What the Gray House Hid

The Mystery of a Haunted Mansion

by Wyndham Martyn

Junior wondered why his father should ask about Leslie's gameness. Mr. Hanby was in an unusually thoughtful mood.

"You're pretty husky," he said presently. "What do you weigh?"

"A hundred and seventy stripped," junior told him.

My weight to a hair. Les isn't so much, is he?"

"He and Bill weigh a hundred and fifty-five stripped. Why? Going to promote some boxing exhibitions?"

"Nothing like that."

"What's on your mind, dad?"

"Sherlock Lupin, it would take more than your admitted skill to find out, because I don't know myself. I apologize for it. For the first time, the Gray house gave me a shiver as I passed it. This murder was the cause. I don't revel in crime. I hate it. I like people to be happy and harmonious. Something inside me leads me almost invariably to dependable people. I wouldn't have picked this fellow Red Chapin to have watched a dog pound, if he was half as bad as you say. I took that man Smucker over with the business, the d—d dirty anarchist! I caught myself calculating my forces if anything unpleasant happened up at the Gray house. But Pelham would tackle a lion single-handed. He's been proved. I wondered a little about Leslie."

"Dad, you don't really think there's anything wrong with that new place?" inquired Junior, his eyes sparkling at the thought.

"I'll have to disappoint you by saying no. It was just a passing fit of depression. It has gone."

"I'll be gone, too, if you don't cut the speed down," his son cautioned. "Slow down! There's a motor cop in the offing."

CHAPTER IV

Bill Pelham was waiting for them.

"Won't take me ten minutes to get into clean clothes," said Hanby. "I've got strange news, Dina."

"So has Bill," she retorted.

"Mine is of a tragic nature."

"You've nothing on me," said Bill. I'm in the wholesale tragedy business."

Dina, Pelham and Hanby discussed the matter in the library. Hanby listened to what Appleton had told his friend.

"Then Smucker wasn't lying," he remarked. "Appleton corroborates his story. It means that some one wants to prevent us living here. What could the reason possibly be?

"I give it up," said Pelham. "Do you think the police have the right dope on the Chapin murder?"

"What else could it be?"

"That these same people who want to keep you out started to terrorize you by murdering him. It may be that he was an innocent victim. Of course, we know that he was wanted by the law, and that in a sense his removal is a blessing to society, but all the same he may have intended to be an honest watchman for the time being,"

"Dina," said Hanby presently again conscious of his wife's unusual depression. "if you are scared at the prospect of going up there I'll open negotiations with Miss Selenos, who particularly loathes and despises me. What about it?"

"Think twice before you answer," Bill Pelham warned her.

"I haven't even seen the place yet," she said, smiling. "I'm not going to be frightened out of it by

"I'm Not Going to Be Frightened Out of it by Any Rude Old Woman."

any rude old woman. Hil, I believe she's at the bottom of all this mystery. I'm not going to rob my Housatonic of his manor!"

"Housatonic?".. Bill... queried. "What's that?"

"Hil's real name. At college you called him Tony."

"It's a new one on me," said Bill.

"Blame your Aunt Selina for it," Hanby declared. "She's got me going with her California rivers. I I tell you that old hag has a face like the Furies. She may be mad and vindictive, but there's something on her mind more than a passing whim. I don't know but Dina's right. She said I should meet disaster, ruin, and even death. There's some mystery about my pleasure house in Dutchess country.

"Nothing will keep me away from it now," Dina asserted. "We shall have four able-bodied men in the place all the summer."

"Four," her husband demanded. "You are not counting fourteen-year-old Tim as an able-bodied male, are you?"

"There will be you, Junior, Leslie and Bill."

"Me?" Pelham cried.

"Of course! On your own confession, you've nothing to do until your company is reorganized in the fall. Danger calls, and we need you. I've already picked out your suite."

"Dina, you are taking great chances. Even dull-witted Hil, the last to sent the danger, knows that I'm in love with you."

"That makes you so much the safe. You shall work, believe me. I'm crazy to have some stately old-world gardens. You shall be my man with the hoe."

"I sign on here and now," said Bill. Where are you going?"

"I promised to tell Tim about the inquest. My children have the modern interest in crime. Don't go! I shan't be very long."

Pelham looked at Hanby almost wistfully.

"Hill, was that a joke on me or a genuine invitation?"

"Don't you want to come?"

"Except for the reason that your family is my family, that I shall live rent free and make enough out of you at pool to spend an affluent winter—no!"

"That's settled, then," said Hanby. "Honestly, Bill, I shall be glad to have a man like you, with nerve and courage, around the house."

Painful Piles

Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves

It takes only one bottle of Dr. J.S. Leonhardt's prescription — HEMROID — to end itching, bleeding, protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in old, stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it heals and restores the affected parts and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel — the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that's why salves and cutting fail. Hughes Drug Co., Ltd., says HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.

MALPEQUE

The beginning of the Ministry of the Rev. M. A. MacMillan in Princetown United was marked by fine weather, large audiences at both services and a spirit of true optimism. It was indeed under happy circumstances that this congregation assembled for worship and it was with grateful hearts that they listened to the exposition of the word.

Standing on the threshold of his new ministry Mr. MacMillan in his introductory remarks pointed out the need of goodwill and co-operation and his attitude was that of pressing forward, inspired by the ministries of the past.

The words of the morning text "Sir, we would see Jesus," were full of meaning and in the course of his remarks he pictured the circumstances at the time of writing of the text and emphasized the need of our seeing Jesus today through the medium of the word of God—the only guide book to true Christian living. In conclusion he made a strong plea that each one take Jesus as the light of the gospel and as a friend until at last we see Him face to face. The basis of the evening text was found in Luke 21. 19 "In Your patience possesses ye your souls,' The need of the spirit of patience and the spirit of endurance were emphasized. The musical numbers were given throughout the services as follows: Preludes—Offertoire Maxwell, "Contilene"—Hoffman, Offertory, "Twilight Devotions," Peace, Anthem, "Praise for the Lord,' Parks, Postlude "March Brillantly" Lowden, Preludes, "Twilight Hours" Paulsen, "Intermezzo" Claus, Offertory "Wedding Intermezzo," Nevin, Anthem "Where Jesus Lives" Parks, Postlude, "Festal March in F," Roberts.

IN MEMORIAM

STEPHEN GILLIS

Seldom indeed is the real significance of the words "In the midst of life we are in death,' so forcefully brought home to us as it was on Tuesday, June 2nd, when it became known that Death's Angel had summoned to his eternal reward, Stephen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan J. Gillis, Clear Springs, at the comparatively early age of 36 years.

Death, coming as it did to one in the prime of life, along with the sad circumstances which accompany a drowning, has filled the community with a profound sorrow and heartfelt sympathy. Sorrow, rarely so keenly felt, for the loss of a friend, young in years, but old in public esteem, and sympathy for the bereaved family who are left to mourn their loss and who daily and sorrowfully must experience fond reminiscences of a dutiful son and loving brother.

Deceased was of a true manly character, admired by all for his honesty in his dealings, with others and for his earnestness in his every day duties. The friends of his boyhood days as well as those friendships formed in later years, he easily held until the end and it can be truthfully said, he went from this world leaving not one enemy behind. He was always a hard worker, ever solicitous for the advancement of his home and the one he left at his passing stands as a fitting monument to his industry and prudence. Being of a quiet disposition, we can rightly say of Stephen:

"Far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife
His sober wishes never learn'd to stray;
Along the cool, sequester'd vale of life,
He kept the noiseless tenor of his way."

The high esteem in which he was held in the community, was amply testified to by the large concourse of people that followed his mortal remains to their last resting place in St. Margaret's Cemetery, where they were laid on Thursday, June 4th, there to await a glorious resurrection. The Pastor, Rev. K. C. McPherson, conducted the services in church and at the grave, while Rev. R. J. MacDonald, St. Columbia, Rev. F. L. Mullaly, St. Dunstan's and Rev. Basil Croken of Souris, by their presence at the Mass and burial brought added solemnity to the occasion and spiritual consolation to the bereaved family.

The pall bearers, James A., Andrew, Chester and Allan J. McDonald, Joseph McIsaac and R. C. McPhee and Frank McDonald, hearse-driver, were seven of his neighbours with whom he had grown up to manhood, and in whose company, he, as well as commanding respect by his manly actions, was always considered a jolly associate.

Besides his heart-stricken parents he leaves to mourn their loss two brothers and seven sisters, Wilfred, Seattle, Wash., Ann, Gertrude and Katherine, Boston, Mass., Mrs. Emmet Pierce, Kimberley, B. C., Mrs. Peter Gillis, Souris Line Road, Mrs. Angus McCormac, Souris River, Florence and Joseph at home, to all of whom the sympathy of their numerous friends goes in their sad bereavement.

The following tributes were received by the family:
