St. Patrick's Play At Georgetown

The annual St. Patrick's Play at Georgetown, staged by St. James Dramatic Club, was a splendid success—though played on March 15th a full house greeted the players when the curtain rose on March 17th. The play-loving audience of Georgetown and surrounding districts expected a good entertainment, and as on other occasions, they were not disappointed.

The Three Act Comedy "The Colonel's Maid," was presented by a cast of nine, well prepared and proven actors, who in this play detracted not from their former reputation. The play centred around the hatred of two Southern gentlemen, Colonel Rudd and Colonel Byrd, and the love of their children Robert Rudd and Marjorie Byrd who sought by stratagem, "All's fair in love and war," to win the consent of their father to their marriage. Marjorie Byrd, the wealthy daughter of Colonel Byrd, under an assumed name accepts the position of maid in Colonel Rudd's home, and quickly wins her way into the affections of his cranky but "good as gold" old Southerner. This deceit on Marjorie's part led to many others to hide her identity especially when her father by the aid of detectives trailed her to the home of his enemy, declaring he would batter down every door in the building until he would find his daughter. The stormy encounters between these hot-headed colons—enemies for twenty-eight years—called forth heavy acting on the part of those who impersonated these difficult roles and kept the large audience keyed up with excitement. The Chinese cook in Colonel Rudd's home—Chung-a-Ling in league with the young couple, "whose brain was equal to that of five men" saved the lovers from disclosure on many an occasion and provided a great deal of the entertainment of the evening. Many who were present declared "The Colonel's Maid" was the best play presented by St. James Club. The following made up the cast:

Colonel Rudd—Cranky but as good as gold; James Boudreault, Robert Rudd—Son of Colonel Rudd, in love with Marjorie Byrd—Phil Boudreault.
Colonel Byrd—J. J. Condon.
Marjorie Byrd—Miss Lucy Scully.
Chung-a-Ling—The Chinese Cook Henry Martell.
Mrs. Carroll—Sister-in-law of Colonel Rudd—A crank on system—with a hunch for match-making; Mrs. M. Donovan.
Julia Carroll—daughter of Mrs. Carroll—Miss Jacqueline Lacoursiere.
New Gradyon—Victim of a poor memory—C. Scully.
Mr. Bascom, Legal friend of Colonel Rudd—Jos Scully.

Officials promptly routed the Island sleeper through to Montreal instead of the regular car from Moncton.

OXBOW MAN OWNS HISTORIC WEAPON

REGINA, March 29 (CP)—The 250-year-old flintlock muzzle-loading blunderbuss carried by Rev. George Walker at the Battle of the Boyne is on display here. The gun was handed down from family to family and is now owned by W. M. V. Carpendale, of Oxbow, Saskatchewan. He is a descendant of the original owner. The weapon is hand-made with a barrel. The muzzle is two inches in diameter, narrowing down to three-quarters of an inch for the powder charge.

Rev. George Walker was governor of Londonderry during the 1689 siege, and he trapped the walls urging the defenders on, a bible in one hand and a sword in the other. For his services he was granted £5,000 by the British government and the Archbishop of Canterbury made him Bishop of Derry. In 1690, carrying the flintlock, he led a regiment and was killed in action in the Battle of the Boyne. The gun is still in good condition.

The happy couple returned to the home of the groom later in the evening, where they were welcomed by a merry crowd of spectators.
