profit. They, too, must work for a living. A hen has a certain curiosity about life and a physique for gratifying it. Peering and pecking she lives, thrives, and creates out of nothing or out of worse than nothing, and turns to good the pests of the land. If some Burbank would invent a hen with a taste for the decemlineatae which infest the potato, that would be the final achievement of "science." The farmer does not feed his hens. He conceals a modest ration so carefully as to arouse in their breasts a continual hope. In their search they discover choice morsels. They feed themselves, and cost their owner nothing. For this reason, and for this alone, he is able to sell his chickens and eggs in the city for the present moderate price which he demands. If it were not so, if he were obliged to purchase feed, he alone would be rich enough to eat eggs, but not more than two, once a year on Easter morning.

There is, therefore, a rigid balance on the farm. A certain number of animals can be kept without loss, and that is all the farmer asks. In this lies the meaning of Browning's phrase—a little more, and how much it is. A hen additional to the proper complement means a loss upon the whole flock. A horse too many will destroy the profit of a year and a surplus cow in the byre is more destructive than a student in a class already filled. On the farm there is an absolute limit to production. When that point is passed the success of the whole enterprise is imperilled.
 There is no surplus product. There is no product at all.

It costs a farmer as much to keep a horse or a cow on his farm as it would cost a "business man" to keep the same animal in the city.
 Any city dweller who complains that he pays too much for his eggs, butter, and bacon is quite free to keep a hen, a cow, or a pig of his own. He will succeed perfectly, if he tends the animals in his spare time, and presses into the service his children and his womenkind.
 All three might be the better for the occupation; but they would

MRS. CONALLY SAYS TANLAC HAS MADE HER FEEL LIKE A DIFFERENT WOMAN

"It's such a relief to be free of all the ailments that I have had for the past nine years, that I just feel as though I want to tell everybody that it was Tanlac which rid me of my troubles," said Mrs. G. A. Conally of Sydney Mines when in at Turnbull's drug store, recently.

"No one will ever know what I went through in all these years of suffering. For years I wasn't able to eat anything scarcely, but what it would give me trouble afterwards. The gas would so form that I would be in agony for hours, and I got so that I was afraid to eat at all. I had no strength to do my work and felt tired and worn out from morning till night. I used to have such frightful headaches that I could scarcely see across the room, and was so nervous that anything unusual would drive me almost frantic. I could not sleep at nights and often used to walk the floor for hours. Life was nothing but a burden and I thought I should have to give up entirely.

"I was talking to a friend of mine about my condition, and she said 'Why don't you try Tanlac?'.
 I acted on her suggestion, and it surely was the best thing I ever did in my life, for three bottles of the medicine entirely overcame all my troubles. I can now eat three good meals a day, and never have a sign of indigestion. I never have headaches now and my nerves are as steady as a clock. I sleep soundly every night and get up in the morning feeling so full of life and energy that my household duties are no trouble to me at all. Tanlac has built up my whole system and given me new life and strength, and I have the greatest confidence in recommending it to others."

Tanlac is sold in Charlottetown by Lequin Bros., in Montague by J. J. Mason, and by the leading druggists in every town.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.
 To our beloved brother, Neil Mc-Cannel, Canoe Cove.

Dear brother:—As it has pleased the Most Worshipful Master of the Universe to remove from your life your beloved mother, and as the intimate relations long held by you with the members of this lodge render it proper that we should in some tangible form share in sympathizing with you, we on behalf of Derry, L. O. L. No. 1169 tender our heartfelt sympathy to you and other members of the family, and all the relatives of your deceased mother in this your sad affliction.
 We hereby assert that while we bow with humble submission to the most High we do not the less mourn with you in your sad bereavement for your beloved mother who has been called from her labors to her heavenly place.
 Signed in behalf of Derry, L. O. L.
 No. 1169.

then be farmers, and would find it more convenient to exercise their craft in the country.
 The bricklayer actually does require a dollar an hour to support his wife in the vacuity of a little house, and his children in the idleness of the school. When he has paid on their account for the spectacle of the street and the entertainment of the pictures not much is left of his meager wage.
 But if his wife were to carry the bricks to his hand, and his children were to mix the mortar, and he were left free by his Union to exert his full force, he could produce a house as cheaply as a farmer supplies food. In the city most women and all children are withdrawn from useful production and are borne as a burden by the man alone. On the farm the whole force of the family is directed towards a common end.

By this principle of "spare time" the work of the world is carried down. The wage-earner alone in idleness. The physician, when his day's work is over, devotes the remaining hours to the hospital and laboratory. The engineer spends nights upon his plans, and even the lawyer pores over his cases. The craftsman in the country always has a piece of land as a recreation from his work and as a means of subsistence. The farmer above all others is the exponent of this principle of spare time. His time is given free. He works for nothing. By this means alone Canada was settled and the first immigrants lived. When they finished the day's work upon their crops, they went to the hillside and quarried stone. They cut and squared the blocks; they fetched lumber from the kiln, sand from the shore, water from the stream. They excavated the soil, and laid up the walls of a cellar. Trees were felled and hewn into timber or sawn into lumber at the mill, where a part was left to recompense the miller for his service. In the slow years material was accumulated, and in the long winters it was dressed to a point where a more skilled hand must be employed. The achievement of a house was the work of a lifetime, and it was done only once.

Excepting Quebec, no part of Canada is more than three generations old. The first generation lived like soldiers in such shelter as they could contrive. The second generation built the house. The third generation entered into the inheritance. The house is after fifty years now about to perish. It was built merely at the cost of human labour given freely. To replace it in these mercenary times would require an expenditure of three thousand dollars. It cannot

FOX RANCHERS.

(1) During the last four or five years it was almost impossible to obtain strictly high grade Fox Wire, but lately this has all changed. By booking our order last winter for thousands of rolls of Special "Red Label" Fox Netting with the largest manufacturers in the British Empire we have obtained a special netting which has extra twists in the meshes, as this makes it stronger. It has been heavily galvanized with pure spelter after weaving which solders all the meshes together. Each roll hangs without bagging or sagging, and is guaranbe replaced, for the material is no longer available. The wood is gone, the little mills have disappeared, the dams are broken, and the streams run unimpeded to the sea, laughing at man's short attempt to restrain them.

 Worse still, craftsmanship has disappeared. In those days men learned trades by exercising their hands. One man acquired a gift in stone; another in wood; another in iron. They exchanged their gifts in the time spared from the production of food. Women fibred with knowledge. It comes to him in the price of every article he buys. It is he who pays the inflated wages of which he reads. It is he who pays for the silk shirts which city laborers wear, who provides entertainment for their families, and supports them in idleness for sixteen hours out of the twenty-four.
