Letter Of Sympathy

Mrs. Leslie Cameron, Kensington, has received the following letter which speaks for itself:—
Major J. F. Peterson, S.D.O. Highlanders Canadian Army British Army of Liberation Somewhere in France

Sept. 3, 1944
Dear Mrs. Cameron: I am more sorry than I can tell you to have to write this letter to you. I can only hope that it does not add to your grief, but I feel I must write, if only to tell you how Leslie did. We had had a long period of very desperate fighting before we finally encircled the Germans around a town called Falaise, where we broke the back of the entire German army. Our company was ordered to take a village called Magny, in order to squeeze the Germans into an even smaller circle. This we did.

The following morning the Germans made their last attempt to break out and they chose our position to attack. Led by their armored cars, and self-propelled guns, and with a Lieut-General in command they attacked at day-break. They broke through our position and we lost one officer and seven men killed, and 23 wounded. Your husband was among those killed. We counter-attacked immediately afterwards, drove the Germans out, killing many dozens and capturing four hundred including the General. After that they all gave up and we took thousands of prisoners.

There is very little comfort I find in the fact that he did not die with us long, but danger and the courage to face it, make quick friendships, and your husband was a brave man. He had the friendship and respect of everyone of his officers and comrades. I want you to know that you are not alone in your grief; we, his comrades in battle, share it with you. We shall never forget him because he had qualities that are too rare: quiet bravery, dependability and determination to get this job done.

There is very little else I can offer you. I know what a sell you. It makes my task easier to be able to tell you that he died without pain, quickly, without knowing what happened. That may not seem to be a great deal but to us, who live in constant and imminent danger of death, it means a great deal. We all know that our turn will likely come, and when it does, we hope it comes as his did.

Does it do any good, I wonder, to tell you that Leslie fought bravely and died that others might know freedom? Doubtful about our aims, or the worth of all this fighting, may come to killers at home, but never to us. For we see the people we liberate. We grasp the outstretched hands of starving and tear-stained French people, we feed hungry children; we see the desolation the Germans have left in this lovely land. We see these things and we know we are right. We know this work must be done though it cost each of us his life. That is the way we all feel. That is the way Leslie felt.

We buried him at Magny, on a hillside overlooking the village. Every day French people come to place flowers on his grave. He lies with his officer and comrades. And we who still live mourn with you.

Sincerely JACK PETERSON

CHARLOTTETOWN SCOUTERS' CLUB

A special meeting of the Charlottetown Scouters' Club was held on Tuesday evening in the Holy Name Hall with a large number present.

The purpose for calling this meeting was to discuss plans for Boy Scout Apple Day on November 4th. The leaders were given instructions not to have their boys out before nine o'clock and selling to cease at midnight. Committees were set up that apples of excellent quality had been supplied and it was expected that the public would give this event its wholehearted support.

The Provincial Scout Rally and District Club Rally were discussed and plans were left in the hands of the Committees in charge.

BELFAST - (CP) — Field Marshal Montgomery is to be given the freedom of Belfast in recognition of his leadership.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

On the Night of January 19th, 1944.

Corporal Harold Bradley Leppard was one of a patrol sent out to locate enemy positions on his regiment's front in Italy.

The patrol located an enemy post of unknown strength. Cpl. Leppard set out with the patrol commander to obtain a prisoner, leaving the rest of the patrol in observation.

The two managed to get within 5 yards of the post undetected—then rushed it. A machine gun opened up on them and wounded Cpl. Leppard in the stomach and twice in the arm.

Although severely wounded, Cpl. Leppard killed the German manning the machine gun and one other with his machine carbine. This enabled the patrol commander to overpower and capture the third member of the post.

In spite of the intense pain of his wounds, Cpl. Leppard then helped to escort the prisoner back to the patrol. For his courage, dash and determination, he was awarded the Military Medal.

Where does Duty end, Corporal Leppard?

If you can get men like Corporal Leppard to talk... which is apt to be difficult... they will assure you that in war there is no end to duty until the job is done—whatever the cost may be.

And you may think to yourself "That's all very right and proper for a fighting man, but surely it can't apply at this stage of the war to people at home like me".

Yet all the while, as surely as you ever knew anything, you know in your innermost heart that it does!

You know that to once up before victory is an accomplished fact is neither courageous nor wise. Commonsense will tell you that the terrific intensity of the war in recent months has greatly increased Canada's borrowing needs for war purposes. And while more and more Canadian boys are risking wounds and death daily—counting desperately on your support—you surely cannot betray their trust.

So doubt no more what to do about Victory Bonds. Because the need is greater than it has ever been before, buy one more bond than you have bought in any previous Victory Loan.

SAILOR'S UNLUCKY DAY

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, England - (CP) — Friday is an unlucky day for 44-year-old Seaman Tommy Scraggs. These things have happened to him since 1916 — always on Friday: one ship he sailed on was sunk by mines, three went aground, three collided with other ships, one with an iceberg, and three were sunk by torpedo.

Hints On Etiquette

If you have moved to a new town and the older residents call on you, you must return these calls, even if you do not desire to cultivate a friendship with these people.

AIDS FOR AIRMEN

Stranded fliers are often dropped cans containing three blankets. The cans later become water buckets or soaking garments.
