DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

GOOD PROVIDER, TOO

Was it poverty? Give another guess, for Number One was a banker who provided her with mink coats and pearl necklaces. Was Friend Husband one of the men who are, as the French proverb has it, the sorrow of the home and the joy of the street? Not at all. No gentler, kinder, more amiable man ever walked to the altar.

Every surmise failed. Then, quite by accident, I met one of my neighbor's old girlhood friends and schoolmates and, getting her into a corner, I begged her to tell me—if the terrible story could be told—what crime Mrs. X's first husband had committed that made her divorce him.

"Oh," responded the woman, "he didn't do anything. He was just tedious."

Being prepared for the worst, I reeled under the shock of learning that a good man had been divorced by his wife because he bored her. But, if the truth were known, doesn't that happen oftener than we know? In reality, doesn't tediousness wreck more homes than all of the seven deadly sins? And isn't the "mental cruelty," which so many husbands and wives accuse their mates of inflicting upon them and which they bore until they could stand it no longer, just a legal synonym for boredom?

In one of Shaw's plays there is a philandering wife who now and then takes an excursion down the primrose path and whose husband always welcomes her back with joy when she returns to the home fold, and he explains his attitude by saying "she is always so interesting when she gets back." Without going so far as that, one can say without danger of contradiction that there is no other way by which a wife can so surely keep her husband as by being an entertaining and amusing companion.

The wife who always has a new joke to tell, or a little budget of spicy gossip, or who can talk intelligently with her husband about the things he is interested in can snap her fingers in the faces of all the dull blondes in Christendom. And the same thing holds good for men. If husbands want to keep their wives, let them keep them interested. Heaven only knows how many wives get divorces to save themselves from being bored to death.

So perhaps tediousness is the unforgivable sin in marriage, after all.

In Memoriam

WM. GRAHAM

The death occurred at Montague on May 28th of Wm. Graham of Gaspereaux in the seventy-sixth year of his age. Deceased had been in failing health since early spring and had entered Montague Hospital for treatment about two weeks before his death.

Despite all that medical skill and nursing could accomplish his system in its weakened condition, failed to shake off the malady, and he passed away on above mentioned date.

The late Mr. Graham was well and favorably known to a large number of people throughout this Island province. Having conducted a lobster packing establishment in company with his brother Charles for many years, his business brought him into intimate contact with varied classes of people, by all of whom he was highly regarded for his friendliness, honesty and fairness. He was beloved for his quick wit and humour and above all for his constant readiness to help his employees through the difficult economic conditions which existed up to a few years ago.

Such help was always given in a most cheerful manner and many people in the surrounding country and outlying district will always remember with gratitude "William", as he was familiarly known for the assistance rendered in this way.

He leaves to mourn their loss one son Harry on the homestead; one daughter Bella, Mrs. Cameron Reid of Murray Harbor North; one brother Charles of Gaspereaux; two sisters, Mrs. Geo. Graham of Murray Harbor North; Mrs. Mary McKinnon of Whim Road and also eight grand-children.

The high esteem in which he was held was amply demonstrated by the large number of people, who, in this busy season, turned out to attend his funeral which took place on Thursday, May 30th to Murray Harbor North cemetery. The services at the house and graveside were conducted by Rev. Mr. McLean of Montague.

The following hymns—all favorites of the deceased were sung—Nearer My God to Thee, Shall We Meet Beyond the River, The Lord's My Shepherd and Asleep in Jesus.

The pall bearers were: Howard Steele, Alex McKenzie, Raymond Reilly, George Hicken, George Graham and Cephas Davey.
