UNITED STATES OF CHINA.

Those who founded here a republic along strong democratic lines died without any idea of the magnitude of the things they had done. Over 200 governments have been modified to conform to some or all of its principles. Today there are many more republics than monarchies, and many of the latter are democratic in spirit. The climax would come if China, the oldest of absolutisms, should become the United States of China. How strange it would sound to our ears to hear "President Yuan Heng of China," or "President Sun Yat Sen!" Still this is exactly what the revolutionary party proposes. The inspiration is direct from the fountain head, America. The impressive thing about the Chinese rebellion is that it is now developing in that its organizers and leaders are all men who have either lived in this country as students in colleges and universities or as coolie laborers. We have been inclined to revile them, because we have not known the Chinese. But they have come to love this country; not, of course, for its people or their inconsistencies, but for those broad, liberal principles for which the government stands. We have always regarded China as a great feudal state, and so it is, but its history shows that public sentiment has always been a great factor, and those who know the Empire best know that there is a general democracy that is not found in European monarchies. STOMACH DISTRESS INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA VANISH

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Pape's Diapepsin, and realize not only immediate, but lasting relief. This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards. If your meals don't sit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion. Get from your pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors. Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there. Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store. These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

TO ERADICATE TIP EVIL.

The travelling men have power to reform, if not to eradicate, the tip, if they will go at it right. There are in this country on the road at least half a million travelling salesmen, and they are worth to hotel men not less than $1,000,000 a day. Let every man of them say face to face to every hotel proprietor that they will pay no tips and do what they say. If the help decline to render service without extra pay, a half-dozen good, strong complaints over the counter will do some good, and these repeated half a dozen times, in the course of a week will do a whole lot of good. If the help do not like the pay the proprietors give them they can quit or they can organize and demand a fair reward for their services from their employers. This personal method of correcting abuses is not pleasant, but it is the only way that can be successful. General organizations and circulars and threats and all that sort of fighting amounts to nothing. If the best hotel in a town can afford to ignore the travelling men, then the travelling men can combine on another hotel, and by their patronage and rooting for it on the road build it up into what they want. This has been done frequently for other causes than tipping, and the "best hotel" has learned in serious loss that there is a limit to hotel abuses of patrons.

If travelling men will refuse to pay tips others will follow, and it will not be long until hotel proprietors pay their help out of their own pockets, instead of the pockets of their patrons.

TINY FOLK WHO WERE PETS OF ROYALTY.

One of the most celebrated dwarfs of past times was Jeffery Hudson, who was born at Oakham, Rutlandshire, England, in 1619. At 8 years of age, when the Duke of Buckingham took him under his protection, he was only 18 inches high, which he did not exceed until he reached the age of 30, when he sprang up to 3 feet 9 inches, which he never exceeded. Soon after the marriage of Charles I, he was presented to the queen, by whom he was kept for the amusement of the court, once being served up as a venison pie. When the pie was opened out stepped Jeffery in all the dignity of his 18 inches, and made a courtly obeisance to the astonished and delighted queen, who, in response to the little man's appeal to be taken into the service, promptly granted the request. In a duel that he fought his antagonist at first took the affair as a joke and appeared on the ground armed only with a squirt, which so enraged the little man that a real encounter with pistols was arranged, resulting in the David killing the Goliath. Hudson died at the age of 63, while in prison for his alleged connection with the Popish plot. No less celebrated was Richard Gibson, a dwarf who came into the world four years before Hudson. His ability as an artist was a high order. He married Ann Shepard, court dwarf to Queen Henrietta Mary, the King giving away the bride and the queen presenting her with a diamond ring. Waller, the court poet, wrote one of his pretty sets of verses on the occasion. The marriage turned out a complete success in every way, and the little couple had nine children, five of whom were of fully ordinary stature. Gibson lived to be 75 years of age, his good lady surviving him for 15 years. Another notable dwarf was Joseph Borulwaski, the Pole, of whose debut an interesting tale is told. As a boy of 15, when he was just one inch higher than a two-foot ruler. Borulwaski was presented to the Empress Maria Theresa, who was so charmed by his good looks and grace that she seated him on her lap and gave him a hearty kiss. To the queen's question as to what he considered the most interesting sight in Vienna, the dwarf replied: "What I now behold, so little a man on the lap of so great a lady." This speech rendered the little fellow a great favorite. He became a special favorite of Stanislaus II, who took him to England and introduced him to George III, and for more than half a century Borulwaski made his home at the English court. The dwarf who at his tallest was a yard and three inches, had a sister whose head just reached her big brother's shoulders. Borulwaski was not only a handsome and courtly man, but a scholar of repute. He lived in five reigns, and was laid to rest in Borulwaski was not only a handsome and courtly man, but a scholar of repute. He lived in five reigns, and was laid to rest in Dunham in 1837, side by side with the Falstaffian Stephen Kemple. A most curious specimen of the freaks of humanity was given to the world in the 17th century, when, on June 3, 1674, Matthew Buchinger appeared upon the scene, sans either hands or legs. In addition he was only 29 inches high. All these disadvantages notwithstanding but probably on account of them he was eagerly sought after in the matrimonial market, and married no fewer than four times, enriching the world with 11 children.

This tiny man was a musical genius of no mean order, being proficient on a variety of instruments, ranging from the flute to the bagpipes, having by his own ingenuity invented a means of overcoming his physical drawbacks. He was also an expert conjurer, a good draftsman and a rapid writer. A still smaller dwarf was Wybrand Loikes, the son of a poor fisherman, who was born in West Freeland in 1730. He became a watchmaker at Rotterdam, showing more than usual ability in his craft. He married a woman of ordinary size, and they had three children.

When he had reached his 60th year his business failed and henceforth he got his living, and a good one, too, by turning himself into a show. After making a good collection of gold coins in his new avocation, he eventually found his way to London. Here he obtained an engagement at Astley's amphitheatre, but soon returned to his native place, where he spent the remainder of his life in ease and comfort. At no period in his earthly career did Loikes exceed 56 pounds in weight, or reach a higher stature than 2 feet 2 inches.

Though many of the famous dwarfs of old times were accomplished in various ways, good looks were generally wanting among them. An exception however, was the case of Mme. Teresa who was known as the "Corsican fairy." She first saw the light in Corsica in 1743. At the age of 20 she was exhibited in London, when she was one of the most attractive beauties ever seen. With perfect symmetry of person were combined sweetness of temper and a highly developed brain. In fact, she was a perfect Liebig of charm and culture, and eminent authorities pronounced her to be the most wonderful specimen of human nature that had appeared up to then.

She measured 31 inches exactly, and she turned the scales at 26 pounds. She was a giant in weight compared with Nicholas Feny, better known as Babe, who, at birth, was nine inches long and weighed 12 ounces—he never attained a greater weight than eight pounds. When 18 months old she commenced to talk, and at the age of 2 years began to walk—she was suckled by a dwarf goat. When she was 20 inches high and 5 years old she was adopted by King Stanislaus. During his whole life Babe's nearest approach to human reason can only be described as animal instinct. At 21 he was quite an old man and when he died in 1764 he was 33 inches high and withered like a skeleton.

"What All the World's a Seeking!"

Article No. 1

THE ANSWER IS EASY,—MONEY! It may sound sordid or even sinister, but whether the search be sordid or sinister or in vain depends upon the seeker. Money itself has no qualities. It is merely the universal medium of exchange, without which we can do—NOTHING. And since it is the universal necessity, the race for it has also become universal, with the goal seldom to the swift.

It is those who have failed in the race that have invented all the latter day doctrines of social inequality, and the injustice of modern economic conditions. And there are very few of these doctrinaires who would not lay their theories a willing sacrifice upon the altar of the Goddess of Fortune, if only she would smile upon them. But, despite all the doctrines and all the theories, the practical fact remains insistent, that money is man's chief material necessity.

The practical question these days is how to make money the surest and quickest. The answer here is also easy. The surest and quickest way to make money is through those enterprises that create wealth.

Western civilization will serve as a ready and convincing illustration. The wealth of the two great American nations, Canada and the United States is enormous,—almost beyond calculation. Yet all of this incalculable wealth has been created in a single century. And at the dawn of the Nineteenth Century, the stake was all there, any part of it ready for the man who had the vision and courage to claim it.

This is but a nation-wide and century-long illustration of what has even today a personal application. There is yet an Empire to build, with its cities and railroads and mills and merchant places. And there is yet the opportunity for the man who will, to have a part in its building. There is a stake as great as the Eastern Provinces, or the Mississippi Valley, waiting for its claimants. And that Empire which is now in the making is Western Canada.

Here in this new Empire, is the richest soil, the finest timber, the greatest and most varied wealth of minerals, and the most magnificent waterways in all the known world. No one who knows Western Canada doubts but that in the Empire upon which the sun never sets, this is the Land of Opportunity.

The story of the future industrial development of Western Canada can all be told in one word:—Organization. It is a national problem, the Organization of this new land. And never in all the history of Industrial development has that magic Counterfeign of Twentieth Century progress deeper, significance than in its application to Western Canada today.

The Industrial Organization of Western Canada includes these elements:

- 1. The Natural resources of the West.
2. The Capital of the East.
3. Management, in which the whole world will be laid under tribute.

It is because Capital has never had such opportunities, nor the Genius for Organization such a field, that the Capital and ability of the British Empire are turning today toward this new land of opportunity.

And Capital has a different application in Western Canada. It is not Centralized Capital that is being invited, but the smaller contributions of individuals. For Western Canada is destined to be the Empire of Individualism. And the spirit of individual opportunity breathes in the air of this new land. It is the call of the men of the West to the men of the East: "Come over into Macedonia and Help Us."

What this opportunity means will be well illustrated in a story which will be told in this space during the next five days. It is the story of one of the greatest Industrial Institutions of the West, which is now rapidly rushing to conclusion. It is the story also of an Organization Enterprise that has no parallel in Canada or the United States. Here is the story told without names or details:

A few years ago two young men, Western Scouts of fortune, journeyed by pack horse one hundred and fifty miles from a Western outpost town, in search of—they knew not what—anything that could be conjured into coin. They found a vast deposit of a certain mineral which enters into the manufacture of an almost universally used commodity. They staked these claims and waited. For another mineral also was needed for this commodity.

A few years later, a pioneer railroad that was pushing its way westward, passed over the very heart of these claims. In approaching this property, the builders of the road made a cut through a little musking lake, that was higher than the surrounding country. When the lake was drained, a huge deposit of the second required mineral was revealed. And the two young men, who had now added four others to their Company, staked this claim also. Meanwhile, the little outpost town had grown to a thriving city. Another railroad had projected its line westward, and right where these claims lay, this other transcontinental was only one hundred and fifty feet from its older rival.

Then came an Organizer. The whole proposition was thoroughly investigated, it was determined that this universally used Commodity could be manufactured from these two material at a profit, due to peculiar local conditions,—of more than two hundred percent, on the cost of manufacture. A great Company was formed. The Lieutenant Governor of a Western Province became its Chairman. The best business men of the community became Directors. More than Four Hundred Thousand Dollars of Capital was subscribed in a city of thirty thousand people. A great manufacturing plant of twenty buildings was commenced. A wealthy capitalist who had retired from business put on his workman clothes again and took up the organization of a model workmen's town. One hundred men are now employed in building this great mill. All of this was done without the co-operation of a single man of great wealth. And now the co-operation of Canadians everywhere is being invited upon these representations:

- 1. That the shares will advance from $10 (their present price) to $150 (much less than their ultimate value) within a year.
2. That the great factory will be in operation in October next and will pay dividend of more than 25 per cent. to the shareholders of the Company.

This is the first chapter of this Industrial Romance of the New West for the first of which the best men of a great Western Province will vouch. There will be like here chapters and they will appear in this space during the five remaining days of this week.
