Mount Allison Federated Alumni Annual Meeting

The Charlottetown Club of the Mount Allison Federated Alumni held its annual dinner meeting in the Queen Hotel on Tuesday evening, May 20. Immediately following the dinner Miss Pauline Simmonds sang two delightful solos. Dr. H. C. Rice then gave an interesting sketch of Mount Allison during his student days, and he challenged the youth of today not only to live in the present but also to keep alive the traditions of the past.

After another solo by Miss Simmonds the retiring vice-President, Col. L. T. Lowther gave a brief outline of the year's activities. He commented particularly on the success of the building campaign, and extended the thanks of the Club to Mr. Justice Tweedy who organized the campaign.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read by the acting secretary, Miss Vera Simpson.

In giving the treasurer's report Miss Verna Wood stated that the net proceeds of the concert were $92.62, and the credit balance in the bank is now $87.37. Forty seven members have paid their dues.

Mr. C. H. Black, chairman of the nominating committee brought in the following nominations which were duly accepted:

President, Major E. S. Chandler.

Vice President, Miss Dorothy Auld.

Auditor, Mr. C. H. Black.

Directors, Rev. T. E. MacLennan, Dr. H. C Rice, Mr. L. W. Shaw, Mrs. A. G. Putnam, Miss Verna Wood, and Miss Isabel Clawson.

Mr. Henry Sherren, City, is undergoing treatment at the P. E. Island Hospital. His many friends hope for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Percy Landrigan, School Street, is a patient in the City Hospital recovering from a painful accident, when she fell in her home recently, fracturing a bone in her foot.

Mrs. J.A. Bernard wife of His Honour the Lieut.-Governor left Tuesday for Boston to visit her brother Mr. Charles Chiasson of Summerville, Mass. who is seriously ill. She was accompanied by her son Ralph of the Provincial Bank staff. Mrs. Bernard will be the guest of her daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) Eric C. Loth of Jamaica Plains. Lieutenant Governor Bernard motored as far as Moncton where Mrs. Bernard and Ralph continued the journey by train.

Local Girl Flier Makes Solo Flight

Irene MacNutt, lately of Summerside, now living in Charlottetown, on May 8th. took her first flying lesson. Yesterday, just under two weeks later, Mrs. MacNutt made her first solo flight. This gives her the honor of being the first girl on Prince Edward Island to start and complete a flying course.

Hearing of the free course being given away to some lucky local girl, but being exempt from entering the draw with her husband being a partner in Paul's Flying Service, Irene couldn't resist the desire to fly, so she started taking instruction from Len MacDonald the day after the other girls started to fly. Then with just eight hours and thirty minutes of instruction made her first trip in the air alone. In front of quite a gallery of well wishing spectators, Irene brought the plane into a perfect three point landing.

This Saturday at two o'clock another girl will learn that she will get a complete course in flying to her first solo as well as a lucky gentleman, when Captain Burke will draw two lucky numbers at the administration building at the Airport.

KINSMEN CONVENTION

Peebles, district Bulletin editor.

Among the national officers expected for the convention are A.J. Kirby, Moncton, National President; J. Edward Murphy, Moncton, National Secretary; and H.J. Buchanan, Moncton, National treasurer.

Business Sessions

The sessions proper will get underway Friday morning at 9 o'clock followed by a business meeting and a luncheon at which His Honour Lieut.-Governor J.A. Bernard, Premier J. Walter Jones and His Worship Mayor B. Earle MacDonald will be guests. Guest speaker will be Dr. J.A. MacMillan

Included in opening day's program will be a Canada-wide broadcast by the National President and also a local broadcast by the District Governor.

A business session and election of officers will follow Saturday morning and at a luncheon Mr. L.W. Shaw, Director of Education will be guest speaker. The convention will conclude with a Kinsmen's Governor's Ball Saturday night.

The Kinsmen Association came into being about 27 years ago and District No. 7 in the year 1936. There are about 7,000 members and about 180 clubs in Canada and Newfoundland.

An interesting sidelight to the convention here will be the visit of the Kinsmen Callow wheel chair carrier. It is a motor coach especially designed and equipped to accommodate amputees, crippled children, parlaytics etc. It is the consummation of the ideas of Walter Callow a veteran of World War one who is himself blind and paralyzed. It is only one of many ways in which Walter Callow of Camp Hill Hospital has sought to make life more liveable for those more fortunate than he. Only last winter, through the assistance of the Halifax Kinsmen Club, a special pavillion to accommodate disabled war veterans was dedicated at the Halifax Forum. During the war years, he fathered what later became known as the "Callow Cigarette Fund" for troops overseas.

"MIDDLE OF EARTH"

The Mediterranean Sea was so called by the early Latins because they believed it to be "the middle of the earth."

Egg Receipts Continue Heavy

Egg receipts continue heavy, it was reported in the Dominion Department of Agriculture egg and poultry market report issued yesterday. A slight decrease in quality is noticeable. Dealers continue to ship bulk of supplies to the Special Products Board, seven carlots having been delivered last week, three for export, three for driers. There is no change in prices.

P.E.I. stations are quoting for ungraded eggs delivered: A Large 32 1-2-33; A Medium 30 1-2-31; B 23 1-2-26 1-2; C 18-21.

Graded shipments delivered Charlottetown: A Large 37 1-2; A medium 35 1-2; B 30; C 23.

Specialized producers are receiving for cartoned pack: A Large 40-1; A Medium 38-9; A Pullet 33.

Poultry receipts are light. A few broilers are being packed. An earlier marketing of cull hens is anticipated due to shortage of feed.

QUERIES MINISTER

question by the Government.

Explaining the purpose of his question to The Guardian's Ottawa correspondent, Mr. McLure said he was altogether in favor of a fairly paid and not overworked Civil Service. He viewed with apprehension, however, any mass movement in Ottawa bureaucratic circles to reduce the number of hours of work down to 32 and a half weekly.

Moreover, Mr. McLure said, any reduction of Civil Service hours is a matter which should be threshed out on the floor of Parliament itself and not put through by order-in-council at a time when the House is not sitting.

"I believe in fair treatment and fair working hours for everyone in this country," Mr. McLure said. "I also believe in a fair day's work and a fair day's pay.

What Taxpayers Think

"I wonder," he added, "what our farmers would think and what our fishermen would think of a Civil Service with a thirty-two and a half hour working week, and what they think is most important since they as all others in this country pay the taxes which support the Civil Service."

The Queen's member takes the stand that the Government should itself be a model employer insofar as possible, setting an example to private enterprise. He foresaw a danger in going too far, however, and voiced doubt if civil servants in Ottawa and elsewhere would earn the salaries they are now paid if their working hours were only six and a half hours a day for five days out of seven.

"I'm very glad Mr. Gibson put the quietus on this report of Government approval of a five-day week in the Civil Service at this time," he said. "I'd be very glad also to have opinions from farmers, fishermen and other workers in Prince Edward Island as to what they think of a thirty-two and a half hour week in the Government service."

Premier To Appear Before Transportation Board Meeting Here

Commenting on the meeting in Charlottetown on May 30th of the Board of Transport Commissioners, Premier J. Walter Jones said yesterday that, in his opinion, three of the major questions which would be discussed before the Board here were potato freight rates, grain freight rates, and fertilizer rates.

Any increase in freight rates at this time would mean an increase in the Province's fiscal needs, the Premier said. It was his intention, he said, to appear before the Board.

The Premier suggested that all those having views to express on any or all of the questions should present them before the proper tribunal which, he said, was the Board of Transport Commissioners.

Body Of Missing Rocky Point Man Found Yesterday

A body identified as that of the late Stewart MacNeill, Rocky Point, was discovered yesterday floating in the harbour off the blockhouse.

The discovery was made by Mr. Glen Campbell, a Charlottetown fisherman, who was on his way to St. Peter's Island, but who immediately returned to the Marine Wharf from where he notified the R.C.M.P.

Coroner Dr. J.D. MacGuigan, upon being satisfied with the identity of the body, pronounced an inquest unnecessary.

The body was taken to the MacLean Funeral Home. The funeral will be held privately today to the People's Cemetery.

The late Mr. MacNeill left his home at Rocky Point after dinner on Monday, March 10, to walk across the harbour ice to do some shopping in the City. The following Friday a cap and some groceries were found lying near a hole in the ice.

It was the opinion of neighbors that the late Mr. MacNeill had broken through a thin spot in the ice while on his way back from the City.

AGREEMENT WITH

other shipments, domestic or export. If ordinary commercial newsprint shipments to Argentina continue, and I have no reason to believe they will not, the amount of Canadian newsprint going to that country will be somewhat greater than last year, but slightly below the 1940-45 level."

To avoid complications, the Canadian Government was instructing the crown-owned Canadian Commercial Corporation to buy newsprint from all the Canadian producers, in amounts depending on their production, and sell it to Argentina.

Mr. Abbott said one contract for 9,000 tons of edible fats was already signed and negotiations for another 9,000 tons were well advanced. Without saying what the exact price would be, he stated it would be higher than last year but below open market quotations.

Tells Of Difficulties

He told of the difficulties Canada had been facing in obtaining essential supplies of edible oils. The international allocation committee had agreed to allow Canada to import the same amount as last year but this had not solved the problem.

"Some of the sources from which we drew heavily last year are no longer available to us; and our need for imports is greater because domestic production of lard and other animal and marine oils and fats is running below last year's levels," said Mr. Abbott.

"We have been confronted by a very difficult and serious situation. If certain negotiations had fallen through, we should have found ourselves lacking nearly half of our imports of edible oils. Moreover, since the larger part of our domestic supplies not not become available until later in the year, the full impact of the shortage would have fallen in the summer months.

"Less than half of the normal supplies would have been available. Important industries would have been completely disorganized, particularly the baking industry. Shortening for household purposes would virtually have disappeared from retail stores."

To meet this situation the negotiations had been undertaken with Argentina, one of the most important sources available.

Mr. Abbott told John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) Argentina had not asked that she be allowed to send aircraft here.

Replying to Harry Jackman (PC—Toronto Rosedale), the Minister said he had no information about the price at which the newsprint would be sold to the Argentine.

14 NURSES GRADUATE

loma, each nurse had the badge, symbolic of her graduation, pinned on her breast by Miss Mae King, superintendent of nurses at the Charlottetown Hospital. A corsage of roses was presented to each graduate by Miss Anna MacAdam.

Singers heard at the ceremony included Miss Frances Hennessey who sang "The Bluebirds of Happiness" and the Rev. Bernard Gillis who rendered "My Old Countree" and "The Old Plaid Shawl."

The valedictory was delivered by Miss Dorothy MacInnis.

The address to the graduates, excerpts of which follow, was delivered by Judge C. St Clair Trainor

"Down through the centuries wherever the Christian missionaries went, hand in hand with them went bands of holy men and women with lives dedicated to the service of God in caring for the sick and needy. It is an historical fact, almost incredible, that within 32 years after the landing of Christopher Columbus at San Salvador the first hospital in all America was erected in Mexico City: a structure so wonderful that it is still rated as one of the most beautiful hospitals ever built on this continent, and there it stands to our day but, because of religious persecution in Mexico, it is no longer used for hospital purposes.

"But do we need to travel to distant lands and read the history of peoples to us but little known? Turn the pages of our own country's history and there learn how the Jesuit Missionaries appealed to the people of Old France to provide them with a hospital to care for the sick of the Indian Tribes, and learn too, that on the 4th day of May 1639 there left the now famous Port of Dieppe a small band of Hospital Nurses of the Augustine Order, to perform their labor of service, their labor of love amongst the simple, suffering Algonquin Indians in the wilds of the Colony of Quebec.

Island Pioneer

"And then draw nearer home and read the history of this Island Province, this Island Diocese, and here you will find the same Christian idea "the Brotherhood of Man" which prompted St. Basil the Great to build his Basiliead at the outskirts of Caesarea, more than 1500 years later, impelled the Venerable Bishop McIntyre to establish, in the heart of his cathedral city, the first hospital in the Province of Prince Edward Island.

"That great and noble leader of men, who had already provided so much in the way of educational facilities in the establishing of Notre Dame Convent, St. Joseph's Convent and St. Patrick's School, which still stand to this day as monuments to perpetuate his memory, yet ever ready to lead his people in Christian progress, in 1879 brought here from the City of Quebec six Sisters of Charity to found the Charlottetown Hospital.

"And those good Sisters and their successors, known as the Grey Nuns, were familiar and well beloved figures in and about this City for more than half a century, when they were succeeded by the Sisters of St. Martha, under whose management a Nurses' Training School was established, thus giving you the facilities for your training and the privilege of calling the Charlottetown Hospital your Alma Mater.

Practical Christianity

"A cursory perusal of history should make it apparent to all that the care and nursing of the sick has always been and still is a practical application of the teachings of Christianity and one of the great and noble efforts of the Catholic Church. But, perhaps, I hear you say as others have said: "We are not garbed in religious habit. We are not of the Augustians of Dieppe, or the Grey Nuns of Quebec or even the Sisters of St. Martha of Prince Edward Island. We are a lay organization and we owe our origin to Florence Nightingale'.

"That calls for a story in itself and one much too long to be inflicted upon you at this time. Some historical observations are necessary. We glean from the pages of history that wherever the Missionaries went and wherever the Church flourished, there, too, under the control and management of Monks and Nuns, were founded hospitals, orphanages and other humanitarian institutions for the care of God's afflicted and for the care of the needy and sick. And so inspiring were the works of those institutions that men and women of wealth and power showered upon them gifts of lands and gold. Within those institutions were found the centres of culture and learning and the social service organizations of the time. But the day came when their wealth and possessions came under the covetous eyes of ambitious and greedy men who confiscated their holdings and endowments and left their feeble and helpless inmates to the mercy of charitable persons or to a death from privation in some wayside ditch.

Years Of Decadence

"Of course, hospitals continued as institutions, but, bereft of the influence of religion and charity and the patronage of the genteel and noble ladies of the land their services were doomed to decadence and decay. And hand in hand with the decadence of the hospital services went the decadence of the nursing profession. No longer were women drawn to the profession from the love to serve; the majority who took up nursing did so as a last resort after they had failed in everything else they had tried.

"They were women who were supposed to have lost any reputation that they had ever had and were on the downward path. The Charles Dickens' portrayal of Sairey Gamp in Martin Chuzzlewit is said by some to be a real portrayal of the public institution of the time and not an exaggerated caricature as one might be inclined to think.

"And the lay nurse of England as portrayed in Sairey Gamp, had her counterpart in the Public Institution Nurses of the United States in "The Ten Day Women", who were none other than unfortunate women brought before the Magistrates on a charge of being drunk or other unladylike conduct for which they were sentenced to ten days or ten dollars and not having the ten dollars were compelled to do the ten days in the work house, and when sufficiently sobered up were turned over to do nursing duty in the hospital side of the institution, their only training being the experience gained in caring for their, all too often, sick babies at home. The story is told that on one occasion when a young doctor was trying to instruct one of those ladies in the proper manner of caring for children she said to him in exasperation: 'Doctor d'ye think I don't know how to care for little ones? Sure I buried six of my own'.

Florence Nightingale

"Such was the condition of the public hospitals and the nursing profession in England as they attracted the attention of Florence Nightingale. That noble and talented lady, unlike the majority of women of her time, was deeply interested in hospitals and in the care and welfare of the sick. She visited hospitals frequently and being moved by their appalling conditions determined to bring about their reform. But realizing that she knew nothing about the management of hospitals and the care of the sick she determined to prepare herself for her work. She sought information from every reliable source. Her first place of training abroad was at the Deaconess' Home for the training of Nurses at Kaiserwerth in Germany where she remained for a few months.

"In the following year she went to Paris where she spent several months with the Sisters of St. Vincent De Paul, who at that time were amongst the greatest experts in hospital management in the world. After her visit to Paris she later had an opportunity to learn at first hand the work that was being done for the ailing poor of Ireland by the Sisters of Charity and of Mercy. So much impressed was she by the training received by the Sisters that she actually tried to obtain permission, while still remaining a non-Catholic, to wear the habit of the Sisters of Charity in their institution in Dublin that she might be able to receive the actual training of the Sisters.

'The reason which prompted that extraordinary request will be found in her own words addressed to Doctor Manning, later Cardinal Manning, to whom she wrote the following words in June of 1852: 'For what training is there compared with that of a Catholic Nun. Those who are not Sisters have not the chastened temper, the Christian grace, the accomplished loveliness and energy of the regular nun. I have something of the different kinds of Sisters and am no longer young, and do not speak from enthusiasm but from experience.

"'There is nothing like the training which the Sacred Heart or the Order of St. Vincent gives to women'.

"Remembering that the orders mentioned were the principal orders of Nursing Sisters of that day, let us, tonight, repeat those words as our very own and let us re-echo them with our applause as our tribute to the good Sisters of St. Martha for their zeal and efforts in relieving the sick and the suffering in this City and in this Province.

Sisters of Charity

"Would that this were an occasion and that I had the time to repeat to you the story of the accomplishments, on the Crimean battle fields, of Florence Nightingale and her noble band of nurses, ten of whom were Catholic Nuns, but that I must forego, except to briefly say that the comforts and relief which they brought to the suffering British soldiers were already being administered to their comrades, the soldiers of France by the Sisters of Charity who, as the London Times stated, 'had accompanied the expedition in incredible numbers'.

"After her return to England from the Crimea, Florence Nightingale again took up the work of hospital reform, and in the face of indifference, not only from the general public but from the medical profession as well, she did reform the public hospitals of England and had them staffed with nurses trained after her plan —the plan which she had learned from the Sisters of Charity. Her influence has been felt all over the English speaking world where her work has improved the lot of millions in need of hospital care

"Race, color, creed and even time can build no barriers between her and her rightful place amongst the noble women of English history, and millions of English men yet unborn will sing her praises and bless the day of her birth. Nevertheless, my friends, you are not the professional daughters of Florence Nightingale. You are, indeed, her professional sisters, because you have received your training and preparation for your work, as she received hers, from those who have dedicated their lives to the service of God in ministering to the sick.

Christian Foundation

"The period of your institutional training has almost come to an end. In a few weeks you will face the final examinations qualifying you to become Registered Nurses, and I have no fear that your examiners will find you wanting in knowledge. For, scientifically and practically, you have been taught and trained efficiently and well, but all that scientific knowledge and training would have been empty and barren and beneath your human dignity were it not for the sound Christian foundation which supported it all. During the period of your training the atmosphere of religion has pervaded its every phase and must have implanted within you a sound appraisal of real moral values. And what a shocking contrast there is in the world around you.

"Vast hordes of men and women have lost all appreciation of moral values and are no longer governed by moral principles. Men and even women, in their country's service, have dared to try to sell their country's secrets and safety to the enemies of our way of life. Capital and labor, the two great factors of our industrial life, tear at each other's throats while the nation's industries stand still and the innocent and helpless suffer privation and want. The divine and eternal laws of God are openly flouted and man's conduct in their violation is clothed with respectability by civil magistrates under man made legislation. The home, the very base of the nation, once the centre of social life and the very protector and teacher of the young is, today, but a place to eat and sleep, and for many not even that.

"Accost the child on the street at an hour far past his bed time and ask him, as I have done, why he is not home in bed, and you will be told, as I have been told, that there is no one home to care for them, all are away at the show. Yes, parents away from home at the show while their young boys and girls roam about the streets unprotected and uncontrolled. Is there any wonder that we have juvenile delinquents in our midst?

"But do we need to talk at length on those things which are so obvious to us all? You must face the world as you find it, but you have been taught moral values and moral principles and your success or failure in life will depend upon your appreciation of and your adherence to them. I do not need to mince words to you for you know and the world knows that from motives of selfishness and motives of expediency crimes against nature and humanity are committed by men and women of worldly culture in the name and under the very cloak of Mercy. But I charge you who have been taught and know moral principles to stand ever by them and remember this: the person who kills a human being in what is smugly called by the name of Mercy Killing, and the person, be he or she a parent, doctor or nurse, who destroys the life of an unborn child is just as much a murderer in the all-seeing eyes of God as is the foul and wicked thug who discharges his pistol shot into the brain of his victim and stoops to rob the bleeding corpse. In the discharge of your professional duties, make no compromise with unethical practices, but, in fashioning the structure of your professional career, hew strictly to the line of righteous conduct. It will repay you richly in your peace with God and your respectability with all mankind."
