First War Bond To Be Redeemed

OTTAWA Oct. 16 — The next block of First War loan bonds to be called for redemption will bear the call letter "A." The letter "A" was drawn by the Minister of Finance, Hon. Douglas Abbott, today at Ottawa according to the terms of the issue. All bonds bearing this letter are called for redemption on the 1st of February 1949 and will not bear interest after that date.

First War loan bonds were issued on February 1st, 1940 and terms of the issue provided that twenty per cent of the loan would be redeemed on February 1st in each year from 1948 to 1952. The drawing for the first twenty per cent of the issue to be redeemed took place in October 1947 and established that all bonds of the issue bearing the letter "E" would be redeemed on February 1st of this year. The drawing which took place today thus makes a total of forty per cent of the bonds subject to redemption.

It was pointed out that those holding First War loan bonds should examine them to discover whether they bear the call letter "A." Owners of such bonds should present them for redemption on or after February 1st, 1949 with all interest coupons of August 1st, 1949 and later date attached.

Newsman Received By Pope Pius

By J.M. ROBERTS, Jr.
(Associated Press News Analyst)

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Oct 15 — (CP) —Pope Pius was tired, both by many recent speeches and by the burden of worry caused by the persecution of his prelates in the Communist sphere.

But it took me only a few moments with him to realize that it was only a temporary tiredness which would be overcome by rest.

He greeted me graciously and waved away my apologies for taking his time during a very busy period.

He asked me to sit down. Perhaps there was something of command about it. I wasn't sure. He knew I was not a member of the Catholic Church, for I had not knelt to kiss his ring. But he presented me one of the rosaries, made at the Vatican, which covered a small table behind him.

I knew already that he was not to be quoted, directly or indirectly, after this interview. I made it clear that I understood this, and then told him what particular aspects of world affairs I was most interested in.

He talked about those aspects animatedly and with an awareness which should not surprise anyone familiar with the sources of information at his command, yet which somehow does surprise anyway. Particularly the way he understands what one needs to know.

His diction and thought are both clear. Later I remembered that he was speaking, for my benefit, what is to him a foreign language. And that he also speaks 26 other languages. But at the moment I was too intent to notice.

A little mannerism which is hard to describe, a business of a period in speech, let me know that he had remembered his busy schedule. As I prepared to leave he gave his good wishes in a fashion which made me feel that he was accompanying me to the door, which he did not.

Outside a secretary in red robe protested because I had taken too much time. But I didn't care. I had what I had come for, and the Pope didn't seem to mind.

OCTOBER

He comes in faded colors
The god of travel
To show us what to do
On pleasure rounds.

To draw us to the hills
To see the maples
Put on their garb
Of varied reds and browns.

He knows that once we go
Is to repeat it,
To wonder at the change
From day to day
The kelediscope of colors
In the valleys is proof
Again of God's most wonderous way
