EASTER SUNDAY AT BELFAST.—The spirit of the Easter season strongly pervaded throughout the service of the Presbyterian church last Sunday. During the morning service, seasonable hymns of resurrection hope were rendered, and Rev. Mr. Griffiths based his discourse on the story of the Resurrection, as found in the last chapter of St. Luke. In the evening, the choir and Y. P. S. were responsible for a most edifying Easter programme, the choir being strongly represented, although the rain storm that prevailed, prevented a few members from a long distance from being present. Apart from the special music those who took part in individual parts included, Recitations by Miss Florrie Gillis, Miss Margaret Gillis, Mrs. Lena McEachern, Mrs. Emily West, Songs by Master Edward Smith, Master Alfred McLean, Jack Griffiths, Messrs. West, Dan Ross, Cameron McPhee and a quartette by Mr. Alec McKenzie and friends. Miss Annie McKenzie presided at the organ during the service. During intervals in the programme, the pastor made seasonable remarks, which were greatly appreciated, as were the items of the programme, all of which bore relation to the Easter season.

DEPORTED BUT PROMISES TO RETURN

HALIFAX, April 2—(Canadian Press)—Which promises that she would be back before long, Catherine Teresa Carr sailed away from Canada tonight. Beaten in her fight to stay in Canada, she was bound for her home in Ireland as a patient in the Ounard Limer hospital.

She was sorry to go, she said in a last-minute interview aboard the ship. She had tried hard to remain. She battled deportation proceedings after she had been taken from the freighter Salsaria, unconscionable from the ordeal of an 11-day voyage huddled in an open lifeboat and with only two loaves of bread for food.

Cheerful

But today she bravely braved the news that she must go back to her Belfast home. And she was smiling once more as she was wheeled into the Scythia's hospital.

The Department of Immigration's decision ordering her out of Canada had left her still cheerful.

"They may send me home now," she said, "but I'll be back soon. And it won't be long before I'm back either." She was still weak from the rigors of the crossings from Glasgow to Halifax, but her face lit up in a smile as she looked back on it.

"I'm brave enough to try almost anything," she declared, "but I certainly won't try that way again." The 24-year-old girl had come close to death on that voyage, and only her determination to reach Canada had kept her conscious until she was within sight of land.

She has lost none of that determination to make her home in Canada. Before her deportation more than a year ago, she lived in London, Ont. She is an orphan, and most of her friends are in that city. "I like the Canadian people," she said. "They are sympathetic, and I was treated in Canada better than in the Old Country."

Marriage Offers
 Catherine revealed that during her stay of two weeks in the Immigration Hospital she has received offers of marriage from two men anxious to offer her a home. She refused to name them, but said one was from Michigan. She said she wanted to thank them through the newspapers, since she could not do it personally.

There were other offers of assistance too. Two families named Carr had offered to adopt her, touched by the story of her troubles. Financial aid came too from several sources, and when Catherine left for Liverpool she carried more money than she had seen in a long time.

Big Job For Little Jimmy

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
 HALIFAX, April 2—Hopping bells aboard a trans-Atlantic liner is a big job for a little fellow like Jimmy Penny, Jimmy, who's making his first trip to sea on the White Star liner Britannic. It is just three feet 9 1/2 inches high, and he weighs 60 pounds.

He saw Canada for the first time when the Britannic docked in Halifax over the week end. For three days after leaving his home in Liverpool, Jimmy was sick. But he's determined to be a good sailor.

"My mother and dad went to sea," he says, "and I'm going to stick to it."

Loses Race With Death

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
 SYDNEY, N.S., April 2—A speeding aeroplane raced out of the northern sky, swooped low over Sydney Harbor and finally settled to a landing on the ice. A woman landed. Swiftly she was brought ashore and then whisked away to the neighboring town of New Waterford.

It was there Mrs. Reuben Hawley learned that death had won the race. Mrs. Neil S. MacDonald, the sister she had flown more than 100 miles to see, had just died. Notified of the sister's serious illness, Mrs. Hawley boarded a plane at her home in Ingonish, far up the north Cape Breton coast, and flew down over the snow-covered country to reach her bedside.

CHALLENGE HOCKEY GAME

Elsewhere in this issue appears an ad for a hockey match between Lower Freetown and the Ramblers of South Freetown.

It seems that Lower Freetown was eliminated from the Simmons and MacFarlane League early in the winter, but they claim that on account of some of their best players at that time being unavoidably absent that they had the best team for all. So they challenged the Cup winners and the challenge has been accepted, and everybody is looking forward to the game in Beque rink Wednesday night.

DRAWS DOWN FINE FOR CANING GIRL

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, April 2—(C.P.)—Canning his landlady's 7-year-old daughter for biting her fingernails cost Augustus Brathwaite $26.

The first day he found the youngster biting her nails, Brathwaite lashed her over the back 23 times with his cane. This punishment, however, failed to cure the child of the habit, and she received an additional dozen lashes the next day for the same offense.

He was reported by the girl's mother, and brought before a police magistrate who fined him $26. The child still bears the marks of the cane on her body.
