LITTLE SYMPATHY FOR RUSSIA.

Russia's present humiliating position under other circumstances and if Russia were not what she is, would evoke the sympathy of the civilized world. It would be natural for us in Canada, or for the people of the United States, or Britain, to sympathize with a nation of white people in a conflict with a people of another color, or with a nominally Christian nation engaged in war with any pagan or non-Christian people. But Russia in her sore humiliation and trouble gets little or no sympathy, except what is extended to her suffering soldiers. The reason is not far to seek. Russian arrogance side by side with the most amazing incapacity furnishes the explanation in part.

Further explanation of the lack of sympathy for Russia among the free peoples of the earth is found in the fact that the present war is a war of the autocracy which refuses to recognize the ordinary rights of man; which denies and prohibits free speech; which holds the press in fetters and proscribes the right of petition; which has from the beginning pursued a course of aggression without any justification of morals or of necessity. Thousands and tens of thousands of the Russian people desire that Japan may prove victorious in the war because they hope that such result may hasten the coming of some semblance of freedom at home. Why then should not we desire to see Russia soundly whipped?

Napoleon and Bismarck were bullies, it has been said, but they were bullies with brains. And for the brainy bully, who by something more than mere brute force beats down or vanquishes his antagonist we may have a certain respect. But the Russian Government in this conflict has shown itself a great hulking, brainless tyrant, which oppresses its own subjects at home with the lash and the sword while abroad it is whipped in every battle on land and sea by an antagonist one third its size. Japan is a free country compared with Russia. Her people and Government are wholly united in carrying on the war. She has been neither arrogant nor boastful. She had just cause to draw the sword, and she has in battle and siege on land and sea made good her claim to all that she is fighting for. Such are some of the reasons why intelligent free people in every land extend their sympathy and approval to Japan and not to Russia.

HOME COMERS' WEEK.

The large attendance at the meeting last night to discuss the holding of an Home Week in Charlottetown this summer and the deep interest shown must be gratifying to the Tourist Association as well as to all others interested in the progress of the Province.

The sentiment was unanimous in favor of such a celebration and many valuable suggestions were given out by the different speakers. Those of Proprietor Sterns of the Victoria Hotel and Secretary Moule of the Y. M. C. A., should especially commend themselves. Mr. Sterns urged the necessity of providing amusement for tourists during each evening of the summer months by band concert in the Gardens or entertainments in the Market Hall or in the Opera House, etc. He clearly showed the prevailing need in this respect which is emphasized by the inquiries of tourists when in the city.

Mr. Moule urged the formation of Branch Associations to the P. E. I. Tourist and Development Association which would co-operate in mutual assistance. Such has been practiced with very beneficial results in Upper Canadian towns.

It was evident that, if the Home Week be carried out on the scale proposed, one week will be insufficient for the celebration which could easily be extended over a fortnight.

A telegram from Ottawa to the editor of The Guardian states that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will gladly receive the delegation of the Provincial Convention on Thursday morning. It may not be possible for the delegates all to reach Ottawa by that time, and this may call for a postponement, but it is expected that the delegates will be received in any case very shortly after their arrival.

SLIGHT SPRAINS GROW WORSE

Unless promptly treated, the great strength of Nerviline enables it to quickly cure all manner of sprains and strains. "I sprained my wrist," writes Leonard E. Milford of Rockland, "while working in the mill but had to lay off, it became so painful and swelled. I rubbed my wrist thoroughly with Nerviline twice a day and put on a bandage. The pain soon went away and frequent rubbing with Nerviline soon cured. Nerviline is undoubtedly an excellent ointment and the best pain reliever I ever used." Nerviline certainly is extra good. Price 25c.

SNAILS IN LONDON'S MENU.

Popular Food in the Restaurants of the Metropolis—Frogs a Dainty Against Which Prejudice Prevails.

In many London restaurants, particularly in Soho, says The London Globe, snails now figure on the daily menu. This is an imported taste from France, but in the West Country snails are highly esteemed by the lower classes. As a matter of fact, the snail is extensively eaten in Somerset and Gloucestershire, both as a dainty and a medicine. There are men who make a living by collecting snails and selling them under the name of "wall fish." Boiled in their shells they are picked out and eaten with bread and butter, being accounted a great luxury and very nourishing. In pulmonary diseases they are popularly ranked as a specific.

Frogs are a dainty which prejudice denies to the Englishman, though in the United States and Canada they are esteemed as highly as in France. Spasmodically a sturgeon is offered for sale in London, and the accident of its capture affords a novel dish which should not be passed by, for it is generally sold at 8d. a pound. Cut and cooked as a cutlet it tastes rather like veal, without a suspicion of fish about it.

In Germany bear's flesh is greatly favored, and smoked bear tongues, hams and sausages are both appetizing and expensive. Ever since Paris, in the siege of 1870-71, was driven to eating up the animals at the Zoo, camel's flesh has been demanded by French gourmets. Remarkably like beef in appearance, it is as tender as veal, and there are Parisians who import it regularly from Algeria. On the same testimony, lion steaks are reported to be only moderate eating, while tiger is both tough and sinewy. Jaguar flesh, however, is delightfully white and toothsome, and alligators and crocodiles provide a meal of the most delicate flavor midway between that of veal and pork.

Beef and mutton, with pork, so entirely make up the menu that lamb and veal are actually regarded as distinct dishes. Why should not goat flesh be introduced into the bill of fare? It is good eating, as Robinson Crusoe and Don Juan testify. In France it is largely eaten, Paris alone requiring 100,000 goats annually for the table. The donkey, whose flesh, when killed young, resembles that of the turkey, is of much finer flavor. Though a hippopotamic banquet arranged by the late Sir Henry Thompson was held in London some years ago, it is still almost dangerous to suggest horse flesh to an Englishman as food. In reality it is very excellent eating, and only prejudice can gainsay the fact. Old and worn-out horses cannot afford either nourishing or palatable meat, but that of a horse reared like an ox for the table, has a finer fibre and flavor than beef though darker in color. It is served in the best French restaurants, as well as being largely eaten by the people.

"It was in Paris," wrote Mr. Vandam, the author of "An Englishman in Paris," "that I learned how the dog had been misjudged. Call the dog the friend of man if you like, but don't eat him. Fry him, stew, boil or bake him, do what you will, his flesh is and remains oily and flabby, with a strong flavor of castor oil. But I declare that stewed puss is far finer than stewed rabbit."

Another neglected article of food is the guinea pig. Were the edible virtues of the hedgehog known it would rival ortolans in epicurean favor. As cooked in rural England, it is delicious. The correct way is to encase the hedgehog, bristles and all, with a thick coat of soft clay, and place it in the glowing embers of a fire to bake. The bristles and skin come off with the harden clay, leaving the tenderest and most delicate meat imaginable.
