were running ahead of expenditures by more than $200,000,000. The statement set off speculation in official circles that substantial tax cuts could be expected when the budget is brought down possibly next month.

With the three services now amalgamated under one minister it was expected that National Defence Department outlays would total $228,741,000 in the coming year compared with $501,345,000 in the current year.

In 1946-47, $488,840,141 was earmarked for the orderly establishment and organization of the defence forces on a peace-time basis. For the current year the amount was cut to $226,709,331, a drop of $262,130,810.

Veterans Affairs Department expenditures were estimated at $383,496,345 against $677,281,181. It was estimated that the service gratuities to veterans of the Second World War would total $10,000,000 in the coming year as compared with $266,445,375, a decrease of $256,445,375.

Re-establishment Credits

On the other hand, payments of re-establishment credits to veterans was expected to increase by $10,000,000 moving up from $60,000,000 to $70,000,000.

The demobilization and reconstruction expenditures of the department were listed as $53,329,209, against $219,188,501, a decrease of $165,859,292.

Finance Department expenses for normal and demobilization purposes together showed a decrease of $119,102,302. The amount set aside for the commodity price stabilization corporation, which pays out subsidies to keep the cost-of-living down, was slashed from $90,000,000 to $35,000,000.

However, the department's estimates continued no provision for the payment of subsidies to the provinces as proposed in the taxation agreements the government now is seeking with the provinces. The subsidies are expected to cost a minimum of $205,185,000, and if agreements are reached provision for the payments likely will have to be made through the introduction of supplementary estimates.

Over-all expenditures of the Agriculture Department were reduced by $61,116,727, since smaller decreases were shown for the Departments of Transport, Trade and Commerce, Justice, Public Works, Resources and Labor.

Under the reconversion expenditures, the Health Department showed an increase of $75,950 in the vote for the payment of old age pensions and pensions to the blind. The 1947-48 expenditures was set at $10,450,000 against $9,400,000.

PREMIER'S "OUTLAW" THREAT

opposed to organized labour. It was the opinion of many people that organized labour in the United States may have, in some instances, gone too far, but such an abuse of power was not justification for the statements made by Premier Jones. Mr. Matheson said he believed in the right of the dock workers in Charlottetown to a decent living wage and the farmers interested in having their potatoes loaded in Charlottetown, were, Mr. Matheson said, fully satisfied to have the city workers get a decent wage for doing it. For Premier Jones to talk in such dictatorial terms, as he recently used in speaking of Labour was the height of folly.

The dock workers in this City go on "strike" Mr. Matheson said, "I am sure the farmers would not come in to take over. If we did, we would deserve all that we got, for it would be foolish to expect the city workers to stand idly by and watch us doing their work."

Scores Premier's Statement

Mr. Bell thanked the convention for the confidence shown in him and Mr. Matheson by the delegates.

"We won the last election in the Second District, we did so mainly because of your efforts," Mr. Bell said. "Unfortunately, our Party was not returned, so that we in the Opposition could do very little for you because our attempts to work in your interests were blocked by the Government."

"In this very room," Mr. Bell continued, "Premier Jones, a few months ago, made the statement that he would reiterate across Canada. He put himself on record as being opposed to organized labour."

"I cannot understand what the man's motive was. Of course, it could easily have been an attempt on his part to cause some sort of rupture between the farmers of this Province and the working classes, a rift which the only figure, would rally all the farmers behind him for the next provincial election which he may spring at any time."

"But, if that was his motive, it is one which will certainly backfire on him, for I know, as any well-informed man knows, that the farmers of this Province - and the rest of Canada - are not opposed to organized labour. They believe in organization themselves. They are organized. And I hope they continue for their own welfare and the country, to further strengthen their farmer organizations."

"For Premier Jones to rail against the eight-hour day of this province is pure nonsense. True, the farmer must work longer. The nature of his business requires it. He knows, too, that even if he could get the City or industrial workers to work for him the long hours which farming demands, that such workers would be no good to him. Only farmers' sons or rural folk have been brought up in rural life and are of any use to a farmer."

Essential To Farm Pro's

"The farmer knows, too," Mr. Bell said, "that good wages for Labour means that Labour is able to buy more of the farmer's products. The supply of farmers' products in this country will never exceed Labour's demands for consumption if Labour has the purchasing power. And the working man can only have the money to buy the needs for his family when he is paid a decent living wage."

"At all events," Mr. Bell concluded, "the Premier has shown himself in his true colors as a man of narrow vision, holding economic doctrines and beliefs which were common in the days of feudalism but which have been discarded long ago."

Hon. Dr. MacMillan

Hon. Dr. MacMillan evoked tumultuous applause as he rose to speak. "Gentlemen," he began, "we have gathered here today in a building owned by an organized group who fought your battles and mine on the blood-stained fields of Europe, Asia, and Africa. They fought these battles in order that the Empire might be free, that we might walk about as free men, women, and children in a free world."

"Yet, in this building, whose honor rolls contain the names of hundreds of your sons and brothers who fought this country's fight and who heroically died that you and I might be free, a man spoke a few nights ago. It was not to such an audience as this that he addressed his remarks, but to an audience of veterans who had met the Hun in deadly conflict. It was to an audience of men who had, but a few years ago, left homes and wives and sweethearts in order that our precious heritage of democracy might be preserved."

"And so I wonder at his temerity. I wonder, gentlemen, because this man, before an audience, 65 per cent of which belongs to some union or other, said he might yet have to outlaw organized Labour in this Province."

"Gentlemen, J. Walter Jones will not crucify Labour in the City which I represent. He shall not be allowed to crucify Labour and any cross of class prejudice which
