semple arranged the gifts. Elwood, who at an early age, had joined the Navy and saw active service, expressed his thanks on behalf of himself and his wife, and extended an invitation to visit them in their home. A delectable lunch was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Linwood Toombs, Miss Laura Hamilton, Mrs. R. MacMillan and Mrs. Miss Genevieve Delaney. Elwood F. Semple. Instrumental music by Dunning and Norman Mill, and songs added to the enjoyment of a very pleasant evening.—Bur.

Sport Echoes From Prince County

The "Big Five", Summerside Baseball League:—

Stewart, Kinsmen	24	0	0.00
Gay, Kinsmen	32	5	1.41
Powell, Red Sox	27	5	1.67
Arsenault, Legion	21	6	2.52
Mickus, R.C.A.F.	36	8	2.70

In wins and losses G. Bernard has won one and lost none. Powell and H. Gallant have each won three and lost one. Stewart has won two and lost one, and all the others have lost at least as many as they have won.

Since the publication of Andy Lytle's reply to my question, regarding pitcher's sneaking a pitch over the plate with the batter out of his box Jimmie Hogan, last umpire concerned in that kind of play here, has shown me an interpretation to Rule 7, section 3. In his book and in fairness to Jimmie we quote it here: "After having entered the box a batter leaves it at his own risk of having the pitcher throw a strike while he is out of position."

There is no use our denying that this gives the umpire authority to call such a pitch a strike on the batter, and we do not deny it. But we still think it would be better judgment on the part of the umpire to call time and give the batter time to get in position, unless the umpire thought the batter was stalling or trying to disconcert the pitcher. Certainly there would have to be a rule stating the batter left his box at his own risk, or batters would be continually getting in and out of their boxes to worry the pitcher. But farther on in this book, it says: "Batter steps out of box at his own risk unless he calls for time. However, if the act appears to be for a purpose other than to disconcert the pitcher, and if the umpire can suspend play before the pitcher has started his delivery, he will ordinarily signal time without any definite request from the batter."

When a second baseman, say, on a shortstop shouts "Have an eye, ump," after a called strike or ball, he is doing this at his own risk because the rules definitely say a player cannot dispute an umpire's decisions of judgment. He can be thrown out of the game for this remark, but what umpire would actually throw a player out of a game for such a mild protest as this? Under actual playing conditions umpires do not live up to the strict letter of the regulations, but rather to the spirit of them. This is probably what Andy Lytle meant when he said, "It is an unwritten law..."

What we are going to say now, we have said more than once before, but we feel that it is necessary to say it again. It is very easy for sports writers to sit back and thumb pages, perhaps even write to Toronto, before deciding that an umpire has been wrong on a certain decision. The umpire has to make that decision in a split second, and must certainly have all the rules on the tip of his tongue. If he is never to make a mistake, that is rather too much to expect of the ordinary amateur umpire. We have every respect for these arbiters for we have tried it out there on the firing line, and can still hear the derisive catcalls that greeted some of our decisions.

We think a lot of Jimmie Hogan's work, both as a referee in hockey, and as a umpire in baseball, and have so expressed ourselves more than once. His decisions on judgment seem accurate, and he remains unruffled in the face of pressure from fans and players alike. Facts are, we think our present quartet of umpires know the rules of the game better than any other set of arbiters we have had here in Summerside. They have been really conning the rule book and their work shows it.

In spite of all we have said above, the very first time we think our umpires have misinterpreted a rule, we will probably be taking another sock at them. In the next engagement we may be right, or the umpire may be right. It doesn't matter very much about that. What matters is that the question will have been given an airing, the fans will have been given something to talk about, (competitor leagues, and its barber shop sport just couldn't do without its hot stove leagues, and its barber shop post mortems, you know) and we'll all be a little wiser about the complicated rules that govern the good old game of baseball.

BING, BOB AND DOT
HIT NEW LAUGH HIGH

"Road to Rio," the Paramount comedy which arrived yesterday at the Capitol Theatre, is paved with blocks of solid belly-laughs.

The film is the newest of the highly successful Bing Crosby-Bob Hope-Dorothy Lamour screen travels which began some nine years ago when the trio hit the "Road to Singapore." That initial venture set laugh records all over the world, records that have been successively topped as Bing, Bob and Dot went on to visit Morocco, Zanzibar and Utopia. Now this terrific threesome has hit the fun jackpot as they head south of the border and south of sanity.

In "Road to Rio" Bing and Bob play a couple of down-at-the-heels musicians, cursed not only with unemployment but also with Bing's softness in the hands of women. Bing's falling usually winds up with Bob's headache, and after being run out of town after town, the boys slow away on a ship bound for Brazil.

Before the liner docks in Rio, our godo neighbor policy has already taken a beating. Crosby and Hope meet up with Dorothy Lamour. She's in trouble, and that means the boys have to get mixed up in it, too. And before they can rescue her from the clutches of an aut with an evil eye, they have done every thing up to and including calling out the Brazilian cavalry led by Jerry Colonna.—S.
