Premiership

The premiership. Communists indicated they might abandon their previous policy of supporting Popular Front Governments without accepting portfolios in them. When the Chautemps Cabinet was formed last June 21, in succession to Loeu's Government, the Communists indicated they would be willing to enter the Government, but no portfolios were offered them.

Most of the Radical-Socialist leaders, beginning with the President of the Chamber of Deputies, Edouard Herriot, and retiring Premier Chautemps, saw L-brun during the day. Herriot and Chautemps both declined the task of forming a new ministry.

Defence Minister Edouard Daladier also declined, explaining that his work in the defence ministry was too important to permit interruption.

Blum, Socialist leader and head of the first Popular Front ministry, saw L-brun after conferring with his party colleagues, but declined to make any press statement.

France's request that the League Council meeting be postponed was made with the concurrence of Great Britain. Representatives of the member-states in the council were expected to agree, in which case the session opening will be deferred to Wednesday, Jan. 25.

Joseph Avoval, League secretary-general, began consulting the council members in Geneva as soon as he received the Quai D'Orsay's request.

Address On British Rule In India

Miss Estelle Bowness, teacher at Summerside High School, gave a most interesting address on British rule in India at the I. O. D. meeting this month.

Tracing the history of India back to 1492, Miss Bowness stated that Portugal was the first Christian country to get a foothold in India. They were followed by the Dutch. Both nations had established a good trade with India before merchant adventurers from England visited the country.

The story of England's domination of India is a fascinating story with it is strange to say, pepper as the chief ingredient. During the time of Queen Elizabeth 1558 to 1603 one of the things most in demand in Europe was pepper. The Dutch at the time were the chief traders in pepper from India. They were seeking a fair profit on this commodity and thinking they had the monopoly they doubled the price. British merchants protested but the Dutch refused to make concessions so the English merchants obtained a charter from Queen Elizabeth to form a company and built ships and opened up trade between India and England. This was the beginning of the East India Company in 1600. They drove out the Dutch and established themselves in Surat, Madras, Bombay and Calcutta.

The British India divided into many principalities, with Mohamadan and Hindu as the chief powers. So many varieties of race, language and caste had prevented the growth in India of any sentiment of nationality or patriotism which would lead to some extent, India's acceptance of foreign rule.

In the 18th century the French established trading posts in Southern India and for some time there was considerable rivalry between the English and French with several skirmishes between them.

Warren Hastings, another noted Englishman assisted in a tremendous degree to establish British rule in India.

Gradually over a long period of time and by any struggles the Indian people began to accept the English as their rulers and Queen Victoria established good feeling by issuing a proclamation to Indian Princes and the people of India "to respect the rights, dignity and honours of native princes as her own."

But British rule to accept in any wise favoured, molested or discriminated by reason of their religious faith and that her subjects of whatever race or creed be admitted to office in her service.

From that time on India began to develop and is now on the way to self government but this must be slow because of the many millions out of the 350 millions in India who can neither read nor write, in spite of the many schools and colleges now in India.—S

Regals Down Capitols 3-2

A fast and close-checking game of hockey was played in the Alberton rink Thursday night between the Alberton Regals and the Summerside Capitols. The Regals won by a 3-2 score.

The first period opened with a bang, the Regals scoring in the first minute of play and again at the five minute mark. The Regals had the edge on the Capitols who were saved again and again by Ted Aherne. Early in the second the Regals scored again making the score 3-0. The Capitols started clicking and B. I. Rayner counted two goals in quick succession.

The third period started and ended fast. The Capitols, determined to even up the score, fought hard and missed many good scoring chances through over-anxiousness. The Alberton team succeeded in holding them down until the bell indicated the game was over. Referee Lefurgy kept the game well in hand.
