A Morning Smile

"I hear you have been spreading reports that I am old enough to be your mother."

"How ridiculous! I merely remarked that I was young enough to be your daughter."

"Able," said Cohen, reproachfully, "you and I have been friends for many years, and yet you go to a bank when you need money. Able, you just go again to the bank and say that they should sign the note, and then Cohen will lend you the money!"

Little-Boy Husband Taxes Wife's Patience—How to be Popular With Girls—Girl Whose Fiance is "Fed up on Girls" Had Better Break Engagement

Dear Miss Dix—I have been married ten years and have a little son 8 years old. My husband and I love each other dearly and he is good, kind and generous to me, but he is the most restless person I ever saw, never willing to stay at home a single evening.

I am afraid of his influence on my boy. Won't he try to pattern his life after the daddy he loves so much? I know what I would do if I were the only one to be considered. I'd stay on with him and mother him forever.

And that is exactly what you'll do if you take my advice. Stay on with him and mother him to the end.

One of the hardest things in the world for women to realize is that men never grow up in the way we women do. When we are grown up, we are grown up. We are mature. There is nothing of the little girl left in us.

But men enjoy playing with mechanical toys; their idea of a good time is putting on their oldest and dirtiest clothes and going off camping and fishing, and almost all of them have at some time or other an irresistible desire to play hooky from their families just as they played hooky from school.

Undoubtedly, Mrs. Peter Pan has a trying time of it, for every woman wants a stable husband that she can tie to instead of a playboy who is just the biggest of her children. Also, a wife wants a fire-side companion instead of a roamer, but after all we have to take husbands as they come and there are plenty of worse faults than one can have than liking to step out and spend the evening with the boys.

I don't think you need worry about your son imitating his father's example in this respect. He may not have inherited his father's love of not, and anyway, as you have the rearing of him, you can housebreak him while he is young and teach him to be domestic.

Practically all young girls want to be told what beautiful eyes they have and how different they are from all other girls and how sophisticated they are and that you would take them for five years older than they are because they are so worldly and experienced.

And, of course, all girls like boys who are good dancers, good at sports, and who know how to do things and especially who know how to take care of them. So if you want to be popular with girls learn how to dance without tramping on their feet; learn how to help them into a car without jerking out their arms; learn how to put on an evening wrap without mussing up a new frock; learn how to get a girl through a crowd without being mauled and get a headwater to teach you how to order a dinner.

And, strange as it may seem to you, girls like to be treated with respect. Try it. It will be such a novelty that they will all fall for it.

Dear Miss Dix—I am engaged to a boy who treats me very coldly. I asked him what was the matter and he said he was just fed up on girls. What shall I do?

Give him his freedom. Tell him not to come around any more until he is hungry for your society.

Can your children out-smile you?

NOT if you have the feeling of youth... not if you get your daily supply of the vital elements that youth is made of: proteins, carbohydrates, minerals, vitamins.

SHREDDED WHEAT MADE IN CANADA BY CANADIANS OF CANADIAN WHEAT

So your best play for the independent girl is to get busy making the dates yourself, and when you take her out try to be as entertaining as you can.

Of course, there is no general rule for pleasing all girls. You have to vary your technique to suit the individual flapper, but, generally speaking, all girls are attracted to a boy who looks neat and tidy and well dressed.

Then girls like boys who have a line and who can start a conversation themselves without expecting the girl to supply the talk.

My Best Girl

"Well, in everything. The way you talk, the way you look, the way you act," he said.

"Oh, I wish—" she said elatedly—"I wish you could see the difference in our kitchen! Pop an' I ask each other every night, 'Is it ideal?' And we won't go to bed unless it is!"

It soothed him to have her so openly, so completely adoring. She thought him brilliant, she thought him well educated, she thought him wise and witty and lovable, when his own failed him.

And her laughter! The divine, the inimitable gift of mirth had been given her—Joe first thought Maggie pretty when first he saw her laugh. She lived in a delicious glow of it.
