and bad setback to their hopes of a very prosperous year.

The oven part of the factory has as its principal feature, the draw plate, an immense steel plate on which the biscuits are placed, and which is pushed into the oven proper and there meets with a flash heat of 600 degrees which gradually lowers in temperature to almost 500 through the moisture in the biscuits. The plate has buckled and the oven itself through the absorption of water by the brick construction, appears to be practically unfit for use. It is altogether likely that it will have to be entirely reconstructed.

The building will have to be almost entirely rebuilt while the biscuit of hand is so damaged by moisture that it will be impossible to use it for fox feed, as it would quickly develop mould which is absolutely poison to young puppies and even older foxes. Fortunately the company had in addition to the forty or more tons of biscuits in the factory an equal quantity in storage at Carter & Co.'s warehouse. This supply will last about a month, and as soon as the necessary adjustment of insurance is made, heroic measures will be taken to cope with the requirements of the future.

The Imperial Biscuit Co. was formed some years ago and has had a splendid career of manufacturing usefulness. The building just purchased, was erected by the late J.D. Laphorne. New structures and improvements were added to this, the total amount spent in that way being over $9,000. The new oven including installation, cost $4,500, mixers, cutters, motors, drying furnaces, grinding machines, etc., cost several thousand more.

The stock of biscuits and flour on hand totalled over $10,000. The insurance will only partially cover the loss.

The company has been an asset to the city of Charlottetown, through its constant employment of labor in manufacturing. In good years and bad they have carried on and their product has steadily gained in favor due to an unvarying reputation for high quality. The principal shareholders are: Mr. W. C. S. McLure, president; Lt. Col. D.A. MacKinnon, secretary treasurer; Messrs W. K. Rogers, Gordon MacMillan, Leigh Warren, Roy Clarke, directors. Mr. M. Ross Bethune has been the business manager ever since the inception of the company.

PERSONALS

Rev. Clarence MacKinnon D. D., Principal of the Divinity Hall, Pine Hill Theological Seminary, leaves this afternoon for Kensington, where he will deliver a lecture. While in the city, he has been the guest of Mr. James Paton and Mrs. Paton.

Miss Clara Graham, one of our popular and talented musicians who has been playing in the Prince Edward Theatre for some time past, has resigned her position and is leaving shortly for Nova Scotia. Before leaving, however, she has kindly consented to sing at the play "The Road Back" to be presented in the Prince Edward Theatre Monday and Tuesday next, in aid of the Prince Edward Island Orphanage.

"SINS OF THE FATHERS" HAS POWERFUL THEME; PATRONS ENTHUSED

With the coming of each new Emil Jannings picture, local theatregoers have fallen into the habit of becoming spellbound while the artist gives one of his characterizations. The sensation is not amiss with his latest Paramount starring film entitled "Sins of the Fathers", which opened yesterday at the Prince Edward Theatre.

For approximately two hours the opening night audience was thrilled from beginning to end while Jannings gave his newest characterization. The story has a powerful theme.

Jannings, in the role of a German-American, Wilhelm Spengler, starts as a waiter, becomes a saloon keeper, then a rich bootlegger, followed by a prison term in which he acts as a waiter, and upon release falls back to the vocation of a waiter again. This time in a picnic garden. Through out he plays the kind of a man that American audiences know. He plays the part of a man that every sympathizer can understand and sympathize with.

The sensational theme of bootlegging is handled in a way to which no one will object, because the picture does not glorify the criminal aspects of bootlegging. On the other hand, bootlegging brings intense tragedy to Jannings' life.

The famous actor has a notable supporting cast headed by Ruth Chatterton, the well known stage actress. Others in the cast are Za-Su Pitta, who has become one of the screen's greatest tragediennes; Barry Norton, Jean Arthur, Jack Luden, Matthew Betz, Harry Cording, Arthur Housman and Frank Reicher, Ludwig Berger, who recently made his American debut with Pola Negri in "The Woman from Moscow", directed the sensational film.

Boys Murder 80 Year Old Woman

PARIS, May 1.—A murder mystery which has been puzzling the police of Paris for about a week has cleared up by one of the most astounding confessions in recent French criminal history.

Mme. Barry, 80 years of age, who had lived alone in a cottage at Vaucresson village, near Versailles, was discovered dead in bed. Her head had been battered with a piece of steel piping which lay on the bed.

Police investigations were without result till they learned that a boy of 14, Emile le Guel, a shop messenger, had disappeared from Vaucresson.

They were at first declined to believe that a youth of that age could have committed such a brutal murder.

Search was, nevertheless, made for Emile, and it was discovered that he and another youth (Louis Helle, aged 16) were in prison in Paris having been arrested as young vagabonds.

At first they would admit nothing. But, presently they told the story of their "adventure."

Le Guel, disliking work, and with 200 francs from his master's till, left Vaucresson "to enjoy himself in Paris." Here he met Helle, who had been a messenger in the Rouen cafe and had also come to Paris, two weeks ago, for a similar reason.

They quickly spent the 200 francs. Then Helle suggested that they must carry out some other coup to secure some more money.

Le Guel told him of Mme. Barry—how she lived alone, must have just drawn her pension, and always had money in the house. The house would, he argued, be easy to burgle. He knew because as a messenger boy he had often been there.

"Our Coup," Le Guel calmly told the police, "was the murder of Mme. Barry. Yes, we did it!"

The two youths were taken to Vaucresson "to reconstruct the crime"—according to French police customs. Strong forces of police had to be sent to the village, which was in a state of great excitement. When the boys arrived, escorted by detectives, they were received with salvos and curses.

On the spot, Le Guel was asked to tell his story—which he did with complete calm.

"We got here about 9.30 on Tuesday night. We had thought of Monday, but that was a holiday, and there would have been too many people about. I opened the garden gate—like that—and we went quickly into the garden. There we found a piece of steel piping. But we were neither of us tall enough to reach to the window. Happily we saw a ladder, and we put it against the wall below the window. I went up first and found the window was held shut only by a piece of string. Helle came up with his knife and cut it. We entered and lighted a candle. The light awakened the old woman, and Helle, with the piece of piping in his hand dashed towards the bed, and struck Mme. Barry with all his strength on the head. Then he searched the room for the money, while we were doing so the old woman became conscious and Helle attacked her again, hitting her on the head with the piping—twice ten times and twenty times."

"How much money did you find?" asked the inspector.

"Only 12 francs" (about 50 cents) said Le Guel coolly.

"Then we fled and went by train to Paris where we were arrested as we had no papers and no money."

Warm Tribute

which is mortal and to pay a last tribute of respect and affection to the memory of one who lived among us so long and well. For, when the summons came to Colonel Frederick Strong Moore, he had passed considerably beyond the eightieth milestone in the journey of his life, and that long period was carried out so splendidly that those of us who knew him were made to feel the richness of the ministry of his winsome friendship. We were made to see, personified in him, faithful and efficient citizenship. Beyond all else, and we believe, controlling all else, he was a humble and faithful follower and servant of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"Almost throughout his entire life the late Colonel Moore was a member of this church, which he loved with a love in which there was passion, and which he served with all the splendid energies and abilities of his life. Nearly every position in this church was filled by him. For many years he was Superintendent of the Sunday School, a member of the Music Committee and always deeply interested in this part of the worship of Almighty God; a director in the School of Music; a member of the Trustee Board; and a former member of the Official Board then known as the Quarterly Board; for Colonel Moore was an ardent Methodist until 1925 when he became just as ardent a member of the great United Church.

"But his interests were not confined to the church. In the realm of citizenship we knew him as a member of the great banking fraternity and as a citizen always deeply and actively interested in everything which he believed to be for the welfare of the community, and especially we found that principle of citizenship emphasized in his zeal for the defense of his country. Colonel Moore was always the soldier, and in the realm of the military he was ever an enthusiast. For many years he was a leader and commander, and although he had, because of the infirmity of the flesh, to take a retired position, yet in spirit and interest he was ever heart and soul with those who fought in the defense of their country.

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER

"But today we are thinking of him not so much as a soldier of Canada and of our great Empire, but as a soldier and servant of the Lord Jesus Christ. For it was from the King of Kings and Lord of Lords that the 1st summons came. It found him ready, and to this command he gave a cheerful and willing obedience. With all his spiritual and mental faculties fresh and strong he ceased at once to work and live, yet we cannot feel today that this is what we call death. There is no element of tragedy or loss here. It is simply promotion! He has changed the life militant for the life triumphant; he has ceased from his labours, but his works shall follow him.

"Our warmest sympathy goes out to those who were knit to him in the ties of kinship. For rich as was the friendship of Colonel Moore, and great though his interest in his country was and in his church, yet it was in the home circle that the best of the man was seen, and we can understand something of the sense of loneliness and loss in the home circle today. Our sympathy and our prayers go out earnestly to the bereaved members of the family, that they may find comfort in time of need. To those of us who knew him well and treasured the richness of his winsome friendship there is also that sense of loss, and we cannot but feel that earth is poorer for a little while."

"This hard to part when friends are dear—
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, a tear;
—Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time;
Bid me Good Morning!
Say not Good Night,—but in some brighter light."

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., May 1.

—Worse and more of it was the phrase used this morning by marine men in describing the grain congestion here which is more serious than ever. Ten upper lake vessels are tied up with a total of about 3,898,000 bushels of grain. The elevator is jammed with 3,000,000 bushels and there is no relief in sight.

As a matter of fact there is a strong possibility of things becoming worse for on the way are four more upper lakers with another 1,304,000 bushels. No alleviation being in sight the crews of several of the boats were paid off yesterday. This leaves a host of unemployed men in town as they will wait until the vessels are ready to sail and return on again.

INTERESTING

and the foot notes are at the top of the page. In Japan, when they put a horse into his stall, they back him in.

On the old Japanese clocks, the face turns and not the hands. Ladies delight to tell their age, and wish to become old, as age is more honorable. And funeral processions are dressed in white.

The Ainu, after the Neolithic men are the primitive inhabitants of the country. They are hairy skinned people, who live at present in the north of the islands.

There are two types of the modern Japanese—the round faced Yamatas, whose early home was the Malay Peninsula, and the slant eyed Mongols, from the grass lands of Asia. These two races have been fused into one people.

Two great religions blended make the Japanese civilization. They are Shintoism—the natural worship of the Sun Goddess, whose place is taken today by the Emperor. The other is Buddhism.

Dr. MacKinnon described the conference in Tokio of Christianity, Buddhism and Shintoism, to see what could be done to preserve the morals of the Japanese people against the advance of materialism. The speaker was much pleased with the tenor of the resolutions passed at that conference.

Next after Shintoism came Buddhism—which took its origin, five hundred years before Christ, in the pure life of the great Hindu teacher, Buddha. Buddhism reached Japan about 700 A.D. and after early quarrels, Shintoism and Buddhism composed their differences and settled down peacefully together.

Until 1868, through Buddhist influences, the Shoguns—a band of Japanese nobles—succeeded in getting the Emperor to renounce his political power and to go into innocuous retirement, presumably wrapped in the contemplation of Nirvana—Buddhism being a religion of thought rather than action. However, in the year named above, the Emperor emerged and once more became a factor in politics.

In 1853, Admiral Perry of the United States opened the door to Japan. He was followed by the British, and very soon many Christian missions were established throughout the land.

Dr. MacKinnon then exhibited some very interesting lantern slides in illustration of his further remarks. Some of these illustrated the picturesque costumes worn by the Japanese ladies. It appears that in Japan when dancing is indulged in, it consists of movements of the arms and hands, and the inevitable fan, and poses of the figure. The dancers do not touch each other, as this sort of thing transgresses Japanese standards of good taste and propriety. Thus for instance, a Japanese lady remarked in regard to the western custom of kissing "Oh, yes, I did hear that in the west they licked each other like dogs!"

A vote of thanks to the speaker of the evening was moved by His Honour Judge Stewart and seconded by Mr. S. A. MacDonald.

GREAT PROSPERITY FOR LABRADOR FORECAST

BOSTON, May 1.—Labrador will yet know great industrial prosperity, according to Dr. Harry L. Paddon, co-worker in Labrador of the famous Sir Wilfred Grenfell. Dr. Paddon, who is visiting Boston, said it is the immediate task of the Grenfell organization to prepare the residents of Labrador to take their places in the industrial structure that is to come.

"Labrador is a country of the future," he declares. "It is another Alaska."

"Back of the granite shell of the coast are vast forests, great rivers and waterfalls, one of them having five times the head of water of Niagara." Furthermore, he asserts, there are big mineral deposits, iron, copper and possibly precious metals. Dr. Paddon points out that Labrador is not a far-away place. It is within convenient shipping distance from Canada, the United States and even Europe. He believes these factors are bound to attract industry to the region.

Referring to previous attempts at industry, he said some of those efforts were premature and some were not bona fide, "but when the time is ripe, industry will move in and develop the country."

At present the International Grenfell Association is striving to prepare the natives, largely descendants of early settlers from Scotland and England, for the coming industrial era.

Sir Wilfred, when he began his work in Labrador in 1892, found many of the residents living under much the same primitive conditions as the first settlers. Fishing was virtually the only industry on the rock-bound. There was no resident physician. During the past 36 years a chain of hospital centers has been created in Labrador and northern Newfoundland. Dr. Paddon declares that care is being taken to make those cared for self-supporting, and not the objects of charity.

Patients in hospitals are enabled to earn money by carving wood and ivory and painting toys, book ends and ornaments they create. Women supplement the family income by making hooked rugs and making various garments suitable for wear in a rigorous climate. The Grenfell Association markets these products without profit to the organization in the United States, England and America.

Dr. Paddon declares that Labrador possesses fertile land away from the coast, where green vegetables, roots and livestock can be successfully raised and where berries grow abundantly. Several agricultural stations have been established. The new $200,000 hospital at St. Anthony, built by local labor, has demonstrated that a portion of the population at least is receiving instruction in the trades, such as carpentering, masonry and plumbing. The hospital was built under supervision of two citizens who years ago
