—DRAMA AGAIN AT KENSINGTON.—The Emerald Dramatic Club presented their comedy drama "The King of the Philippines" in the Strand Theatre, Kensington, on Saturday night with pronounced success. If the audience was not so numerous as could be desired, the cause may be traced, not to any lack of popularity in the theatre, as its reputation has long been established, not to any antipathy or indifference on the part of theatre-goers, not to any poor judgment of the entertainment, but simply to lack of advertising, since this feature should have been developed in the degree that the Guardian has always advised. However, the audience fully enjoyed and generously applauded the performance. The cast showed the sequent stars and satellites: John Graham, a gay old boy—Emmett Clow; Stanley Graham, John's son—Joseph Kiggins; Dick Jordan, Stanley's chum.—John J. White; Rev. Ambrose Meekham, a member of the church.—Linus McDonald; Lady Pansy, John's valet.—Ceclia Murphy; Marie Graham, John's daughter.—Alice Deigham; Priscilla Williams, a burlesque queen.—Mrs. James Allen; Jesura Graham, John's sister.—Mrs. Fidele Perry. The performance was introduced by a violin selection skillfully rendered by Master Stephen Gillis, a lad only eleven years old. This number was keenly enjoyed as the child performer showed a taste and touch not often attained in tender years. He also sang two vocal solos which feat will make older knights of the stage reset their laurels. Miss Ella McMahon played the accompaniments. Between Acts I and II, Mr. Zebeus McKenna rendered a vocal solo that merited the hearty encore that followed. He responded with a popular selection. Then followed a violin selection by Master Stephen Gillis. Between Acts II and III, Mr. T. N. Donohoe very acceptably rendered one of his popular vocal solos. "Envy" and was impelled to respond to an encore. The acting throughout the whole drama was splendid and never failed to interest, amuse and to please the audience.
