DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

hardest, it would seem to indicate that Nature intended her to carry the key to a cozy little cottage instead of wearing a Phi Beta Kappa one.

The second point to consider in deciding whether to send Janey off to college is the family exchequer. If there is plenty of money, by all means let Janey go if she wants to, whether she is highbrow or lowbrow. It disposes of her, as has been said, during the stormy adolescent years and makes for peace in the household. It is just one of the luxuries in which her rich family can afford to indulge.

But it becomes a tragedy when a poor family practically starves itself to death to send a girl of mediocre ability to college in the fond belief that they are giving her advantages that will magically open the doors of success to her. In this country, where we have a fanatical faith in the power of a college diploma, it is pitiful to think of the poor fathers and mothers who work their fingers to the bones, who do without the food they need and the medical attention that would save their lives, to get one for Janey, only to find out it is just a scrap of paper, after all.

And, lastly, whether parents should send Janey to college depends, to a great extent, upon whether she possesses that strange intangible gift that we call "IT" for want of a better word. If she is homely and lacking in personality; if her Fairy Godmother didn't put the come-hither look in her eyes and she is plainly destined for single blessedness, give her all the education she can take. It will be a tool in her hand to enable her to support herself.

But if she is one of the girls whom men flock around as bees around a honeypot, it is foolish for her parents to sacrifice themselves to give her what we call educational advantages. Indeed, a college degree is a handicap instead of a help toward getting a husband.

Shearer Douglas Sparkle In A Gay Noel Coward Farce

There are no dull moments in "We Were Dancing," which opens today at the Prince Edward Theatre with Norma Shearer and Melvyn Douglas co-starred.

This is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's partial adaptation of Noel Coward's stage hit, "Tonight at 8.30," and it loses none of its sparkle or originality in transition to the screen.

Miss Shearer is seen as a daughter of royalty, penniless but game, and very much in love. The lucky man is Melvyn Douglas, also a scion of royalty decidedly on his uppers. Both of them are professional guests, living in luxury at the homes of wealthy Americans who glorify titles.

The couple marry but fare badly as a visiting team. Society wants them single as partners for extra guests. Accordingly they pretend to be unmarried and visit secretly, but the arrangement is shattered by Gail Patrick, a society decorator in love with Douglas and Lee Bowman, former sweetheart manoeuvres a divorce.

Meanwhile, Douglas goes to work as a decorator and one of his first chores is to design the home which Bowman and Miss Shearer are to occupy after their marriage. There is amusing irony in the situation, but he goes through with it until he meets his ex-wife and the old flame revives.

Marjorie Main adds an uproarious touch as the feminine judge who awards the divorce decree to Miss Shearer although very much taken with the losing husband.

Star Of Year's Hit At Capitol

Roddy McDowall—the talented young English actor—in his first starring vehicle! Its the new 20th Century-Fox hit "On The Sunny Side", slated to open at the Capitol Theatre today.

"On the Sunny Side" is the gay heart-warming story of one London lad, bombed out by the blitz, who comes to America for the duration. His life in Yankeeland is not altogether a happy one—for his coming creates complications in the home of the Andrews, a typical American family.

From the accounts of preview audiences, laughs, thrills and tears abound in this realistic, intensely human film.

Roddy McDowall, the boy who stole the nation's heart in "How Green Was My Valley," is supperbly cast as Hugh Aylesworth, the English lad.

Fire Destroys Compton Plant At Belle River

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the large wood-working building of B. Compton, Limited, Belle River, in the early hours of Saturday morning. The loss was believed to be in excess of $25,000, and there was no insurance on the 80x80 wooden structure.

The building was situated in the centre of a cluster of other buildings in the Compton community and, fearing that the flames would spread to these, those present sent to Charlottetown for assistance.

One of the Compton men, whose house was about 50 feet away from the burning building, discovered the blaze. He was awakened by the reflection of the flames on his bedroom wall. When he hurriedly looked out the window he saw the large building in a mass of flames and quickly sounded the alarm.

Neighbors from miles around rushed to the scene and a bucket brigade was formed. These men fought the flames as best they could but the structure was doomed.

The city fire pumper left here as quickly as possible after receiving the call shortly after four o'clock in the morning. This was the second successive week-end that the pumper and crew visited that section of the province. Only last week it was pressed into action near Eldon to combat a forest fire which threatened historic Belfast Presbyterian Church.

By the time the city firemen arrived on the scene at Compton's Saturday morning the large building had collapsed and was nothing but a smouldering ruin. The pumper was not even hooked up as there was nothing left to do.

The volunteer fire fighters, aided by the water system in the buildings, saved the nearby structures including the large machine shop. However, the majority of the valuable mill machinery was destroyed in the main building which was burned to the ground. Water to fight the fire with was obtained from the river about half a mile away.

The wood working plant was one of the best in the province and contained such expensive machinery as band saws, planes, etc. Twelve men were employed in it the year around.

The firm had been working on a large order for shocks to be forwarded to a firm in St. Pierre at the time of the disastrous fire. A great deal of lumber was stacked nearby for this purpose.

TRINITY UNITED CHURCH

The closing hymn at our morning worship was "Faith of our Fathers! living still" and it is an inspiration to know that so many of our membership by their regular attendance at the church services give evidence of that "living faith."

Announcement has been made that a Deaconess has been appointed for our Church instead of an assistant Minister which has been the rule for some years past. She is a Miss McDougall formerly of Ontario but lately of Vancouver. She will assume her duties September 1st.

Rev. Dr. Miller leaves this morning for his summer home at Broadlands, Quebec. He will be absent during the month of August. Rev. D. C. Boothroyd will be in charge and is arriving tonight. He will occupy the parsonage on Richmond street.

Dr. Miller was in charge of the services yesterday. In the morning his text was Genesis 22-1.2. Probably this story of Abraham offering Isaac was not included in the Bible stories recited to us in our early days. It would leave a wrong impression of God and that is fatal.

It marks, however, a stage in the life of God's people in searching out and finding God. Surrounding tribes were taunting Abraham that his religion was inferior to theirs in that he did not offer human victims on the Altar to appease his God. He accepts the challenge, proves his faith and obedience and arrived at a better conception of God—the God who forbids the sacrifice of his children.

Life is a struggle; often bitter and disappointing. Much is due to our folly, much to the folly and sin of others and part is the discipline and test of God. We would escape or evade all that arrests and prevents. We term such our misfortune, our burden and even our Cross. God regards such his test, his proving. Much depends upon our conception of God, our faith in Him and obedience to His will.

The soloist was Mrs. Frances Holl Trainor who was heard with much pleasure in "The Good Shepherd" by Van de Water.

Dr. Miller's evening sermon was from Genesis 26-18 having reference to Isaac re-digging the wells of his father.

him preach at Charlottetown were abandoned.

The deceased was one of Canada's outstanding Presbyterian ministers and had a distinguished career. He was born at Glasgow, Scotland, 51 years ago. It was in this famous Scottish city that he received his education and fitted himself for the ministry. He was a graduate of the University of Glasgow.

At the outbreak of the Great War, Dr. Ferguson enlisted as a combatant officer with the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. He was twice wounded in the conflict.

After the war he was called to Barrhead Church where he served for a number of years. From there he went to Perth and prior to coming to this country was preaching at Falkirk.

When his predecessor at St. Andrew's Church in Ottawa died, it was on the suggestion of the late Lord Tweedsmuir that he was chosen for this field. Speaking of their sojourn in the Dominion, Mrs. Ferguson said last night, "We have had a very happy ministry in Ottawa."

Only recently Dr. Ferguson was honored with the Doctor of Divinity degree from Queen's University. During his lifetime the deceased also studied law.

He is survived by his wife. The couple had no children. However, they were foster parents to an evacuee girl who lived with them at Ottawa. She did not come to the Island with them this summer. She is visiting with friends near Ottawa. Dr. Ferguson also has relatives in Scotland.

The body will be forwarded today from Charlottetown to Ottawa. It will be accompanied by his wife and the Matthews friends. Funeral arrangements were not complete last night.
