TEACHERS

There were examinations these must be based on text books. It was necessary, therefore, to teach the text book prescribed. He suggested that, until the text books were available, they might meet the difficulty by stressing other subjects.

Mr. Wynne made a motion to the effect that a recommendation be forwarded to the City Board of School trustees, that copy books be introduced up to grade VI, inclusive. It was seconded by Mr. Morrissey.

After some further discussion, the motion was adopted. The question as to the best hour of the day in which to teach penmanship was then considered. It was found that the larger group of the teachers took up writing in the later hours of the school day.

Mr. L. W. Shaw explained that Freeman, the best authority on the subject, was of the opinion that the most suitable time for this was in some period which followed immediately on play, but rather than a period in which there was great mental concentration, as writing, being more a motor activity than a mental one, served as a sort of relaxation after mental work.

Methods in primary reading were then considered. In the matter of the Phonic method vs. the Sight method, the teachers of grade III seemed to think that both Phonics and Sight words should be used.

Mr. Shaw pointed out that in the new Canadian first reader the Sight system was in use. He dealt with various other systems, pointing out that in many of these, the phonics extend through the grades. But they all started out with the Sight system, until a foundation of forty or fifty words was laid. Then the Phonic system should be used to build up a vocabulary on this. The two methods should then go on paralleling each other.

New Text Books Discussed - The new text books in relation to the course of studies was then discussed. On the chairman asking if any one had anything to say about the new Canadian History text books, Mr. Wynne remarked: "I have this to say, it's not here yet." In connection with this, the Chairman pointed out that in the grade VIII course there was a great deal of work to be covered.

Mr. Johnson said that a month had gone now, and the books hadn't come. He did not see how, in view of this, the work could be covered. Mr. H. H. Shaw, Chief Superintendent of Education pointed out that the old book was still available - also the old text.

Asked by the chairman what text the public school examination would cover, he said it would cover the subject as heretofore. The text book really didn't matter if they taught the subject.

Mr. Wynne said that, with all due respect he did not think it possible to cover the work in that way. Mr. Shaw might say it was a matter of indifference what text the examiners set their examination on, but the fact was, if that text was not available, the pupils would fail miserably.

Mr. H. H. Shaw said that, if that was the case, the examination questions should be changed. He suggested that the subject should be taught, not the text.

Mr. R. H. Rogers deplored the fact that work was so much conditioned by examinations. But where

Mr. H. H. Shaw said that, in his opinion the new text books were excellent, the difficulty was in the supply.

Mr. H. H. Shaw said the idea was that they should grant certificates only to those who were deserving of it.
