plant in expectation of a big season this summer and fall. 312 box stalls are being finished, also the new grandstand, and every convenience to make men and horses comfortable. Joseph F. Coates, of Goshen, New York, track expert, has been employed by the association to supervise the track improvements which include 4 1/2 miles of road improvement, a cinder emergency track with stretches 490 feet in length. There will be no start at the quarter-pole on the back stretch, instead the horses will come out of a chute when the distance is three-quarters mile dash or mile and a quarter. The home stretch will have added illumination making the finishes as plain as daylight. An elaborate system of pari-mutual betting machines will cater to the enormous number of people who attend.

There is a possibility of a fast trotter, Mr. Harriman 206, by Pluto racing at the winter meeting in Toronto and winning two or more races. In 1939 he started in eight races and won four of them. We have no idea how he will do, except his winning feet on the ice.

Today we begin the publication of interesting recollections in the life of Harry C. Jewett, Frederickton, N. B. (now located in Nelson, B. C.). He has been a long career as a horseman and among others he has raced, our readers will recall Eddie McGraw 210 1/4, Border Prince 212 1/4 and The Express 206 1/4. In London, he was the Canadian Press parliamentary correspondent.

—From boyhood on the farm I was always fond of horses. I used to put the harness on them when I was so small that I would have to drag the harness and climb up on the manger to get it on. For a chance to drive the team I would tramp behind the narrow day till I was so tired I could hardly crawl.

—After I was of age, circumstances brought me to town and the retail grocery business. Of course, I had to have a delivery horse, later several of them. I often wished I could remember each and all of them, but some outstanding ones I will never forget. I made many sales and trades—some to the good, but not always. One I remember being I bought from a Baptist minister, very cheap; so cheap that I was suspicious there might be something wrong. We were not long in finding out.

—One morning after being hitched to the wagon he refused to come out on the street. After considerable coaxing he went on. It seemed like after he got acquainted with us he got worse. One morning he balked again. We unhooked him from the wagon and tried to see if he would go out to the street that way. He would walk out nearly to the sidewalk and stop. When touched with the whip he would run backwards. There happened to be a small pile of lumber beside the driveway and I steered him straight for it. He was moving so fast that his hind heels caught and tripped him so suddenly that he made a complete somersault backwards. He was so surprised he lay there for some time. Then he sheepishly got to his feet. While he still seemed dazed we hitched him to the wagon. When asked to go on he quietly walked to the street, and he never was known to balk afterwards. Later on when I told the preacher about the balky horse, he very innocently replied: "Yes, I know; sometimes he would stop on me, but never on leaving his own barn; 'twas always on leaving the barn of one of my neighbors and I thought maybe he did that because he had been better fed there than in his own home." Maybe so, perhaps he told the truth.

—Later on, I bought from the Deacon a beautiful little gray gelding that would never learn to back up. As he was perfect in every other way, we forgave him, and kept him on the delivery for a long time. (To be continued)

Ford Plant Oil Tank explodes
DETROIT, Jan. 17.—(AP)—An oil tank exploded at the Ford Motor Company's big Rouge plant this afternoon, and investigators for the Department of Justice hastened to the scene to determine whether saboteurs were responsible. Fire following the blast cast up a great smoke cloud and threatened adjacent oil tank. The suburban Dearborn fire department and the company's own fire crew quickly extinguished the blaze. Damage was not great.

While government investigators made inquiries, the theory was expressed that a spark from a cracked pipe might have caused the explosion.

Covered Dramatic Scenes in England
AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Jan. 17.—(CP)—J. F. Sanderson, of the London Bureau of the Canadian Press, a reporter who has interpreted the British scene to his fellow Canadians for the last 2 1/2 years, arrived here today aboard a British liner from England.

He immediately boarded a special train which will take him on the first leg of his journey to his new post, that of special writer on foreign affairs in the New York Bureau of the Canadian Press.

Sanderson's first few hours on Canadian soil were bustling ones. Standing in a pool of baggage being torn apart by a customs official, he read mail and answered messages delivered him by a C.P. messenger before hurrying to the train that will take him to Montreal and his wife and three children.

In London, he was the Canadian Press parliamentary correspondent.

Assortment of Civilians make Atlantic trip
AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Jan. 17.—(CP)—An assortment of civilians ranging from a former Canadian minister to Washington to a Hungarian-born countess who has been scrubbing floors after leaving the British liner that brought them across the Atlantic from Britain. Passengers said the voyage was made without threat of enemy action.

Hon. W. D. Herridge, the one-time minister, issued a statement shortly after he disembarked urging Prime Minister Mackenzie King to visit Britain because, he said, Mr. King must "fully understand what is happening" there.

England and America, he said, must build together the new world order which the people of Britain are "bravely setting out to build for the common man."

"Canada must make these facts plain to America. This is the great opportunity of the government of Canada to give leadership towards the new world order." But before Canada could lead, "the leader of the government must fully understand what is happening in England."

Fellow passengers of the former diplomat included several important personalities who have gladly given up class privileges to pitch into the war effort.

There was Phyllis Bentley, authoress whose latest book, "Manhood," deals with social and economic questions in Europe. She will make a lecture tour through the United States.

Miss Bentley has been an ambulance driver in Yorkshire.

Another authoress-arrival was Rosita Forbes. She will start growing food for Britain on Eleuthera, an island in The Bahamas, which she bought a year ago from the British Crown.

After the war, Miss Forbes plans to settle down to "a Robinson Crusoe life" there with a few friends. Negroes make up the population of the little Caribbean island, about 60 miles from Nassau.

The Countess of Listowel, Hungarian-born former journalist, will lecture across the continent on the political scene in Europe and the situation in England. Her husband, an Earl, has been a private in a medical unit for five months, and sits in the House of Lords in battle dress.

The Countess has scrubbed floors while working in a hospital and in first aid stations. Bombed out of their London home, she and her daughter have been living in a three-room cottage.

The countess appealed for all out aid from America, "but quick."

A lieutenant-commander of the United States navy, who will tell Washington what he saw while observing British sea strategy for the past three months. The officer, wearing civilian clothes, declined to reveal his name.

Numerous Britons sent to Canada on various technical and official missions.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—(CP)—Book-sellers have been hard hit in London's great fires. Some 25 publishers find their premises wholly or partially ruined. About 6,000,000 books, it is estimated, have been destroyed.

Tanilii cannot sell its vanilla drop and has nearly 50 tons in storage.

and as such he witnessed most of the dramatic scenes in the British House of Commons in the last few years, and with these as a base, he wrote the drama of Britain's patient efforts to avert war, and the British reaction to Hitler's European moves.

Fascist Soldiers Have 'enough'; Are bitter

(By Daniel Deluce, Associated Press Staff Writer)

SOMEWHERE OFF THE GREEK COAST, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A group of young Italians, their frayed uniforms still soiled with blood from the lost battle of Kilisura, are in a Greek prison ship nearing Piraeus.

Whispering below noise of engines, they curse the war, their sickness from bad Albanian water, their senior officers who let them be caught in a Greek trap. But they are glad to be alive.

Sixty hours ago Italian bombers nearly killed them all as they huddled in a dugout near the docks during a raid on a small northern Greek port.

Flying so high that they were mere silvery specks, the Fascist planes dropped more than 300 bombs.

Hugging the earth and sweating with the nervousness that even veterans feel when the bombs scream down, some of these young prisoners prayed repeatedly while buildings were smashed into matchwood a few hundred feet away.

When the attack paused at dusk they shuffled aboard the tramp freighter, carrying slabs of brown bread, moist white cheese and oranges the Greeks had given them. For these Alpine troops—among the finest in the Italian armies—this prison ship offered a welcome refuge.

Conscripts in the early 20's, reared from childhood under Fascism, the Italians arrived in Albania two days before Christmas and were thrown immediately against the Greeks in the Kilsura sector. Their resistance at the front line was tough, superior to anything heretofore shown by Blackshirt companies. Yet Greek charges broke them.

Now, on a voyage through the minefields, their war weariness was expressed in a single word: "enough."
