

Echoes from Torch Day

Incorporated towns in King's County, Georgetown, Souris and Montague were right to the fore at the Torch Day celebration Tuesday evening. Mayors of those towns and others connected with the war loan drive were present on the platform during the ceremonies at the Exhibition grounds. The Mayors brought with them the signed miniature scrolls which were flown from Summerside yesterday along with the Torch.

Georgetown sent in a very nicely decorated car and numbers of Souris, Montague and Georgetown people helped by their presence towards the grand success of the celebration here.

The Charlottetown Male Chorus, seated in a decorated float and dressed in white trousers, scarlet jackets and white caps, were one of the "features" of Tuesday afternoon and evening. Their singing in the choruses was highly spoken of by everyone and when they took part in the parade, following the troops around the race track, they received unstinted applause. Charlottetown can be proud of its well trained and highly musical Male Chorus.

The Exhibition Grounds came in for many compliments and the Bomber Crew, members of the British and Australian Air Force, and visitors from aboard including visiting soldiers considered this Province fortunate indeed in having such a valuable, well situated property capable of seating so many people and having such fine accommodation for a large number on the stage. Very few cities in Canada can excel the Exhibition Grounds here for the purpose of a celebration.

The five who said they saw him entering the Brody home were Alex Thomas, Joe McDonald, Lena Budze, Marguerite McDonald and Jessie Budze, who said they were gathered in a yard about 75 feet from the spot.

They said they heard at least five reports that appeared to be shots while the officer was in the house. The sounds were accompanied by "snarks."

Police Officers Allan McVicar and George Thomas testified they arrested Frost when he entered the Brody home in uniform while they were there investigating.

Police said tonight they had not traced the gun with which the shooting was committed.

Court Reprimands

as the next case (the King vs Pansy MacLeod, an appeal from conviction under the Prohibition Act) arose out of the same circumstances. The evidence taken in the first case would apply to both.

When Mr. Justice Arsenault opened the afternoon sitting the Prohibition case was called. R. B. Bell, counsel for the appellant, was present but counsel for the Crown was absent. After waiting for about ten minutes, the presiding Justice told the Deputy Prothonotary to go into his office and telephone to Mr. G. St. Clair Trainor, Assistant Crown Prosecutor, and to him to come to the courtroom. The latter informed the Prothonotary that he was not going to appear.

"Wanted in Court"

When Mr. Justice Arsenault received this information he instructed Sheriff John McEwen to bring his officer to go to Mr. Trainor's office and inform him that he was wanted in Court, and also the Attorney General. Mr. Trainor, however, returned shortly after with the Assistant Crown Prosecutor.

When Mr. Trainor took his place in the courtroom, he was asked for an explanation by the presiding Justice. Mr. Trainor said that he had been "directed by the Attorney General" that he "need not appear" in fact not to appear. He also explained that the Attorney General was not in the city so far as he knew.

On receiving this answer, Mr. Justice Arsenault said, "The Attorney General will have to appear and explain why such instructions were given."

Continuing, he said that he would not have any contempt of Court and added that, in not appearing, Mr. Trainor had entered the Court and "must explain his position," also the Attorney General must do the same. He declared that he would not "permit anything like this to happen in the Court" and added that there were certain courtesies due the Court and Mr. Trainor would have to apologize.

Apology Accepted

Explaining it had been understood that as the case to be heard arose out of the same circumstances and facts and that the same judgment would be given, it was not thought necessary to appear, Mr. Trainor apologized to the Court. The apology was accepted and the case then called.

Mr. Justice Arsenault said that he had forgotten to say anything about costs in the Excise case disposed of in the morning. In view of the fact that the appellant had taken parcels from unknown parties, he would not allow costs.

He also allowed the second appeal without costs, when Mr. Trainor agreed that the same evidence would be accepted as in the Excise case.

The Court's Prerogative

Referring again to the non-appearance of the Crown counsel, Mr. Justice Arsenault said that at the first opportunity the Attorney General must appear before the Court and explain why the instructions were given. He added that instructions should be taken from the Court and not from anyone else. Speaking to Mr. Trainor, he said, "To instruct you not to appear at all is not the courtesy due the Court." He added that it was the dignity of the Court he was thinking about.

The Court adjourned until 11 o'clock Friday.

At the opening of the session yesterday morning, Frederick Phillips and Earl Lund, charged with murder in connection with the death of Peter J. Trainer, were arraigned.

They pleaded "not guilty" and said they would be ready for trial next week.

The prisoners were not represented by counsel. On the suggestion of the Attorney General, Mr. Lester P. O'Donnell was appointed by the Court as counsel for the prisoners. Mr. O'Donnell then made application to the Court under Sec. 839 of the Criminal Code for particulars.

GRAND JURY REPORT

The following report was submitted by the Grand Jury at the Supreme Court sitting yesterday:

To the Honourable A. B. Arsenault, Presiding Judge, and Associate Judges:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIP: We the Grand Jury appointed for the June 1941 Sittings of the Supreme Court beg leave to submit the following report on our inspection of the public buildings and institutions:

THE QUEENS COUNTY JAIL

We found that there are 13 males confined here; we found the building in good repair; the grounds kept in good order; sanitary equipment clean and tidy; Mr. Dwyer, (the Keeper) and his assistant and help are carrying out their duties satisfactorily. The food is good and sufficient. We would recommend that some new cutlery be supplied. Also that the spouts and conductors be checked over and needed repair.

FALCONWOOD

There are confined in the institution 131 female patients and 139 male patients, making a total of 270. We found those persons housed in separate buildings and made an inspection of both buildings. We found the buildings to be in good condition, clean, sanitary and comfortable. The food supplied was found to be of splendid quality; the kitchen and store room were also found to be in a satisfactory condition. The fire protection and equipment was found to be apparently efficient. Dr. Murdoch, Superintendent, Dr. MacLaughlin, and Matron Mrs. Dignan and other members of the staff are to be highly commended for the general appearance and conduct of the institution. We were shown the new refrigerator plant and also the new laundry and recreation hall under construction, both of which should prove a valuable addition to the institution.

There was a pressing need for additional outside quarters for the nurses and staff which would mean an additional building.

INFIRMARY

This institution was visited and inspected. Mrs. Garrick the Matron has a wonderfully well-managed home for the inmates; 83 males and 100 females are housed here. The conditions under which these people live would appear to leave little to be desired. The building

Fighting Ships Deadly Ash Can Poor Fish Bait

Young British Tars Found U. S. Girls a Little Different but "Lease-Lend" Gadgets Fine.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
Associated Press Staff Writer

ABOARD H.M.S. "AT SEA" (AP)—"Release depth charge!" The order came down from the bridge of our lend-lease ship. The British tar at the racks on the stern pulled a plug, and the ash can of death to submarines splashed into the ocean.

We put on a burst of speed while the bomb was finding the deep level where it would burst automatically from pressure. I braced myself for an explosion.

I got the surprise of my life. I heard a noise like a distant shotgun firing in a foggy November field. A sort of a "boom." In a minute or two I saw a great area of the ocean being lit up suddenly. There was a shimmering, rapid vibration on the surface, like heat waves only faster and mushier.

That was all.

"What?" I asked. "No explosion?" "No," explained the officer at my side. "Not at that depth. Nor fish, either." He was looking over the side, obviously disappointed at bringing up no fresh fish for supper.

Nor was there any submarine, for we were just practicing with American depth charges. Our sonar beam was putting our quarry through the paces of submarine attack, our last drill before I was to leave the ship at an Eastern Canadian port.

I was glad that for the crew's sake I thought they needed a respite, even though they never seemed to mind the pace. We had zig-zagged ourselves seasick. We had signalled ourselves blue in the face. We fired practice rounds frequently, did 45-degree starboard turns.

Embarrassing Indeed

Now we were about to get a rest. I went below, asked my cabin boy to pack me up when he had a free moment.

"Davey," I asked, "what did you like most about America on your brief stay with us?" "The big cities. They were fine. Life seems to begin at midnight."

"And how about our girls, Davey?" "They're a bit fresh, don't you think, sir?"

"Fresh?" "I've seen them roll their stockings in the street, sir." Davey was embarrassed.

He and the other lads who kept the warzone shipshape and fed the crew obviously were tickled pink with their American ship. What impressed them most was the gadgets.

"There seems to be a gadget for everything except your initials," he said, "and you're likely to get them clipped too if you don't mind out."

Our food was well prepared, extremely clean, and less greasy than the fare on most American warships. Outstanding was their standard curried rice with chutney, though it's hot enough to scald a fellow.

Coffee and Grog

The coffee? Let's skip it. They tried very hard, but they just don't know what to do with coffee. The big coffee percolator—a standard fixture in the crew's quarters of every American warship—was soon being used to distill cocoa.

British officers liked American desserts better than their own. They wished they could get coffee the American way. But they didn't like U.S. cigars very much, thought they were a bit strong. I thought the same thing about their.

Their three fingers of grog every night—or the equivalent in pay, about $1.50 a month. Nearly half the men prefer the pay to the rum. When I tasted the stuff, I agreed with the men who took the pay.

I couldn't find a soul with a complaint against the lend-lease vessel. I was in luck. I was in luck.

"Pess up," I said to one of the officers. "Isn't there one single thing you don't like about this ship?"

"Well, if you put it that way," he said, "I own the bunks in the cabin are a bit too comfortable."

"Too bad," I sympathized. "Oh," he replied, "I remedied that well enough. I stuck a board under the mattress. Now I sleep like a babe."

PAINFUL ACCIDENT—A very painful accident occurred yesterday afternoon at Klnlock farm, Southport, owned by Mr. Frank B. Clarke, the victim being an employee of Mr. Clarke's, Mr. Daniel MacKinnon, 25 Elm Avenue, city, who suffered a loss of one eye and severe flesh wounds in the face. Mr. Clarke, assisted by Mr. MacKinnon, was using a shotgun to destroy rats in the pig-house of his farm. Three of the rats were thus disposed of. A shot fired at the fourth rat, while Mr. MacKinnon was chasing it with a stick in the direction of Mr. Clarke, rebounded from a concrete floor and struck Mr. MacKinnon in the face. He was driven immediately by Mr. Clarke to the P. E. I. Hospital, where his right eye was removed and his other injuries dressed. An examination revealed that the left eye was undamaged. Mr. MacKinnon formerly lived in Canoe Cove, and is well and favourably known. His condition was reported to be good by hospital authorities last night.
