Sinking of Dutch Steamer Palembang

HARWICH, March 24.—The officers and crew of the Dutch steamer Palembang, which was sunk near Galopier Light in the Thames estuary Saturday, told their story to the local authorities Sunday. Although there were seven men on the look-out at the time of the first explosion none of them saw trace of a submarine. The first explosion did no material damage although a curious tremor shook the vessel. The captain gave instant orders to stop the engines and while an examination was being made ordered the crew to assemble amidship.

Five minutes later a second shock came, tearing a huge hole in the side. The ship went on her starboard side. The Palembang immediately began to sink by the head, and five minutes later had disappeared. Lloyd's report states that the Palembang unquestionably was torpedoed. What is considered of much importance on this point is the statement of the captain that after the first explosion the engines were reversed and then stopped and the vessel was at a standstill at the moment when the second explosion occurred.

It has also been established that the third explosion was not due to the bursting of the ship's boilers. All the injuries caused to the crew were from the third explosion.

Popularity of New Dictionary Grows

New Universities Dictionary Presents Subject Instructively.

One of the first things that must be learned by the young man or woman who sets out to become a thoroughly competent stenographer is the proper use of punctuation. Morris Croll, Ph.D., of the Department of English, Princeton Universities, has contributed an interesting and highly instructive chapter on this subject in The New Universities Dictionary being offered to the readers of this paper.

Professor Croll explains how the number of punctuation marks in common use has gradually increased with the development of the art of printing. Through the use of these signs the meaning of printed or written discourse is rendered clearer to the eye of the reader. How and when to use each of the twelve marks now employed is fully explained by Professor Croll, and the rules he lays down can be easily learned.

The remarkable success which has attended this dictionary offer shows that the people of this city appreciate the opportunity given them to secure at a nominal cost such a valuable educational work.

THE BILLIARD PLAYER'S DEFENCE.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the defendant, "I am charged with murder. It is true I struck the blow that resulted in the man's death. Some of you are billiard players. This man was an arm chair adviser and he insisted on telling me how to make every shot. That is all I have to say."

"Not guilty," was the verdict two minutes later.

AN ENGLISH RULING.

The cricket match was proceeding steadily, and the home team seemed to stand a good chance of winning until a stern young man with a square jaw took his stand at the wicket.

Then the leather began to fly! Three times the visitor sent the ball to the boundary, a stretch of long uncut grass, each time causing a great delay to the game.

At last a tremendous hit proved too much for the home umpire. "Out!" gasped the batsman. "How can I be out?"

"Don't ask questions," stormed the umpire. "Out I says, and out you go. That's our best ball you're knocking about, and it cost us five bob. 'Tain't likely we're going to let you lose it for us. We want it for August Bank holiday."

"I cannot live without you," he murmured with a sob. Said she: "I do not doubt you—you got a job?"

THE FIREMAN WITHOUT A HOSE

FLAMES in a great tenement imprisoned scores of persons in the apartments above. The Fire-chief ordered a hose played on the blaze. His men jumped to obey. Their wagon was empty. The hose was missing.

A missing word is a missing tool. The man who can't express his thoughts can't convey his ideas. If you don't know words, and how to use them, you are as bad of in business or society as a fireman at a fire without a hose. What chance would you stand against the fires of competition if you could neither write nor speak? You must keep apace with the language to keep up with the world. Education today is progressive—not confined to yesterday's language and activities. War in Europe and new discoveries have brought into general and proper use so many new words that all dictionaries published before this year are wholly out of date.

The Ch'town Guardian

Devoted to public welfare, campaigning for better education, always seeking to give men and women more opportunities for self-advancement, offers to its readers this new dictionary. Twenty-five dictionaries in one. Defines words used with special meanings in such activities as war, golf, yachting, music, baseball, etc. Full of information needed daily in home and office. Illustrated with pages and double pages of color and duotone. Large type, all new—easy on the eyes. Richly bound in flexible leather, lettered in gold.
