The Mystery Of The Singing Walls

"But in spite of Mr. Warburton's kindness, I hated him," continued Dr. Darnell. "For I always had burned into my brain in living fire the picture of my woman turning away from me to that man. There is no logic in it at all, no reason. Jealousy is the strangest of human emotions. Really, I hated him even after her death ten years before. For, as long as she lived, I always had the hope that, with advancing years, she would tire of her husband and come back to me. But now hope was gone. In the battle between us he had won."

"Love is curious. In most things a man is a good sport; plays the game fairly, and takes his beating with courage. In love, he will use every means to gain his end just so long as he wins. He will cheat, lie, deceive his pride. And he never accepts the hand of his successful antagonist. The game was one I had lost. My opponent had shaken my hand and given me his friendship. But, while I pretended to accept, I hated him, hated him, and when I saw him the image of Catherine in his arms sent the red flashes dancing before my eyes."

"I had some coming to see him, making him think I was his friend. Just why I should have done this, who knows? Probably the fascination we feel for those we hate. Probably because, when I saw him, the picture of her putting her lips to his loomed up with deadly vividness, and I saw her living. It was exquisite torture. I felt me weak and trembling. But I couldn't keep away."

"So gradually I became his best friend, although I hated him, and, as I was his physician, I would have poisoned him long ago if I hadn't been that he was my friend, and I had to live my sweatheart. For when I saw him, I saw her in his arms."

"In the meantime, I was becoming more and more successful. And it was not the happiest part of my success that his influence and influence had made much of it possible."

"But, with a large practice, came added expenses. I moved into an elegant apartment on Park avenue, and took my place as a fashionable society physician. Being a bachelor, and hardened and cynical about women, I had a long record of liaisons and affairs, and although my income was very large, the suppers and presents soon ate it up."

"And one day, Beatrice Hammond came to my office to consult me. As you know, she was very unhappy in her married life and the strain of existence with that rotter husband had broken her nervous system. She had no friends, no one to talk to in her misery, and she turned to me, her doctor, and poured out her troubles."

"Somehow, hard and cynical as I had become she touched me. I suppose her beauty had had something to do with it. In any event I honestly fell for the girl and gave her my interest and sympathy. As often happens, she fell in love with me, as lonely women without friends often fall in love with their physicians. She was beautiful, and I had never allowed her to believe I cared. And, although it was not love such as I have felt but once and will only feel for Catherine, still I did care, because her feeling for me was the most decent affection in the midst of a life of more or less roiling affairs that had come into my life since Mrs. Warburton's death."

"Almost daily she would come to my office and the tea hour went together meant a lot to us both."

"All of this time, my expenses were exceeding my income. To say of the heavy debts I had incurred I did what many other men have tried to do, and started to get something for nothing by speculating in the stock market, as nearly always happens, I soon lost all I had. But, as I was a successful practicing physician, one of the less reputable Stock Exchange firms lent me large sums on my credit. I then decided on a final throw and put all I could raise or borrow on Summerland Petroleum."

"At first I thought that I was going to succeed, for the stock rose steadily and I was getting on my feet. I had many thousands of dollars, but about ten days ago, the terrible slump struck the market and, in a short time later, I received frantic calls from my brokers, saying that unless I put up $50,000 more collateral they would have to sell my stock. This meant my complete ruin. I had raised money for everything I possessed, and I owed more than $200,000. My only hope was to hold the oil stock until it snapped back in price. I needed early $50,000 to keep it. And, although it cut me like a knife to do it, I went to Beatrice and asked her to help."

"She had $50,000 worth of bonds remaining of the hundred thousand her uncle had originally given her for a wedding present. Because Hammond had squandered half of her fortune, Mr. Warburton had insisted upon her depositing these bonds to her account with Brown Brothers & Sons, who were to hold them for her and place the interest opposite to her account. Mr. Warburton had warned her that, if she let Hammond touch these bonds or if she touched them herself, it would be as good as lost. Yet, when I told her my story, she never hesitated, but went right down to Wilam street, removed the securities and turned them over to me. Taking them to my brokers, I put them up as further collateral and was redressed with enough additional margin to protect my stock. I was saved, so I thought, for it seemed impossible that Summerland Petroleum would drop lower."

"For the last week the stock had remained stationary and I was in constant hope that it would rise. Then, last Wednesday, a bomb-

Bennie was digging a hole in the ground near by. He had his spade and hoe and was making the dirt fly.

"Mr. Woodpecker, you make a lot of noise when you dig," Bennie said.

"Tap, tap, tap, brrrrrr!" answered the Woodpecker.

"But I'd hate to have to dig a hole with my nose like you do, Mr. Woodpecker!" Bennie shouted.

HAIR OFTEN RUINED BY CARELESS WASHING

If you want to keep your hair looking its best be careful when you wash it with. Do not use prepared shampoo or anything else that contains too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is PRISCILLA DEAN Mulsified hair wash which has much to recommend it. It is pure and greaseless, and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified coconut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your drugist gives you Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

Utterly Discouraged

This Was the Condition of a P. E. I. Woman Before Taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"My illness began," says Mrs. M. J. Ahern, R. R. No. 2, Alberton, P. E. I., when my husband went overseas and I was left with the care of a farm and stock, with no help but that of a young boy. My health broke down and for the first time in my life I became utterly discouraged. I lost my appetite, had no strength, and was ready to have a crying spell any moment of the day, as the work loomed up ahead of me. A friend happened to speak one day of the good Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had done her and urged me to try them. I had not energy enough, or perhaps confidence, to do so, but she urged me to try them, and by the time I had taken them I knew they were helping me and was anxious for more. I continued taking the pills for nearly six months and by that time I had safely passed a critical period in my life, and regained my usual good health. To all overworked, nerve-racked women—and there are a great many of them—I still say, and at all times, take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I know you will regain your energy."

There are many troubles due to weak, watery blood easily overcome by a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The whole mission of this medicine is to purify and enrich the blood, and when that is done all the varied symptoms of anaemia disappear and good health returns. You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any druggist or by mail at 50 cents a box from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ontario.

EXPECTANT MOTHERS

Read Mrs. Menard's Letter. Her Experience May Help

Chatham, Ontario.—"I want to tell you how much good your medicine has done me. Before my baby came I felt so weak and run-down that I could hardly do my work. My head ached continually and I was so discouraged that I could cry from morning till night. I had another baby just one year and a half old and it gave me a lot to do. So I thought I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as I had read so much about it in the little books. I found a difference right away as my head was relieved and my tired feelings gone. My sister had been doing my washing and she continued doing it, as she said it might set me back if I started to do it again. It sure did help me and I had taken just two bottles when my baby came. He is a fine big boy, now nearly five months old. I am taking your medicine again and I am able to do my work all by myself now. I always recommend the Vegetable Compound to women, and especially to expectant mothers, as I believe they need help at those times."
