SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Jan. 7-(CP)-Defence of several vital airports and vulnerable points in Britain's southern bulwark has been entrusted to the highland brigade-first formation of its kind in Canadian army history.

The 3rd division men, commanded by a Toronto Brigadier who led a central Ontario highland regiment into France and on again as the republic collapsed in June, 1940 went from English training camps to their important positions in the Canadian corps line.

Fighting in Malaya underlined the need for airport defence as an invasion of Crete did last spring and the Canadian Highlanders from Ontario, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island look on their new task as a valuable operational job.

In addition to these defence duties in areas with barbed wire and gun posts, the brigade is carrying out complete battle drill training like that being undertaken by other formations in the corps. Defence and training is directed from brigade headquarters in an ancient mansion hidden among the trees down a muddy air-raid defence Major W. S. Rutherford and Staff Captain Don Ross, both of Toronto, are the brigadier's two chief aides.

Lieut. William Burnett Two of the motor contact officers who maintain liaison with the battalions, are Lieuts. M. E. Clarke of Peterborough, Ont., and William Burnett of Charlottetown.

A Nova Scotia regiment has a major assignment in the defence Day and night plane sweep overhead, heading south with bombs and bullets for Germans. It is these aircraft and their air stations that the Canadians protect.

Maj. A. W. Mackenzie of Truro, N. S., is second in command of this regiment; and the adjutant is Capt. G. I. Smith also of Truro.

Major J. D. Stewart Day and night companies are prepared to spring into action under officers like Major S. E. Lewis of economy, N. S. K. R. Mitchell of Truro, D. F. Forbes of Sydney, N. S., and J. D. Stewart of Charlottetown, son of a former premier of Prince Edward Island; and Capt. Max MacRae of Pictou, N. S. An eastern Ontario regiment moved into a camp which looks like comfortable suburban areas near some Canadian city but guns and other weapons, trucks and Bren gun carriers shatter this illusion. It is these aircraft and their air stations that the Canadians protect.

Canadiens Club To re-organize

Revived interest in hockey for the younger teen-agers boys promises to produce some interesting games in the winter months. This season, emphasis will be placed on midget and juvenile players in an effort to keep the sport alive and assure plenty of talent for post-war competition. The Maritime Amateur Hockey Association will sponsor juvenile hockey in the Maritimes this winter, it has been announced. The association will back the move financially and organize provincial play-downs with the winners meeting for the Maritime crown. This will be the first season of organized juvenile hockey in these provinces.

As usual Prince Edward Island is expected to contribute its share of juveniles and true to past performance will probably be strong contenders for the three-province title. Charlottetown is expected to see a strong aggregation of players ranging from 16 to 18 to compete in this class. Midgets, ranging in age from 14 to 16, will also see plenty of action in the city if present plans materialize.

A meeting will be held at the Sporting Club this evening at 7:30 for the purpose of re-organizing the Canadiens Hockey Club. This club, when it begins functioning again, intends putting a juvenile and midget team in the running this year. Officers will be elected to guide the destiny of the club for the season and all interested in hockey are expected to be present. This is a chance for sport enthusiasts to get behind the youth of the city and encourage them in their efforts to keep Canada's national sport alive during the trying times of the present.

GUARDIAN SPORTING NEWS

Louis picked To win in four Rounds or less

By Sid Feder Associated Press Sport Writer NEW YORK, Jan. 7-(AP)-Joe Louis is considerably annoyed when another fighter dumps him out of the ring-especially when he lands on his head. He is also somewhat irked when he is accused of any foul tactics. And he is always put out at any kind of a "squat" from a rival. Buddy Baer did all of these things to the Bomber last May before Joe stopped his challenge in six rounds. Louis isn't angry at the big easy-going Californian, but he doesn't want such a matter as this to stand in the books without a car out settlement. So he figures on walking out in Madison Square Garden's ring Friday night and belting Buddy over-rapidly. This corner believes he'll do it just that way, and that Buddy will be figured on hand when the song sounds for round four. These return engagements have always been more or less fatal for fighters who've survived one go with Louis. Max Schmeling tried. Arturo Godoy crowded and crouched for 15 rounds in his first ride on the merry-go-round. The second time Joe turned out the lights in half that distance. Bob Pastor rode a bicycle the route once. Next trip to the post he was floored six times, and then the roof fell in. Of course, an accident can happen this time. Buddy is big and strong and apparently unafraid of playing with the Bomber's dynamite a second time. He has that right hand that tagged Joe last spring, and he could conceivably pull the trigger on it again. But if anything, he's going to find himself working in a different dancing partner this time. Joe has a peeve on it hasn't been safe, up to now, to try to knock a chip off his shoulder.

Postpone mailing Canucks & Aces Of '42 contracts Win twin bill

NEW YORK, Jan. 7-(AP)-Because of the war Brooklyn Dodgers have decided to postpone mailing 1942 contracts to the National Hockey League until next month, but most other clubs insisted to carry out their usual "business as usual" policy. The doubt of the Dodgers was explained by Secretary John McDonald. "We operate on a budget and in normal seasons we have a payroll of around $300,000. But right now I don't guess anyone knows what receipts to expect from next season and we're going to sit on the money until we know for sure." President Larry McPhee is trying to get the idea of including bonus clauses in the contracts of his players. McDonald added, so that their salaries would reflect whatever financial success the Dodgers might have next summer. MIDLAND, Ont., Jan. 7-(CP)-George Dudley, President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said today before leaving for Regina to attend a meeting of the association executive that senior and junior playoff dates for this season will be decided upon at the meeting. He said the C.A.H.A. ruled last spring at its annual meeting that the junior final will be held in the west this season with the senior final in the east. Another matter to come before the meeting was a report of the committee dealing with amateurs who have turned professional this season. The President said the Association's policy was to encourage amateurs by creation of elastic wartime regulations enabling clubs to replace easily players who have left to serve with the armed forces.
