Happenings of The Week

LONDON — Princess Elizabeth attended a Fancy Dress Ball at American Ambassador Lewis Douglas' home, dressed as a lunch counter waitress. Prince Philip, her husband, came dressed as a waiter, complete with a white apron. The party was given in honor of 20-year-old Sharman Douglas and Felicia and Joan Warburg, daughters of Ambassador Douglas' and his assistant, Paul Warburg. Princess Margaret, a close friend of Sharman, wore blue tulle over a full length white silk, off-the-shoulder foundation. Her hair and dress were liberally sprinkled with multi-colored butterflies.

When Princess Margaret Rose selects clothes for a trip, she doesn't go shopping in the local department stores, like most ordinary mortals. Instead she calls in her favorite dressmaker, outlines her needs, and then waits until he submits sketches for her approval. Norman Hartnell, the London designer who makes most of the dresses for England's Royal Family, designed the complete wardrobe for Princess Margaret's recent Italian holiday, and already is at work on clothes for her forthcoming visit to the United States. After the original sketches are approved, Hartnell visits the palace with fabrics and discusses all details. All fittings are done at the palace, and no models are made of any dress for the Royal Family. Hartnell created Queen Elizabeth's wardrobe for her American trip before the war, and designed the wedding dress and trousseau for Princess Elizabeth.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

James, husband of mine, who wandered from Alderlea this evening has just returned—coming in all at once to break a spell that has been quiet and empty for us, unbroken except for Pard's occasional bark at the gateway as he checked a car or other conveyance passing in or out along the hill. James came out of the mellow moonlight now flooding the countryside in a manner to make one wish that it might keep always at full, forgetful in its comforting beauty that the dark can also be restful and friendly and quietly enfolding.

Silent and lone we found the place after a busy week which has taken in Jamie's and grand-daughter's doings as well as our own. This afternoon with added treasure-trove in his pockets, and with a carton filled with intriguing ends of sawings, fresh from one of Jock's recent endeavours, tucked in the truck he was off home from his

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Worthy Women

Seldom Adequately Appreciated By Male Of Species

The most discouraging thing about being a woman is that our virtues are our greatest handicap. We collect no dividends on our good qualities. All that we get for being sweet and pure and unselfish and noble is the reward of a clear conscience.

Men don't love us and marry us, which is what we all want most in life, because we are pin-feathered angels, but because we have large violet eyes or are blondes built on streamline effects. The wives who have the most adoring husbands are never the Patient Griseldas but female Simon Legrees who work them to death to provide them with pearls and limousines and trips to Europe. We can't even do our duty to our husbands without the danger of losing them to some woman who will treat 'em rough.

And that is what makes us mothers sigh and tear our hair in bewilderment when we look at our little daughters in the cradle and wonder how we should develop them so that they may get the most out of life. Shall we bring them up to be meek and modest? Well, the shrink-

SELF-DEMAND INFANT FEEDING

One of the jokes commonly current is that Mrs. Smith "must" have perfect children because she brings them up by the book. As a matter of fact this bringing children up by the book has saved the lives of thousands of children for, whereas, before mothers were taught proper infant feeding, about 3 in every ten children died at birth or during the first year. Today only about 1 in 20 dies during this period.

The first great gain in extending the life span began with the saving of the lives of children by proper feeding during their first and second years.

In the Canadian Medical Association Journal, Dr. C. K. Rowan-Legg, Ottawa, states what we all seem to forget is that the child has an emotional life as well as just the physical, and needs more than food to keep him healthy and happy. "The feeding of infants with a definite amount of food at fixed intervals neglects the emotional side of the child's life. Modern psychiatry feels that peace and physical pleasure make a more sound foundation for a stable personality than does too early exposure to strict discipline and denial."

The infant is born with three needs — satisfaction of hunger, comfort, affection. Food should be given when it needs it and not thrust upon it when it doesn't need it. "When the hunger rhythm or time arrives and the infant is given food, the amount of crying by the child is greatly reduced, which makes life easier for the mother."

Your family doctor knows, as do most mothers, that infants must do a certain amount of crying to stretch and strengthten the lungs, so that if well fed and comfortable, a little crying will do no harm.

Dr. Rowan-Legg points out that some infants because of their makeup or personality, need to be fed at other than the regulation four hours, and if they are hungry at three hour intervals and not at four hours, the mother should tell this to her doctor or children's specialist, who will make the necessary adjustments as to amount of food and intervals between feedings.

While infant feeding is the most important part in building a healthy infant, comfort and affection closely follow.

STRAWBERRY ICE-BOX CAKE

1 T. granulated gelatin
3 T. cold water
1-2 c. orange juice
1-2 c. supar
1 1-2 c. cream
1 c. sliced strawberries
Lady fingers or thin slices of plain cake.

Soak gelatin in the cold water, dissolve in top of double boiler over hot water and add orange juice and sugar. Stir until thoroughly dissolved. Cool but not to congeal. Then fold in the cream which has been stiffly beaten and add the sliced strawberries. Line the bottom and sides of a mold with split lady fingers or slices of any sponge cake or plain cake. Pour in the strawberry cream filling. Top with layer of lady fingers. Chill for 12 hours. Remove the mold. Garnish with whipped cream and whole ripe berries. This dessert could be made with any canned fruit and cherries to decorate.

MARBLE STAINS

To remove stains from marble mix a paste of benzine and powdered soapstone. Spread over the marble and leave over night. Wash off with warm water. If necessary, repeat the application.

WALL PAPER

The use of a rubber sponge, rubbed both ways of the paper, often proves very effective in cleaning wall paper.

IRONING

Ironing the round centrepieces from the centre to the edges will avoid any puckering.

Hobbies Of Local Citizens

By Uncle Joe

Over at Winsloe South you'll find one of the Island's oldest hobbyists in the person of Mr. George Auld, who has reached the ripe age of ninety-four years.

George Auld's hobby is gardening and he has one of the finest to be seen in the Garden of the Gulf, a truly old-fashioned plot with grapevines, raspberries, strawberries, nursery stock which he sells to people needing same. Besides a complete list of vegetables, Mr. Auld grows many desirable flowers which greatly add to the beauty of his country home.

This ninety-four year oldster has been making gardening his specialty for many years, and what he doesn't know about the art—and gardening is an art—"is not worth knowing," as the saying goes.

For instance, George knows that the cultivation of gooseberries is the same as with currants, except that no surface cultivation should be done about the plants as they are shallow-rooted and therefore easily injured. Mr. Auld also knows the value of having a few toads in one's garden to take care of the cutworms, those dreaded enemies of the vegetable kingdom, whose armies are playing havoc with garden plots and even some grain fields this summer.

• • •

To possess a fine garden today requires a lot of knowledge plus a heap of toil, especially if one's garden is a sizable one. Therefore, it is remarkable indeed to find a large plot, such as the one Mr. Auld cultivates, entirely free from weeds; and, believe it or not, ninety-four-year-old George Auld does all the weeding himself.

The garden is his special pride and care, and woe betide the barnyard fowl that steps across this forbidden area.

Most men, if they ever reached the ninety-four mark, would be content to rest their oars and quit pulling against the stream; but George Auld can't see life being lived that way. "Because a person happens to be ninety-four doesn't excuse him from doing some work—that is, providing he is well enough to perform such tasks."

• • •

And now, my readers, if you fancy this is an exaggerated story, just take a drive to South Winsloe the next time you are out motoring and see, for yourself, the old gentleman and his wonderful garden.

You'll find George Auld a very friendly fellow who will, I am sure, be pleased to show you around that well manicured plot of his; and, if you are a good listener and in need of a few tips, George will be on deck to deliver the information.

But, and there is a but, watch your step lest your feet tread upon some of George's vegetable or flower children! Remember what I told you about the fowls that were unlucky enough to venture into Auld's hobby-land?

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it all right for a guest at the dinner table to use any receptacle handy for an ash tray?

A. No; if he needs an ash tray, he should ask for one. It is very poor manners to use a hostess' coffee cup or saucer for this purpose.

Q. Do you consider it good form for a man to refer to his wife as "the missus"?

A. Definitely not. To acquaintances, he should refer to her as "my wife" or as "Mrs. Blank." To friends, he should call her by her first name.

Q. Who should make the first move in gift giving, between a man and a woman?

A. The man, always.

He: "Say, that's a bad gash you've got on your forehead. How in the world did you get it?"

Him: "I bit myself."

He: "Oh, come now. How could you bite yourself on your forehead?"

Him: "I stood on a chair."

The visitor from the city stopped in at the village general store and asked, "Have you anything in the shape of automobile tires?"

"Yep", said the storekeeper. "Life-preservers, funeral wreaths, doughnuts, and rubber bands."

The Stars Say—

By Genevieve Kemble

For Sunday, July 17

Sunday's astrological forecast is for a pleasant, lively and prosperous condition in affairs of heart and home. Social, cultural, domestic and affectional matters may engage the attention, bringing popularity and joyous celebrations. However, there are hints of suspicion, jealousy and hurt feelings if poor judgment or over-emotional stimuli be permitted to undermine very auspicious aspects. For happiest results keep within bounds of reason, common sense.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is, have excellent promise of a prosperous, pleasant and fruitful year, in business, employment and domestic relations, in which there may be full measure of gratification and gain. Nevertheless the judgment or ability to see things through on rational lines may complicate affairs, especially should jealousy, suspicion, impetuous moves be indulged. Loss of funds, prestige or

How Can I !!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I remove discolorations from marble?

A. Wash the marble thoroughly with soap and water, and dry. Then mix a paste of powdered bath brick and lemon juice. Rub the discolored parts vigcously with this; rinse off with cold water.

Q. How can I make a room appear larger than it really is?

A. Light woodwork and light-colored draperies always tend to give a room the appearance of being larger than it really is.

Q. How can I keep the pastry board from slipping?

A. It will not slip about on an enamel table top if a rubber jar ring is put under each corner

YELLOW SLICKERS

Frequently these slickers become unsightly and yet are far from worn out. The soil may be removed by washing in lukewarm suds, using a brush on the bad spots. Rinse in the same temperature water and hang on a hanger to drip dry. When thoroughly dry apply a thin coat of clear shellac.
