WIRELESS STATION FOR ST. JOHN HARBOR

St. JOHN, N. B., Aug. 16.—An amount of $25,000 has been appropriated by the Federal Department of Marine and Fisheries to install radio stations in St. John Harbor, said Hon. R. W. Wilmore, Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue this morning. Those stations are for assisting ships safely to negotiate the entrance to the harbor during the stormy and dull weather. It is expected that the stations will be in operation this coming season. One of the stations will be located on Partridge Island but the location of the other has not yet been settled upon.

Hon. W. M. Lea Meets Indignant Constituents

Mr. Lea: "All of these tax notices went out with my name but that is a big mistake."

Voices: "It sure is."

Mr. Macdonald: "You don't deny that your name Walter M. Lea, Provincial Treasurer, is attached to it?"

Mr. Lea: "No, but it is a huge mistake."

Mr. Macdonald: "It is all a mistake then these notices amount to nothing, and if that is the case it is a pretty poor way of doing business. I know of three other parties who got notices like this."

Mr. Lea: "It is a mistake."

Mr. Macdonald: "You don't deny the fact that, whether right or wrong, one man at least was assessed $30?"

Mr. Lea: "Well, the notice is there."

Mr. Macdonald: "Sure it is; you can't get away from it. You don't repudiate it do you?"

Mr. Lea: "It is all a mistake."

Mr. Macdonald: "So that, as a matter of fact the Guardian was absolutely correct when it stated that a man was assessed $30."

Mr. Lea: "I have said it was a mistake."

A voice: "Don't make mistakes like that; it's pretty serious."

Mr. Macdonald replied that this was a poor way of doing business and added that he knew of at least three cases in which farmers had received similar excessive bills.

Mr. Lea said he defended every act passed by the government, including the increase of members' indemnities, but added that he regretted the fact that this increase should have come so close upon the heels of the increase in taxation. However, he proceeded to justify the action of the government in raising the indemnities, stating that if the people desired to be represented by good men they must expect to pay such men adequately. If the people, he said could not expect to pay their representatives lower salaries than could be obtained in private life, and if they wanted $200 men they would get $200 men and no better.

A voice: "That was the salary when you went around hunting for the job."

Mr. Lea went on to say that ex-Premier Arsenault had approved of the increase in indemnities, but he was interrupted by a gentleman in the audience who reminded him that Mr. Arsenault had declined to accept the $1,000 offered him. A gentleman named Howatt asked Mr. Lea whether Mr. Crosby had introduced a bill to provide that the school meetings should be held on roadmasters.

Mr. Lea: "No."

Mr. Howatt: "That was the proposal at the meeting in Crapaud before the election."

Mr. Lea then said that those members who came from the country had voted the proposal down.

Mr. Howatt asked why Mr. Crosby had not advocated it and Mr. Lea replied that Mr. Crosby would have supported it in a manner of the majority of council or resign.

Mr. Howatt: "Well, it was a bad vote, whoever voted that proposal down."

Mr. Lea admitted that the proposal was a good one.

Mr. Howatt at this stage started a discussion of the Veterinary Act, and the subject was taken up by a number of gentlemen. Mr. Lea was kept busy replying to questions from all parts of the hall. The sentiment of the meeting was undoubtedly opposed to the Act, and Mr. Lea's explanations were not accepted. The people evidently consider this act unfair. Mr. Beer expressed the opinion that it was in the nature of class legislation.

A very lively time ensued when the chairman endeavored to interpose in the debate in a manner that appeared to the audience to be partial. He and Mr. Macdonald had a sharp exchange of words. Mr. Macdonald said he wanted no discussion with the chairman; he was addressing Mr. Lea. Mr. Lea said he could not answer for himself; it was no part of the chairman's duties to make statements or explanations on the subject before the meeting.

Mr. Macdonald was endeavoring to put a question to Mr. Lea in regard to the Veterinary Act, and the chairman was obviously out to defend the Commissioner. He had no qualms about the sacred neutrality of the chair for he rose to his feet to champion the cause of the government. The following lively passage at arms in which members of the audience participated, then occurred:

The Chairman: "If you had a boy to a veterinary college."

Mr. Macdonald: "I am not talking to you."

The Chairman: "If you sent a boy to a veterinary college—"

Mr. Macdonald: "I am not addressing you."

The Chairman: "I want to ask you a question."

Voices: "Sit down, you are not the speaker."

The Chairman: "If you had a boy, Mr. Macdonald, 'Don't mind my boy; I will take care of him.'"

The Chairman: "I only want to give an illustration."

Voices: "We don't want you to illustrate; let Mr. Lea do the illustrating from you."

Mr. Macdonald: "You are defending Mr. Lea."

The Chairman: "I want you to ask reasonable questions."

Mr. Macdonald: "That is no business of yours."

Some of the audience: "Let Mr. Lea answer the questions."

The Chairman: "Ask him reasonable questions."

Voices: "Sit down, sit down."

Mr. Macdonald: "Mr. Lea will answer for himself; if he says he will not answer I will be satisfied."

Mr. Crosby again attempted to speak but was ordered to sit down. He then tried to bring the meeting to a close by saying it was time to go home, but the audience refused to listen to this proposal.

Mr. J. H. Myers, after Mr. Lea had concluded, was called upon to speak. Mr. Myers said that the advertisement calling the meeting had intimated that the purpose was to refute the charges made by the opponents of the government. He did not think that there was very much disappointment on the part of Conservatives; they had expected some legislation but he certainly knew that staunch gard to what happened in the house during that session he could not speak from personal knowledge adding: "I was not in the house last winter but it was not my fault."

A voice: "You will be there next winter."

Mr. Myers pointed out that the present government had failed even to attempt to press the claims of the province at Ottawa, they could not even inform the people that they had sent a delegation to the Capital and had met with refusal instead they at once went right into the pockets of the people.

A voice: "Salaries."

Mr. Myers: "In the last campaign one of the planks of the Liberal platform was that if returned to power that party would abolish the war and Health tax. Now you are shrewd men. Did you understand by that pledge that your taxes were going to be raised or lowered?"

Voices: "Lowered."

Mr. Myers: "Did the Liberal party, by that, give you to understand that your taxes would be raised?"

Mr. Myers: "Now, gentlemen, I care not what a man's calling may be whether he be politician or professional man, he must have honour and honesty and tell the truth."

Voices: "Hear! Hear!"

Mr. Myers: "It was all right for them to put this plank in their platform, but the result of the election would have been far different had they added the rider: 'We are going to put on a drastic income tax, multiply the land tax, tax the fishermen and the foxes.'"

Why did they not add that statement to their platform?"

A voice: "They were too foxy for that."

Mr. Lea: "Read the manifesto."

Mr. Myers: "There it is on the table."

Voices: "Never mind! Never mind!"

Mr. Lea: "Read it."

Mr. Myers: "I have read your manifesto."

Mr. Lea: "Will you deny that you and your friends promised to abolish the War and Health tax?"

Mr. Lea: "Read the manifesto."

Mr. Myers: "Supposing that statement is not in Mr. Bell's manifesto, do you deny that it was a pledge of your party repeated throughout the country and in the House that you would abolish that tax?"

A voice: "You know you voted against the War and Health tax every time it came up in the House."

Mr. Myers went on to say that that government had broken its pledge to the soldiers, not having done anything for them since coming into power. "I believe," continued Mr. Myers, "they even gave the soldiers to understand that they would give them $2,000."

Mr. Lea: "You have read our manifesto and you know that was not in it."

Mr. Myers: "You led the soldiers to believe that."

A voice at the back: "There's a dozen here can prove you promised it."

Mr. Myers dealt with other questions after which there was a general discussion of the policy of pensions being first at Mr. Lea, who was advised by one person "to come before the electors next time with a platform you can stand on before and after you get in—if there is any hope of that."

The meeting closed some time after 11 o'clock practically the whole of the time having been occupied by Mr. Lea in his main statement and in the heated cross-examination to which he was subjected.

Cancer Patients Anxious For News

TORONTO, August 18.—While an eager, anxious public awaits with impatience further news concerning the recent cancer cure discovered by Dr. Glover, doctors, nurses and others at St. Michael Hospital discreetly refrain from making any definite pronouncement. The feeling is that the cure is still in the experimental stage, and that caution must be exercised in statements made regarding it.

Yesterday afternoon after an interlude of two weeks, a clinic took place. Dr. Glover, Dr. Glancy and Dr. Loudon administering the serum. The large lecture room in which the clinic was held was filled with patients and their friends as well as the hall leading to the room. It is probably that between seventy and seventy-five patients were treated, and another clinic, on even a larger scale, is arranged for this afternoon.

"I had no idea," remarked one official "cancer was so prevalent. This discovery has revealed how widespread the scourge is."

At present there are seventy cancer patients in the hospital, and their condition is reported to be cheering. It was impossible to discover yesterday any trace of the discouragement in the guarded statements made by those who have been following the development of the cure. Evidently faith holds strong, and the reticence of doctors and nurses is indicative merely of a feeling that the time has not yet arrived for positive assertions.

What are regarded as hopeless cases are being discharged from the hospital, an official of the institution announced last night. The explanation is that the condition of these patients is so advanced

Lightning Wrecked Home

YARMOUTH, Aug. 18.—A thunderstorm passed over this town yesterday afternoon and as it appeared to be only very light there was in consequence no attention given it.

Today, however, it is learned that the tempest in outlying sections was decidedly severe, and particularly at Pleasant Lake, about seven miles from this town, where the residence of Lawson Jeffery was struck and the interior practically demolished. The bolt entered through the roof of the main house and tore three large holes in it, and also three holes in one side of the roof of the ell. In the interior there is not a room that is not damaged.

Mr. Jeffery was lying in bed reading when the house was struck, and the room he was in was totally wrecked, the lath and plaster being torn from the walls and the floor badly broken. He, with his entire family, were more or less dazed and stunned by the shock, while Mrs. Jeffery, who was sitting with her infant by the stove in the kitchen, was severely burned, and for a few moments it was feared that the child had been killed.
