The new cross for the Cathedral spire has just been completed by W. E. Smith and F. H. Trainor. This is a splendid piece of work, an idea of the amount of neat fitting required in the completion of the cross may be obtained when it is considered that over three hundred and seventy-five pieces of copper were used in its make up. The new cross has an improved interior fastening of brass and will last for a long time and its mate is being fitted similarly and the two will be ready to go up in a short time.
