Married Children Can Best Solve the Problem of Their Dependent Parents by Setting up and Maintaining a Separate Home for Them

Dear Miss Dix—Would you advise the passing of a law for the disposal of old parents who are not needed any more? There is no loneliness like that of old age. The feeling of not being wanted or needed any more hurts. Nowadays children take the attitude that they owe nothing to their parents. Maybe that is true. Surely it is the duty of parents to care for their children in every possible way, and it is also a pleasure to most parents to make their children happy and see them prosper; but when children are grown and living their own lives, in their own way, and Father is gone, what can Mother do? She has given all to her children and there is nothing for her to do but wait for death. But while she is waiting for the final act what must she do? It is no more for her happiness to live with her children than it is theirs for her to live with them. She would love her own little place, with her books and a cat and an old friend, but she has given everything to her children and has nothing left, so what?

AN OLD MOTHER.

Answer:
The only law that I would advocate for the disposal of old parents who are not wanted by their children would be to build a lovely and comfortable apartment-hotel in every community where the man or the woman or old couples could go and have a nice little home in which they could potter around and do as they pleased, yet have the society of other old people with whom they could gossip and say: "Do you remember?"

But I think you are wrong in saying that the young people of today do not feel that they have any obligation toward their parents. Look about you and see in how many homes there is an old mother or an old father being tenderly cared for by a son or daughter.

Look at the young girls who work all day in offices and stores and almost all of whose earnings go to the support of their parents. I get thousands of letters every year from young people who are in love and who want to marry, but who are putting off their wedding day because they have an old mother or father to care for. It is the exception and not the rule when children turn their backs upon their parents.

But you are right in saying that children do not want their parents to live with them. The reason for this is perfectly obvious. There is, to begin with, always the in-law to consider and, strangely enough, a husband or a wife is nearly always more jealous of the other's mother than he or she would be of any sheik or siren. Mother's influence: "Mother says we should do this or that," "Mother advises this and that" is always as good for a family fight as a nickel is for a ginger cake.

And, in addition, no old person, and especially no old mother, can keep her fingers out of her children's pies if she lives with them. She is simply bound to interfere in everything that goes on, from raising the children to the strength of the breakfast coffee. That doesn't make for peace and harmony.

I often think if people saved more of their money for their old age instead of spending it on their children as they went along it would be best both for themselves and the children in the long run. If Father and Mother put the price of the college educations and the sport cars and the trips to Europe and the fine clothes that they shower on John and Sadie into gilt-edged bonds, then later on when Father died he would not leave Mother penniless and she would not be a burden on John, who already has all he can do to support his own family, nor disrupt Sadie's household by going to live with her as an unwelcome guest. John and Sadie and Mother would all be happier.

One way in which a family can meet this problem of what to do with Mother is for all of them to chip in and give her an independent home of her own, no matter how humble. It would take very little money and it would save Mother from the humiliation of sitting below the salt at another's table.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am in love with and am considering marrying a girl who has had a hectic past. She has had six affairs with that many different men. Three of the men she expected to marry, but they jilted her. She says she has no regrets for her experiences. I am no angel myself, but I know that marriage, to last, must rest on a basis of loyalty, fidelity, trust and respect. Do you think I will be safe in trusting such a girl for the future and thinking that the ghost of the past will not rise?

STUMPED.

Answer:
There is nothing to be stumped about in the situation. It is as plain as the nose on your face. Here is a girl who is a lady of light virtue, who loves pretty clothes, good times, gaiety and love-making, and who takes the easiest way to get them. She has no fixed principles, no code of morality, no strength of character that will enable her to resist temptation. She is a philanderer by nature and the chances are a hundred to one that she will always have an eye out for a new lover.

A woman may, through the stress of passion or circumstances, step off of the strait and narrow road and win her way back with repentance

A Morning Smile

A guide conducting a party of tourists round a Parisian art gallery, halted them before an Egyptian mummy and said, impressively: "This mummy is practically three thousand years old. Why, it is quite likely the Pharaohs saw it!" "Come on, ma," one man whispered to his wife. "Fancy trying to tell us Pharaoh saw mummy. Why, I'll bet that Pharaoh was never in Paris in his life!"

KETTLE ON THE FLAME.
I love the kettle on the flame, The great, fat kettle with the curving spout, I like to play a little game Of watching for the steam to bubble out.

The great, fat kettle laughs and laughs, And blows the steam all warm about the place, He chuckles and bobs and laughs, Until I'm laughing too with all my face!

I never mind the rainy weather, Or having to stay inside the whole long day, If kettle and I can stay together And laugh and play his funny kind of way.

BEAUTY EDITORS

Find National Trend To Soap and Water for ATTRACTIVE COMPLEXIONS

Canada is going "soap and water" again, according to beauty editors. Women have discovered—that nothing takes the place of soap bathing in promoting natural skin loveliness.

Cuticura Soap is a medicated, true complexion soap. Its fine, creamy lather—so gentle and soothing—helps clear the pores of every particle of dirt and irritating "foreign matter."

Cleanse the face twice a day with Cuticura Soap. Special emollient and cleansing properties tone and invigorate the skin—help protect against irritations. For relieving externally caused pimples, rashes and irritation of eczema, supplement with Cuticura Ointment. Together they make a complete, inexpensive, every day beauty treatment. FREE samples—write "Cuticura" Dept. 36, 285 St. Paul Street West, Montreal.

THE COOK'S CORNER

THREE-TIER SANDWICHES.
Cut the bread in thin, even slices, in matching threes. Spread each slice with softened butter, and trim. Between the first two spread Paris-Pate, moistened with mayonnaise, with a little cress or lettuce leaf put between them. On top of this sandwich place a thin slice of tomato (well drained). Put a little mayonnaise on the tomato or, if preferred, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Then place on the third slice of bread. Cut in desired shapes.

PATIENCE CANDY.
Three cups white sugar, 1 cup milk, butter size of walnut, vanilla, nuts.
Take 1 cup sugar and pour into a pan and melt over slow fire. Put the remaining 2 cups sugar and milk into a saucepan and bring to boiling point. Then very slowly add, a little at a time, the melted sugar stirring constantly. Add butter and vanilla. Continue boiling until the soft ball stage is reached. Remove from fire, add nuts and beat until creamy. Pour into buttered pa-
