Mr. C. W. Nash, President of the Nash Motors Co., was in Toronto last week and speaking about conditions in the United States said:

"That it is quite correct that the United States is making too many automobiles. The lighter weight car is popular not only for its economy of operation, but for the facility with which it can be parked in the crowded streets. Mr. Nash said that they are building a highway two hundred feet wide, from Chicago to Milwaukee. He thinks that before long on main traffic roads outside of the big cities there will be two highways side by side each one used for traffic in the one direction only. He looks upon Canada as a wonderful country with a good future and complimented Ontario on its solution of the liquor problem by medium of Government Control. "That is real prohibition to my mind," said he, "The fact is that although we across the line are 'dry', we are practically paying the interest on your war debt through United States consumption of liquor from Canada."

"Police Magistrate O. H. Burgess of Peel County was appointed by Hon. W. E. Raney while the latter was Attorney-General of Ontario, Mr. Raney feeling that Mr. Burgess was the type of man who could and would enforce the Ontario Temperance Act (Prohibition)."

In view of these facts the opinion of Magistrate Burgess regarding the manner in which Prohibition worked there and the re-actions from its enforcements are of real interest.

Mr. Burgess says:

A LITTLE COURAGE

"In expressing one's views in connection with the Ontario Temperance situation, one needs to have a little courage when expressing oneself as unfavourable to the continuation of the operation of the Ontario Temperance Act. If he is a strong temperance man, as I am myself—never having taken a drink of liquor—he is, immediately aligned with the liquor interests. However, as it takes greater courage for a man like Archdeacon Cody, Bishop Thornlie, Sir Thomas White and others who take the stand, it should not require as much effort for me in my humble way to state my views and experience in connection with it."

"Having worked for the passage of the O. T. A. in the first instance and having felt for some months after that, it was doing the thing that it was contemplated it would do, it was with great reluctance that within a year or so I had to change my views. Acting as a police magistrate, whose duty it is to adjudicate upon these cases, that are brought before one, and to work with the police, whose duty it is to enforce the Act, one gets a better insight into its working than perhaps other people do in other walks of life. It would seem to me that the doctors and the police, and the magistrates are three sets of people that have this more forcibly brought to their attention."

CLEAN UP THE COMMUNITY

"I must confess that had there not been any Prohibition Law I would never have accepted a position as magistrate, and it was because of this that I had hoped to be of considerable use to the community in helping to 'clean it up'."

"As far as the enforcement of the Act is concerned, I found that the police were all too few to cope with the situation, because, in proportion to those—as I have been informed—who have been breaking the Act, not one or two per cent. are brought to trial. The practical side of enforcing legislation should be considered. I am satisfied no Government could enlist the services of enough honest men as constables to cover this province so that any noticeable decrease in drinking would be noticed. We have had three honest Attorney-Generals who have, no doubt, tried."

"Having for many years been traveling from the Atlantic to the Pacific, I had some idea of the working of the old system. These, of course, were not elevating. In travelling now, however, one finds wherever two or three are gathered together, that liquor is the subject of conversation, and in nearly every place where it is desired the bottle can be produced. My own experiences is that I have been offered more liquor since the O. T. A. has been in force than I was offered in the twenty years before."

"In most communities, no matter how small, you will find the illicit selling of liquor. It may be that you go to a house to get it or it may be delivered at your door during the night, like the milk. One needs only to be very optimistic to think the system just now proposed will mean that there will be immediately less drinking places. We can rest assured, however, that there will be less clandestine drinking, that the drinking will be confined to fewer places, and that there will be less lawlessness in the land. In most of the communities where there used to be one hotel or one saloon, that people would frequent and get liquor there is probably half a dozen, or a dozen illicit places where the same thing can be accomplished. It is also pressed upon guests in private houses, where it never was before."

LIQUOR RUNNING WILD

"My view of the matter is that the sale of liquor is out of control, and it is running wild, and it is necessary to try and bring it under control again. I cannot feel, after the experiment that we have had and after the results that have been in evidence across the line, that temperance will come from simply making beer legislation, and putting it up to the police officers to bring it about. We hear much about the bootleggers and nobody is in sympathy with them, but at the same time, there is a demand for their wares that make it profitable for some to be bootleggers, and it seems to me that this is the place, that the start for temperance has to be made. Decrease demand and you will soon decrease production and sale."

"My view of curtailing the sale of liquor and the consumption of liquor is through education, regulation and taxation; that an educational campaign be conducted through use of liquor. We hear nothing of these campaigns now, while it is in the hands of the police to enforce. We used to have our temperance meetings every now and again, and they did a lot of good, but we hear nothing of them any more, except when some election is coming on, and the issue is always confused between the political questions of the day and the temperance issues."

"The issue by some is classed as a contest between the wets and the dries. It is not so. It is simply a difference of opinion as to the best methods of bringing about temperance."

"Prohibition, undoubtedly has done a lot of good, but the reaction that has come and is becoming more forcible, will nullify the good it has done, unless the purchases are directed along some other channel, than from outlaws. My convictions are that the moral conditions of the whole people have more chance of improving by a controlled policy than by the present method."

A Ten Day Week

(By British United Press)
ROME, May 7.—An ingenious scheme for the reform of the calendar is receiving attention in Rome. The idea, which has been broached by Aldo Potesta, one of the University of Modena, is to eliminate the inconveniences created by the irregular number of days in the different months. According to his plan, all the months would be equalised at thirty days each, while five additional days would be obtained by the institution of a series of international holidays distributed throughout the year independently of month nomenclature. Thus January would be prefaced by New Year's Day; the day between February and March would be dedicated to Science; between April and May to Labour; between August and September to Liberty; between October and November to Justice. For Leap Year a day would be placed between June and July and dedicated to the Olympic games.

Where preferred, of course, the five feast days could be covered by existing national and religious holidays. Having thus divided each month into five decades, Potesta's project continues by making a ten-day week a distribution of seventy working hours—Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday to be nine-hour days; Thursday, eight hours; Friday, a holiday; Saturday, Uranio, and Nettuno; nine-hour days; Sunday, eight; and Sunday none. The year's working hours over thirty-six decades would come to 2,520, against 2,504 as at present, but this would be compensated by the recurring between-month international holidays. In the French Revolution calendar of 1793 the year of 365 days was divided into twelve months of thirty days each, every month being divided into three periods of ten days (decade), the last of each decade being a day of rest. Five days of the 365 were set aside for national festivals (Sans-cultoides). The system was abandoned in 1806.

An Oklahoma girl advertised for a husband, and landed one within a very short time. The advertisement cost $3. She paid the wedding expenses, $9. In less than a year the husband died, says the Atchison Globe, and left his widow an $11,000 insurance policy. Now will you admit that it pays to advertise?

Requisite on the Farm.—Every farmer and stock-raiser should keep a supply of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil on hand, not only as a ready remedy for his in the family, but because it is a horse and cattle medicine of great potency. As a substitute for sweet oil for horse and cattle affected by colic it surpasses anything that can be administered.

Useful in Camp.—Explorers, surveyors, prospectors and hunters will find Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil very useful in camp. When the feet and legs are wet and cold it is well to rub them freely with the Oil and the result will be the prevention of pain in the muscles, and should a cut, or contusion, or sprain be sustained, nothing could be better as a dressing or lotion.

Farmers Face Marketing Problem

(Special to the Guardian)
MONTREAL, May 10.—"I wish it were possible for every farmer in Canada to have the trip I have just completed" declared Mr. R. A. Wright, of Drinkwater, Saskatchewan, prominent stock man who returned to Montreal on Saturday evening last after three months spent in Great Britain and Denmark as a member of the Saskatchewan commission investigating marketing and production. "It is the most amazing eye-opener a Canadian farmer could have to see something of the efficiency which characterizes the methods of production and of marketing in the old land and to see something of how Canadian products are handled there. I am glad to learn that an effort is being made by the Canadian National Railways to provide a tour for farmers next year to visit markets in the old land and I hope as many as possible will take advantage of it. There is nothing that could be of greater educational value. We have a lot to learn along these lines, we are only at the beginning of the whole marketing problem. Britain is the greatest market in the world and the whole of Europe is aiming at that market. It is up to us to study the methods by which we are going to keep and extend the market for our products. There it is the biggest problem we have in agriculture today."

Early Symptoms of Tuberculosis

No. 9
3. LOSS OF WEIGHT.—An important early symptom of tuberculosis is a steady and unexplained loss of weight. A small loss of weight during the hot weather is normal, but under ordinary circumstances a loss of five pounds is important. "Make a habit of weighing yourself monthly."
4. SLEEPLESSNESS. You will find it takes you a long time to get to sleep, your sleep is disturbed and found not to be refreshing.
5. PAIN IN THE CHEST. Every pain in the chest means something. Find out what it is. A persistent pain in the chest, especially in the shoulder should be carefully investigated and not passed off as "Rheumatism" or "neuralgia" as at times it is the first manifestation of a dry tuberculosis pleurisy. Every pleurisy without acute disease should be considered tuberculosis until proven otherwise.
These symptoms should cause you to seek your doctor's advice at once.

JAPANESE OFFICIALS WAR ON FLAPPERS

TOKIO, May 10.—Bobbed hair, short skirts, facial make-up and other fashions of Western girls are under fire from the Metropolitan Police Board of Tokio. Following closely upon a round-up of Japanese flappers, largely office girls when more than 100 were told to go back to the kimono, and so stay off the streets, the police to-day arrested a representative of a British oil company on a charge of enticing Japanese girls to his house to teach them western customs. "Foreign men are blamed by the police for the westernization of the Japanese girl. It is a deplorable fact," according to T. Sakashita, chief of the foreign affairs department of the board, "that most Japanese girls of the stenographer and waitress class, have a blind admiration for foreign men, believing them to be wealthy and always kind to women. Consequently they adopt western clothes and bobbed hair to win the affection of foreigners. The Briton arrested to-day haughtily refused to answer questions, saying only, 'I am a white man.' The press is featuring the story."

Honeycomb Roof

(By British United Press)
LONDON, May 9.—For more than a hundred years bees have made their home in the roof of the 15th century farmhouse at Gomshall, near Dorking, Surrey, but no one, it is said, has ever tried to see their stores of honey. T. E. English, owner of Cole Kitchen Farm, Gomshall, who occupied the house, says that the weight of the accumulated honey is so great that the ceiling of a room where the bees have lived is giving away beneath it. He added: "The reason why nobody has ever tried to get the honey is that it would be necessary to take the roof off."
Proud but conscientious manager of office boy: "Apart from being rather backward at spelling, writing and arithmetic, you'll find John a good help in your office. I assure you—he's so cheerful!—The Passing Show, London."
