The Hotel, Dufferin, St John, issued for Christmas and New Year's what were perhaps the handsomest menu cards in the Dominion. The former, printed in red and green, had as a cover a beautiful winter scene encircled by a conventional holly border the whole being set off by The Dufferin Coat of Arms handsomely embossed in gold. The New Year's menu took the form of a folder, the cover representing a daintily colored embossed flower, with the seasons greeting in black letters on a white ground making an appropriate souvenir. To tell of the merits and nicety of the items comprising the menu is beyond power to describe as every conceivable delicacy known to culinary art was represented and as in the past the chef entered into the spirit of the season and this year surpassed all former attempts. The proprietors, Forester, Bond & Co., and the manager, John H. Bond, are to be heartily congratulated on the excellence of their taste.
