League Sessions Open Thursday

Has by Guardian's Special Wire

OTTAWA, Jan. 19 — While the winter question and the Franco-British dispute over Alexander the two paramount problems ally scheduled for discussion, it believed probable tonight the British civil war would find its way to the agenda of the League of Nations council session starting here today.

Recalled that Alvarez, Spanish Foreign Minister, opened the night last December's discussion of his government's alleged grievances should arise. Whether he intends to or not remains problematical. In any event, certain aspects of the civil warfare will be brought to the council's attention.

Receives Letter Of Appreciation From Western Canada

In a relief car of vegetables assembled from the districts of Bedouque and Freetown, and shipped to the dried out area in Western Canada, T. J. Inman put his name and address in some of his sacks of potatoes donated, and he received the following letter.

Oxbow, Sask., Jan. 3rd, 1937

Mr. T. J. Inman, Summerside R.R., P.E.I.

Dear Friend— In starting this letter I must first express mine and my family's sincere thanks for the very generous Christmas present that you helped to send us.

The car landed here in good condition on the 26th of December. I unloaded it that day, and distributed it among the needy on the 29th. I had charge of the giving out, to see that every one got their share as a committee decided.

The potatoes and turnips were the best we ever got here. We can make good potatoes here when we get moisture, but we seldom get turnips fit to eat. The bags of potatoes that I got your name in are stored in my cellar to be distributed for seed in planting time. The conditions are very bad here, no crop for 7 years. Last year 1935 we raised lots of garden stuff but the rust ruined the grain crop; we sent out a lot of garden stuff a year ago to parts that had none.

We have had a fine fall cars running until after Christmas but they are stopped now. Temperature about 20 below this morning but we had one day in December 35 below, but the air is dry and we do not mind so below. This town is 16 miles from the U.S.A. border and we are very proud of our neighbors here. The dry area is very large in U.S.A. as well as in Southern Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba.

We are 3-4 of a mile from Souris river and the C.P.R. cannot get enough water now in that river or their engines.

Now we all get enough of something to eat, but clothing is hard to get for this cold weather. The Federal Government is doing better this winter for the people. Now once more let me thank you and all the people in the district for their real kindness. A friend in need is a friend indeed. Prices here; grain has been going up fast and vegetables are very high, potatoes $2.35 for 90 lb. sack, carrots 6 lbs. 25c, other articles according. However one good crop with a fair price would change things quickly. Hoping this reaches you and yours all well and enjoying yourselves.

Respectfully yours, Peter J. Gibbins, Box 180, Oxbow, Sask.

New Peace Moves In Auto Strike

DETROIT, Jan. 19—(AP)—Initiation of new peace moves to halt the paralyzing General Motors automotive strikes rested again tonight with Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan.

At Washington the Governor with "a definite plan of procedure in mind, conferred at United States Labor Department offices with Secretary Perkins and with John L. Lewis, whose committee for industrial organization is backing the automobile workers in their dispute.

A strike in one of the plants of the Birge Manufacturing Co., in Detroit, was settled today after an outbreak of disorder in which a "trotting picket line" of United Automobile Workers of America forced the company to shut down, despite a car gas attack during which police tried to break the line. The action was not directly related to the General Motors situation.

Seasonal Decline In Employment

(C.P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

OTTAWA, Jan. 19—A slight seasonal decline in employment during November, though decidedly smaller than the average since 1920, is reported by the Labor Gazette. The situation continued decidedly more favorable than any month of the years, 1931-33, in the Gazette states.

The employment index declined from 111 on Nov 1 to 110.1 on Dec. 1, based on reports from 10,106 employers whose payrolls were reduced by 8,571 from 1,063,548 on Nov. 1 to 1,044,969 on Dec. 1.

Trade unions felt a similar seasonal decline, reporting 12.7 per cent unemployed on Dec. 1, in contrast to 11 per cent in Nov, and 13.3 per cent in Dec. 1935.

Carleton and Vicinity

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McQuarrie of Searlestown, with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doull of Carleton, motored to Charlottetown on Tuesday.

Mrs. Kenneth Cameron of Cape Traverse has purchased the farm property of Mr. A. J. Newsome of Augustine Cove.

Mr. Daniel Ross and daughter, Miss Hattie Ross of Carleton, have moved into their new home on the Borden highway.

A barn on the property lately owned by Mr. Eugene McCabe at Carleton, with its contents including a quantity of hay and some machinery was destroyed by fire Monday evening. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Mrs. Harry Webster, Miss Doris Webster, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Carruthers of Augustine Cove motored to Summerside on Sunday to visit Mr. Vernal Webster who is a patient in the Prince County Hospital, convalescing from an operation performed last week by Dr. E. A. Bell of Cape Traverse.

With only a fair crowd in attendance at Borden rink Monday night and on heavy ice, a closely contested hockey match between Cape Traverse Bloodhounds and Borden Nationals resulted in a score of 3-2 in favor of the Nationals. Borden took the lead in the first minute of play when Oscar Campbell scored on an unexpected shot from the Bloodhounds blue line which caught the Cape Traverse team napping. In the second period Elmer McInnis of the Nationals shot a loose puck from behind the Cape Traverse net while the goalie, Carver, was down, the puck striking Harold Muttart's stick was deflected into the net. About four minutes later Claude McWilliams on a beautiful solo rush scored the opener for Cape Traverse, the period ending with both teams fighting hard. In the third period with Borden firing somewhat from the heavy ice Cape Traverse had the edge of play, Clint Howatt scoring for the Nationals and Claude McWilliams again scoring for the Bloodhounds on a neat pass from Bruce McWilliams. There was no further scoring but the bell found the Bloodhounds still pressing eagerly for the tying goal. The Cape Traverse kid-line composed of Marvin Sherrin, Wallace Muttart and Bruce McWilliams, none of them over seventeen years of age, played an exceptionally smart hockey, holding down Borden's senior combination for the greater part of the game which was cleanly played, only two penalties being handed out to Bud Howatt and Elmer McInnis, both of the Nationals. The referee was Reg. Phillips of Summerside. Following is the line-up.

New Support For Civil Aviation

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

OTTAWA, Jan. 19—New support for civil aviation is being provided by the Government. The 1937-38 estimate for maintaining and operating airways, airports and associated activities is $1,222,917.

This appropriation, made public when the estimates were tabled late last night, is $481,610 higher than that for the current fiscal year.

While the estimate for maintenance and operation is up, that for construction is down from $897,650 to $761,355. The program of building has advanced to a point where less money is needed, or that purpose, transport department officials explained today.

Meanwhile the Government is getting inquiries respecting proposed contributions to municipalities which intend improving their airports or have already done so.

Under a recent order-in-council the Government is empowered to contribute one-third of the cost to such municipalities, provided they are on the Trans-Canada Airway to be inaugurated next summer.

These grants are only to be made where a definite necessity is seen, however, and cost of buildings and hangars is not included in the order-in-council.

Reports are that part of the airway between Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal will be the first developed, so sites in the Western part of the country may receive first attention when contracts for improving public airfields are under consideration.

It is believed, however, arrangements may also be made later this year with municipalities in the Maritimes when the route east of Montreal takes more definite shape.

MEETING OF

by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce that the Dominion Government be asked to appoint a commission which "would fully and frankly review the economic difficulties facing the western provinces and would make recommendations to the Government on what is considered necessary and justifiable to remedy effectively any such economic disabilities that are found without prejudice to obtain."

The proposed commission would be similar to the Maritime Duncanson Commission behind which appointment the Chamber stood, the letter from the Canadian Chamber stated.

First speaker in the discussion on the proposed ferry service last night was Mr. Hector Compton of Belle River. He was much in favor of the project, he said. It would be rash to forecast what volume of traffic would be handled on the route but he felt that the future of the island would justify providing outlets for farm products.

The Comptons at Belle River operated a packet service on the Belle River-Pictou route for ten years from 1913 to 1923 and had a good trade. The death of three leaders made it necessary to discontinue some of the operations and the packet was abandoned. The difficulties experienced with the constant sanding of the Belle River Harbor was also a factor in the decision to take the boat off the service.

The trade was still there, the speaker said, and what would help two thirds of the province would help all the province. He did not think that people in the western section would oppose the proposed ferry.

A suitable location for a terminal could be found at Caribou, Mr. Compton believed. He knew the waters there to some extent as he had sailed into Caribou on different occasions.

Mr. H. H. Acorn, M.L.A., Souris told the meeting he was 100 per cent behind the project. He believed no man could visualize what a change a ferry service such as the one proposed would make in the business of the province in the next few years. The tourist possibilities were great but the commercial possibilities were equally great, the speaker said. The Montague-Sydney service for which a subsidy of $20,000 was paid annually, might be cut out as well as the present Pictou-Charlottetown service if the proposed ferry were put on the route.

Mr. L. H. Poole, Montague, believed that if the service were established most of the tourists who visit the Cape Breton National Park would travel through this province going either one way or the other.

Mr. R. E. Mutch declared that he believed the proposed service was the one big thing for the southern part of the province and that anything the Board of Trade could do to obtain the service should be done.

With a 20-car ferry he believed it would be difficult to serve the traffic, especially during the tourist season. It might not all come the first year but the possibilities were there.

A crude oil engine ferry would be necessary at Borden in the summer in addition to the present S.S. "Charlottetown" before many years the speaker believed.

Mr. R. K. Clements of Montague suggested that a ferry be put on the Georgetown-Pictou route this coming summer and until the other piers were completed. It would get the service started and advertise it, he believed.

Mr. J. Walter Jones, M.L.A., suggested the Board make a study of the possibilities of the proposed service and supply Hon. Mr. Dunning with the findings.

Mr. Douglas MacKinnon urged on the Board the necessity of retaining control of the ferry in this province.

Mr. R. R. Bell, newly elected president of the Board took over the chair from retiring president J. L. Morris at last night's meeting.

A proposed schedule of tariff fees to be charged by the port warden was adopted by the Board. The schedule was presented by the Department of Transport and was designed to bring charges here in conformity with port charges in other Canadian Ports.

The 50th anniversary of the Charlottetown Board of Trade would be observed by a banquet it was decided at the meeting.

INVESTIGATE NAVAL RIOT

Halifax Authorities Guard Against Further Outbreak.

HALIFAX, Jan. 19—(CP)— For the first time in history, it was believed, Royal Canadian Naval pickets paraded Halifax streets tonight as authorities pushed an investigation into the street riot staged by more than a score of naval reserves here last night.

Ten navy police patrolled the waterfront and business districts to prevent further outbreaks of the pitched battle staged between the reserves, police and civilians which 19-year-old Frederick Clarke a civilian, suffered cuts and abrasions last night.

Naval authorities were investigating the disturbance, it was announced, but no details of their investigation were made public. It was believed all details of the inquiry would be carefully guarded.

Well-informed sources here said the last time Halifax streets were patrolled by naval men was during the war, but they were patrols of the Imperial Navy. Special "shore patrols" of the American navy always kept order here when United States ships visit Halifax.

The naval riot here last night was short-lived.

GIRLISH BEAUTY However much mother may protest that "she never worried about her face in her young days," her modern lanky-legged schoolgirl daughter in her teens will still take what appears to be an excessive amount of interest in cosmetics.

It's no use complaining of youthful vanity—every girl is keen to be pretty—just as every mother wants her daughter to be the belle of her first "ball."

The best way for mothers to tackle the problems is to turn this youthful interest to good account. Teach your daughter the value of skin cleanliness. See that she uses only pure soap, and get her into the habit of giving her face a cold splash after every wash.

Give her a manure outfit with good implements. Poor quality files and scissors spoil the nails. If the cost is important, buy the manure outfit separately and make a roll-case for them from chamois leather.

As to powder, no one likes a shiny nose, so see that she has a finely sifted, pure powder which won't harm a lovely young skin. Teach her to apply a light foundation cream first.

Mr. J. Walter Jones, M.L.A., suggested the Board make a study of the possibilities of the proposed service and supply Hon. Mr. Dunning with the findings.

Mr. Douglas MacKinnon urged on the Board the necessity of retaining control of the ferry in this province.

SUCCESSION

conceding the administration's procedure. They did not attack the Government from the same point of view but they were equally emphatic in claiming the Government was wrong.

Mr. Cahan took the ground no legislation in Canada was needed to give effect to the succession of George VI to the Throne. Mr. Woodsworth claimed Parliament should have been called together and consulted before any step was taken to recognize the abdication of the former King.

The occasion for the debate was the second reading of a bill respecting alteration in the law of succession to the Throne. In taking the stand he did Mr. Cahan differed from Conservative Leader Bennett who yesterday approved of the Government's course.

He said of this he said: "I have known him (Mr. Bennett) as well as eminent men on the bench to reverse their preliminary opinions after hearing a full discussion."

There could be but one King in the British Empire said Mr. Cahan. There could be no King of Canada apart from the King of the United Kingdom. When the British Parliament properly passed an act accepting the abdication of the former King, George VI became King of Canada and nothing more was necessary.

The Government, however, had purported by order-in-council, to request and consent to the application of that act to Canada. The Government had no power to pass such an order-in-council without a statute behind it and in any case the order did not contain any request or consent.

The bill was introduced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, replied to Mr. Cahan's arguments. He said the Government had acted within the four corners of the Statute of Westminster.

The affair, he said, indicated the marvellous elasticity of the British constitution which in times of crisis enabled the government to take the necessary steps to meet the emergency of eminent lawyers. The Statute of Westminster, he said, provided for the request and consent of the Dominion to imperial legislation applicable to them in order to recognize equality of status with the British Parliament's enacting a law for its dominions.

It was the clear intention of the Statute that it was the government of Canada and not Parliament which had to express the request and consent of this country.

The bill before the House, he said, was necessary, not to make George VI king or to ratify his becoming king, but to alter the law of succession and provide that the heirs of Edward VIII should have no right to the throne.

Mr. Woodsworth complained of the Dominion government falling in with the British Prime Minister's efforts to place Edward in a position where he had to abdicate. He said the Statute of Westminster was not sufficient justification for Prime Minister Baldwin's action. Canada could at least have declined to aid Baldwin.

In Mr. Cahan's view what was needed was not an act of Parliament but some formula which would prevent the dangerous precedent established by the government in a crisis from being followed in future.

"This bill," he said, "is futile. It will have no effect. It will serve only to cover up a condition which honorable gentlemen (the government) are more or less anxious to conceal."

The bill was ridiculous, he went on, if provided that King George VI, by the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons ratify the abdication of Edward VIII and the succession of George VI. Surely, said Mr. Cahan, the only sovereign who could assent to such a bill was Edward VIII. By its terms it implied George VI was enacting a bill to make him king and that he was not King until the passing of the act.

Justice Minister Lapointe, who followed, said he was not sure which stand Mr. Cahan was taking or whether or not he approved of the government's course of action. He had spoken as though the Statute of Westminster had never been enacted.

The British Act had changed the succession insofar as it had debarred from rights to the crown any issue Edward might have or the descendants of such issue. This, Mr. Lapointe said, constituted an alteration in the succession laws and such alterations, under the Statute of Westminster, required the assent of the Dominion Parliaments.

There was no retroactivity as charged by Mr. Woodsworth, the minister said, because this act only applied to the future possibility of heirs of the former king claiming the throne.

Mr. Lapointe argued that if section four of the Westminster Statute had meant to refer to the Parliament of Canada instead of the government it would have so stated specifically as was the case in other sections.

The action of the government sanctioned every British citizen in Canada except those who would not be satisfied with anything the government did, such as J. S. Woodsworth, C. F. E. leader.

The throne was the bond between the different parts of the Empire, said Mr. Lapointe. If it should disappear and be replaced by some other form the end of the British Empire would be at hand.

Mr. Woodsworth said Mr. Cahan had not advanced much beyond colonial days and attached little value to the Statute of Westminster and made a new plea for the production of all documents and messages relating to the abdication.

FASCIST RULE MAY SUPPLANT JAPANESE DIET

Army - Dictatorship Looms Against Present Form Of Parliamentary Government.

(A.P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

TOKYO, Jan. 20—(Wednesday)— Japan's Imperial Diet will reconvene Thursday with its own survival or the advent of a militarist type of Fascism at stake, political observers predicted today.

Speeches by Prime Minister Koki Hirota, Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and Finance Minister Eichi Baba will be the main business of reconvening day.

Japanese political writers are united in the belief that every member of the Diet—peers and representatives—realizes this session may decide whether Japan will continue the forms of parliamentary government or turn to some kind of militarist-Fascist regime under the throne, which all agree is unshakable.

On the side of parliamentary democracy are aligned the political parties, backed by the great majority of business and industrial leaders. On the other side is the army and its allies, the Nationalist-inclined bureaucrats entrenched in nearly all branches of the government.

The army and navy are believed certain to fight for huge defence appropriations included in the government's record budget, totalling 3,041,000,000 yen ($870,000,000).

This budget a lot to the army about $205,000,000; to the navy about $195,000,000. The defence services content these funds, largest in the Empire's history, are necessary to build up a fighting machine capable of coping with the world situation.

Most political writers assert the government will weather an unusually stormy session, but its prestige may be so impaired by legislators' attacks on its foreign and financial policies that it will have to resign after the close, which normally comes about the end of March.

Politicians of the Lower House are expected to centre fire on the foreign policy of Minister Arita and the financial policies of Minister Baba, especially his tax "reform" scheme, intended to bring about the first important upward revision of direct tax schedules in Japan since 1926.

Minister Arita's conclusion of an anti-Communist pact with Germany last November is considered sure to be attacked severely by the Minseitō, largest part of the Lower House. This group asserts the agreement is responsible for the increase in Russo-Japanese relations and has harmed Japan's relations with other great occidental powers, especially Great Britain.

Foreseeing a turbulent session, the government has enrolled a corps of 1,500 special guards for the Diet premises.

These things must be stated clearly at this time at the beginning of a new year.

BASE COLOR SCHEME ON ROOM'S RUG OR CARPET

When furnishing a room I always maintain that one should start with the floor and work upwards, because rugs and carpets so often give one good ideas for color schemes writes an Englishwoman.

I have noticed this particularly with Oriental rugs. You can use the light ground color for the walls and one or two of the secondary colors in the pattern for curtains, covers and cushions.

Oriental rugs have one other big advantage, too; the soft colorings fit harmoniously into an existing scheme.

When buying floor coverings don't overlook the claims of the smaller rugs, not only furnish a polished floor but to help to make the cosy corners round the home.

to abdication, Mr. Baldwin said he had received a "stream of letters from United States and Canada." He would like to know who in Canada had written such letters. They could not have come from private sources or Mr. Baldwin would not have mentioned them.
