LITTLE SILVER FRILLS ON AFTERNOON FROCKS

PARIS, Feb. 10—Little silver frills are seen today on some of the afternoon frocks. These frocks are chiefly those made quaintly in "period" style. Taffeta is often used, in some pale shade of blue or rose on which the silver frills look their best.

Small Hat Improved.

PARIS, Feb. 10—One of the small hats so popular today make up for the trim snugness of its crown by a long tab of felt or stiffened velvet on one side. This comes down over the ear, as if it were an elongation of the crown, and extends far below the shoulder, ending in a stiff ribbon frill, laid on the Plump.

NEW YORK Feb. 10—It will be a hard season for the plump, if they try to wear some of the extraordinary printed silks and cottons offered today for spring frocks. Stripes running around are the feature and bold, though conventionalized designs in glaring greens and reds and blues are another. The result is a good deal like a magazine cover.

The Girl Who Had No Chance

By MARION RUBINCAM

IN THE CITY

Chapter 21

Meantime, while Ruth was struggling with her many problems, her chum was living a life that was entirely opposite in every respect.

With a compartively slight difference of temperament, the two girls had grown up side by side, had shared each others thoughts experiences, studies, impressions and the daily happenings. This was bound to make them more or less alike, though Ruth had always the more serious way of taking things, and had the advantage of the reading she did with her father.

But from that affectionate, tearful good-bye on the station platform at Marketown, their paths ran far apart. Each, under the influences of her new circumstances began to change and mature. At a far distant date they were to meet again—but that is a long way ahead of this story.

Myra had as little experience travelling as Ruth. The Pullman sleeper was new to her, and a great delight. There was no mother to come into her room and order the light off, so she lay and read a magizine far into the night enjoying the cozy feeling of being shut in with curtains, and the flashes of town lights as they ran on. Presently, however, the very clicking of the wheels over the rails soothed her like a monotonously sung lullaby, and she went to sleep.

She awoke with the general excitement of arriving, dressed gathered her bags together as she had been told, and followed a porter up the steps to the station platform. Her eyes were round as saucers as she looked about at the size of the station, and listened to its vast half muffled din.

Cousin Emily was to meet her. Myra had never seen this relative except when a small girl, and therefore had no remembrance of her at all. But from the crowd, watching for arrivals, a stunning woman stepped out. She looked uncertainly at Myra, who looked calmly back. This wasn't Cousin Emily—she had been nearly 30—let's see, eight year ago; this woman was barely 30 now—but the woman, after looking over the other arrivals, aproached Myra.

"I wonder whether I'm looking for you?" she asked.

"I'm Myra Weed."

"I'm Cousin Emily!"

"I wondered if it were you but you look so young—"

"How adorable of you! I wondered if you were Myra, for you look so old!"

The two stood and looked at each other, and then each laughed. So began the curious friendship that was to last, in one way or another, for a long period of time.

"We begin well, with mutual compliments," the lady said. 'Now come my dear, we'll get your trunk and a taxi, and be home for breakfast in no time. I assure you, I never got up so early in my life before I was thinking of staying up all night and meeting you at the end of my day instead of the beginning. But the man last night was a bore so I sent him away before 12 o'clock."

With a lot of chatter strange to Myra's ears, she led the way to the baggage room, and finally to a taxi cab. Myra had little chance to study her hostess until they were riding the morning traffic on their way up town. But in the cab she turned and looked at this new found cousin.

Emily Planter might be called a typical product of the metropolis since her likeness is found nowhere else. She was a curious mixture of sophistication and harmlessness, of hardness and good nature. She could see through the thickest veil of deception and there was very little she did not know. At the same time she had no special desire to profit by her knowledge—therein was her harmlessness. She used her shrewdness mostly to amuse herself, for she did not want to be "hard" with people she liked, and she liked most people.

But Myra could not know all this. The girl saw a smartly dressed woman, who wore the most wonderful hat she had ever seen whose eyes smiled brightly through the thick meshes of her veil, whose lips were very pink and pretty and whose profile was altogether adorable. She was swathed in some mysterious way in a wrap of the softest wooliest material with a great deal of fur on it; her hands were covered with new gloves that came far up her arms, and she wore a serge dress with short sleeves, and the prettiest high-heeled gray suede shoes the girl had ever seen. A high instep and a slim ankle, visible as Cousin Emily crossed her knees showed the lustre of a gray silk stocking.

"Don't look at me too hard' the woman remarked. I'm never presentable before my third cup of coffee. In fact, I never see people or talk to them before the second cup at least—you're my first exception in years.'

They drew up before what Myra thought was the tallest building in the world. I appeared that somewhere in this 15 story building punctuated with windows and balconies was what Cousin Emily called "home" Myra gasped, but followed obediently up the elevator.

"We're supposed to have breakfast in the restaurant downstairs.' Cousin Emily said, "but a few dollars a month persuades one of the waiters to bring it up to me. Then I can eat in a negligee when I'm ready. It's such a nuisance to dress before breakfast isn't it?

"Yes, isn't it? answered Myra, who was going to learn rapidly.

New York Rector Still Undismayed

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Undismayed by the rebuke recently administered to him by Bishop William T. Manning of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York, the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, of the Church of the Ascension, at Fifth avenue and Tenth street, today continued his exposition and defence of religious liberalism.

Although he carefully refrained from mentioning the bishop by name and referred to him only in the most indirect tones, the rector's sermon was in effect an absolute defiance of the bishop—a defiance at one time touched with ridicule.

"He is a churchman; you are human."

That was the expression used in a communication received by Dr. Grant from a well known citizen in referring to the controversy raised by the conflict of views between the bishop and the rector.

"And I'm willing to let the matter rest right there," remarked Dr. Grant, as the audience laughed.

In the most indirect language, yet in words that were most effective in getting over the point, Dr. Grant referred to the doctrine of the virgin birth of Christ, which in reality is the crux of the dispuite between the rector and the bishop.

"In ancient times," said the rector, "there was a belief that spirits were the fathers of all babies born into the world. That belief has been discarded by intelligent people—except possibly in one particular case."

At another time during tre sermont Dr. Grant again expressed in no uncertain terms his theological liberalism. "I did not become a clergyman," he said, "to be a parrot, to repeat old, outworn and archaic creeds and dogmas. I became a clergyman because I believed it offered the greatest opportunity to do the greatest good to my fellowmen."

Dr. Grant announced to reporters after the sermon that he did not intend to continue the controversy with his bishop—an issue which sprang from Dr. Grant's denial of the divine power of Christ—and that he did not intend to reply to Dr. Manning's reprimand.

"The bishop does not seem to expect a reply," said Dr. Grant, "and I do not think his letter calls for one."

Johnson Signs 16th Contract

RENO, Nev., Feb. 9.—Walter Johnson, veteran pitcher of the American League, signed his 16th contract with the Washington Senators today, and celebrated the event by announcing the arrival of a third member to his family, a baby girl.

Johnson declined to state the amount he will receive for his services with Washington, but said it was no less than his salary of last season.

Take Salts For A Kidney Backache

Drink Lots of Water All Day Long to Keep Kidneys Flushed

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders.

By all means, drink lots of good water every day. Have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

New Ray Feature Is In The "Super" Class

Everything Done to Make "A Tailor Made Man" Most Significant Film Event

Charles Ray left no stone unturned to make "A Tailor Made Man," first of his super-features for United Artists and coming to the Prince Edward Theatre next Wednesday, one of the most important and significant film productions of the year.

In the supporting cast of twenty-eight players, there are many who have been stars in their own right, both on the stage and screen. It has been a long time since any one cast of characters boasted of such high talent as Ethel Grandin, Jacqueline Logan, Douglas Gerrard, Thomas Jefferson, Edyth Chapman, Victor Potel, Thomas Ricketts, Kate Lester, Eddie Gribbon, Frank Butler and Nellie Peck Saunders. These artists compose a neucleus hard to surpass and these names are selected at random; there are a dozen others in this photoplay who possess a measure of fame in the domains of histrionism.

The technical staff is one that has served Charles Ray with most advantageous results for some time past. Its roster ranks with the best. With Joseph De Grasse as director, George Rizard and George Meehan as cinematographers, Robert Ellis as technical and art director, Edward Withers as designer of art titles, and Harry Decker as film editor, one is assured of high results in point of technique and finesse. Albert Ray, author of several successful original photoplays, adapted "A Tailor Made Man" to the screen from the highly successful and long popular stage play by Harry James Smith.

Ex-Crown Prince May Be Banished

THE HAGUE Feb. 10.—Holland is by no means through with the trouble which she started for herself when, according to the Dutch tradition of giving asylum to political refugees, she consented to harbor two of the Hohnezollerns.

Although there is an usual complete silence in the press regarding the ex-Kaiser and his son, it is learned that the Netherlands Government is at present concerned regarding the ex-Crown Prince, who it is now definitely known has been carrying on intrigues with German Monarchist parties favoring the ex-Prince has visited Holland during the last few weeks and representatives of the Allied governments have politely and quite unofficially demanded explanations.

It is now known that the ex-Crown Prince recently spent two days and one night in the vicinity of the German frontier, going there while visiting the ex-Kaiser at Doorn.

This was done in spite of the assurance of the Netherlands Government.

It can be expected that further explanations will be demanded by the Allied governments. It is learned that the question of banishing the ex-Crown Prince from Dutch soil as an "undesirable alien," couched, however, in more polite terms, has been under discussion, although no definite steps have been taken, as Holland does not wish to have the responsibility of giving a refugee status to an actively intriguing Hohenzollern.

Love-lorn Typist Commits Suicide

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—A girl committed suicide in a hotel room today while beside her slept the young woman who had charged herself with the task of preventing such a deed.

For months Elizabeth Timm, 19, a pretty typist, living at 5918 Fourth avenue, Brooklyn, had been brooding over what was said to have been an unhappy love affair. Several times she had successfully fought off a desire to kill herself according to her friend, Marie Moore, 18, to 659 Sixtieth street, Brooklyn.

On Tuesday Miss Timm left her home, Miss Moore said, and was so despondent that the latter decided to accompany her. They went to Colden's bridge, in Westchester county that night, and returned on Wednesday, registering at the Hotel Naomi, 125th. street and Park avenue, a hostery exclusively for women. Meanwhile relatives of both young women had reported their disappearance to the bureau of missing persons of the police department.

Last night Miss Moore was the first to retire, she said, as her companion told her she wanted first to write a letter. This morning Miss Moore said she awoke and found her companion dead in the bed beside her. A glass and a bottle of cleaning fluid, its contents mostly gone, were beside the bed.

The letter that Miss Timm wrote was on a table. It was addressed to a friend on Staten Island, quoted passages of Longfellow's poetry and in part said: "People say love is not necessary to happiness, but they are wrong. Love is necessary not only to happiness, but to life itself—not the love of an admirer, but the protecting, devoted love of parents. I learned to loathe life and long for the peace of death years ago, but tried my best to fight for the right thing to do."

Questioned by the police, Miss Moore admitted that Miss Timm had been in love some time ago. Miss Moore's parents were sent for and they took her to her Brooklyn home.

Her Bronchitis Yields To Vicks

A "Very Effective Relief" Says This Toronto Lady

Mrs. R. K. Bankin, 115 McGill St., Toronto, Ont., says: "Last fall I had a very bad attack of bronchitis. I saw Vicks VapoRub advertised and tried it according to directions. I could not exaggerate about your valuable medicine. It is a most pleasant and effective relief for any kind of colds. I will always keep it in the house."

Vicks VapoRub comes in salve form, and for head or chest colds, you just apply it over throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth. The body heat releases vapors that are inhaled all night long into the throat and lungs—Menthol, Camphor, Thyme, Eucalyptus and Turpentine. Vicks is also absorbed through and stimulates the skin, aiding the vapors to relieve congestion. Usually colds go in one night and croup is commonly relieved in 15 minutes.

By invitation of the manufacturers, fifteen thousand families in Canada tried Vicks last Winter for cold troubles. The only condition being that they would report results. The above is just one of these enthusiastic reports received.

The Birth of Efficiency

For many centuries, the progress of civilization was hindered by the primitive methods of production; and the vast opportunities of world commerce lay dormant, awaiting the development of man's ingenuity.

With the 19th century came the awakening and the great inventions utilizing steam, and electricity galvanized the world into a throbbing, energetic universe of production. It was the Spirit of Invention and the Birth of Efficiency.

40 years ago, Lewis Edson Waterman invented

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen

And the first Waterman—made from hard wood—was the same in principle, as the smooth, easy, efficient pen of to-day.

Through 40 years of service, the traditions, quality and workmanship have been maintained; and the Waterman organization has grown from its tiny "pen corner" in a shop on Fulton Street, New York, to five great factories which supply the world with millions upon millions of pens every year.

Many changes have come to this old world of ours since the first birthday of Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen; but the efficiency of this pen shines steadfast and true in the present great age of advancement.

There are many styles—for character; but only one for quality—for satisfaction.
