BRITONS MAY

The Germans recently said that British agents landed by parachute or motor boats, had a hand in stirring up unrest in the Netherlands.

Attacked In Italy. Another experiment was made when parachutists apparently attacked the water and power facilities in southern Italy.

The most ambitious effort along this line was the March 4 raid on the Lofoten Islands of Norway.

Hitler Vulnerable. The magnitude of Hitler's conquests make him vulnerable to sudden striking expeditions.

He must guard more than 4,000 miles of coastline from the North Cape in Norway to the Spanish frontier.

He is attempting to occupy an area of more than 100,000 square miles, including Germany.

His 70,000,000 Germans are trying to rule 124,000,000 people.

This is no easy job, even for the 4,000,000 soldiers he is estimated to have.

If he tried to watch every foot of the shoreline of Norway's 150,000 islands and deep fjords, he would have to string out lines along 12,000 miles in that country alone.

Ralston Says

(Continued from page 1) enlisting in the active army will be merged and carried out in the 39 camps already in use for the 30-day training periods, and in the 30 camps which heretofore have been used only for training the active army.

Col. Ralston said there were 102,000 men attached to the reserve army on March 17, 1941. They were volunteers who had joined what was called the militia and now is the reserve army.

He said to these reserve army units are 76,000 men who were trained in the 30-day training camps all ready held. However, a number of the 76,000 had enlisted in the active army.

Army Control of Trainees. Col. Ralston was closely questioned as to the extent to which the army has control over the trainees after their training period is ended and they return to civilian life.

Col. Ralston said the army has the same control over trainees as those who enrolled voluntarily in the militia units which now comprise the reserve.

Mr. Hanson said the question was whether or not the country was getting the benefit of the money being expended on trainees under the compulsory system.

Provide For Defence. The Minister said these men were being trained and would be trained under the new four-month system, in handling all the arms and equipment they would be called upon to use if Canada were invaded.

"The defence of Canada must visualize certain scales of attack," Col. Ralston said. "These scales have been weighed and considered."

"It is only in certain contingencies that these attacks can occur and we all realize that will be the situation if it do occur; that is, what additional forces will be available for that purpose."

"In the light of all that, the staff have advised me that we are making ample provision."

The four-month training plan was not only a National Resources Mobilization Act plan and not merely an active service force plan, Col. Ralston said.

"It is a Canadian Army plan," he added. "The plan will, itself, by training men who have enlisted for overseas service, provide training for the maximum forces needed overseas."

"At the same time, through its training of men who are called up for training under the Mobilization Act, it will provide us with the means to assist in creating a trained reserve force which, in addition to such active units as may be created, will be available to meet the possible demands of home defence."

Packed house Sees play under B.I.S. Auspices

Hilarious three-act comedy and outstanding specialties at Prince Edward Theatre.

"The Clancy's Meet the Show-Off" and a lot of other people as the Benevolent Irish Society staged their hilarious three-act comedy before packed houses at yesterday's matinee and night performances, staged in connection with the Feast of St. Patrick and the 116th anniversary of the B. I. S.

This year's show lived up to all advance notices. Rib-ticking situations enacted by perfection by well-trained, well-directed cast of local players enabled the play to live up to the high standard set by other plays in former years and the capacity crowds were more than satisfied.

The show was under the distinguished patronage of His Honor Lt.-Governor B. W. LePage and Mrs. LePage; Hon. Premier Thane A. Campbell and Mrs. Campbell and His Worship Mayor B. Koy Holman and Mrs. Holman. The performance was staged under the direction of Mrs. Arthur Henry and Mr. J. Pius Callaghan.

"The Clancy's Meet the Show-Off," written by George Kelly, is one scene of hilarity after another. The story is woven around a young Pennsylvanian who is continually telling the world how good he is. Especially is this so when he is at the home of the Clancy's, wooing one of the Clancy girls. He is in his love-making mood after marriage continues to strut and blow even though he and his wife are having a hard time to make ends meet.

The humor of things gets on Mrs. Clancy's nerves more and more. Tragedy then enters the scene as Mr. Clancy suffers a stroke and dies suddenly. Even then the "show-off" fails to be fully disturbed from his ravings - a traffic cop falls to shake him - but his wit and wit still to have faith in him although Mrs. Clancy can't seem to understand why.

Finally the climax of the show is reached. One evening just after Mrs. Clancy has settled up the account of her late husband's business and also has discovered that a son-in-law of hers has loaned the "show-off" one thousand dollars to save him from bankruptcy. She is told that when the "show-off" starts telling the boy how they will make a fortune on this she starts in laying down the law in no uncertain terms. Finally the son makes the startling disclosure that the "show-off" had had a lot to do with the success of the invention.

Mr. Clancy is not unduly disturbed by this but when the "show-off" starts telling the boy how they will make a fortune on this she starts in laying down the law in no uncertain terms. Finally the son makes the startling disclosure that the "show-off" had had a lot to do with the success of the invention.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

After the meeting had opened by the singing of O Canada, President Eugene Kelly, president of the Society, in his opening remarks stated that the Society was today celebrating its 116th anniversary.

During every one of these years just such a gathering had taken place on St. Patrick's morning. This year, he continued, the attendance was not as large as on former occasions, but this was not surprising in view of the fact that 42 ships of the First Great War pace, Lloyds's and the shipping Gazette said British, allied and merchant tonnage sent to the bottom was 4,922,257, more than 600,000 tons greater than in the first 2-1/2 years of the last war.

On the other side, German, Italian and Axis-controlled shipping losses were placed at 2,038,140 tons. The losses represented to Britain, her allies and neutrals 1,245 ships; to the Axis, 422 ships.

Listed British losses compared with 2,341 ships of 4,316,000 tons in the 30 months of the First Great War up to Feb. 1, 1917, just before the disastrous German submarine campaign of that year.

On March 13, the German commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland stated that German forces had sunk more than 9,000,000 tons of British and allied or neutral shipping.

At the start of this war, Lloyds' listed total British tonnage at 21,001,925, representing 8,977 steamships and motorships of 100 gross tons or more.

In addition, Britain obtained an undisclosed number of vessels of total tonnage of 12,320,685 under the flags of Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland and France at the start of the war.

The Lloyds' breakdown showed Britain has lost 757 ships of 3,171,273 tons in the present conflict; allied nations 193 ships totalling 875,202 tons; and neutrals 285 ships of 915,782 tons.

Included for the first time were losses in the Dunkerque withdrawal when Britain lost 72 ships totalling 280,556 tons and her allies 39 ships totalling 169,348 tons.

German losses known by name, Lloyds' stated, were 69 ships of 288,542 tons captured and 77 ships of 420,947 tons sunk since the outbreak of the war. In addition, Lloyds' estimated 129 German ships of 645,000 tons have been sunk.

Italian losses since Italy's entry into the war June 10, 1940 were placed at 38 ships of 179,619 tons captured and 21 ships of 137,932 tons sunk. An additional total of 63 ships totalling 315,000 tons, with names and exact tonnage unknown were estimated.

PLANE INSTRUMENTS. MELBOURNE - (CP) - The Australian National Airways has constructed a factory capable of overhauling 10,000 types of air instruments every year.

HALIFAX, March 17. (CP) - Second shipment of feed grain to the West, was unloaded here recently. The shipment was ordered in an effort to lash the high cost of feed in this province. The first shipment arrived last fall.

Represents the big appropriation, which comes up in the House tomorrow, the fire was "big" and was "still continuing." They declined further details.

In view of the fact that both Martin and Taber voted against the passage of the Lease-lend Bill, their stand on the appropriation made it obvious that the latter would go through by a much larger vote than did the program for which it provides the cash. Taber estimated that not more than 50 or 55 Republicans would oppose it.

He told reporters after the conference that while he thought many provisions of the Lease-lend Bill itself were "fantastic," Congress by passing it had fixed United States foreign policy and now must implement it with funds.
