Labor Gov't. In Great Britain Being Criticized

(Canadian Press) LONDON, Aug. 4.—J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Colonies, speaking at a banquet at the Guildhall, York, recently said the Labour Government of Great Britain was being criticized in some quarters because it was not sufficiently class conscious. In other words, the MacDonald Government had refused to act on theories and were prepared to face facts.

Mr. Thomas made no apology for the Government. The Government, he said, had killed for all time the bogey of Labour's unfitness to govern. They had demonstrated that men by the humblest of circumstances could do as well as other people. They had also demonstrated that the people could have a Labour Government in this country without seriously interfering with the stability or confidence in the country.

Of course, he and his colleagues of the ministry had not given them the moon. Of course, they had broken some pledges. It was very easy to say the Government should recognize Russia. From the day he took office he had said he would recognize Russia. Every member of the Government was in the same position. They not only wanted to recognize Russia, but they wanted that country to be part of the community of Nations. But let them make no mistake. If they said to him they were going to hold Russia up as an example for democracy of this country, then he was going to fight to prevent anything of that kind coming into this country.

The power of the railwaymen and all other trade unions would be a great and magnificent power if they used it wisely and well. Mr. Thomas said. Their power carried with it responsibility, and he begged them not to lose sight of that fact. That was the intelligent way to bring about reforms in Great Britain.

JUGGERNAUT

The Juggernaut is the name of a Hindu god whose home is at the town of Puri, not very far south of Calcutta. Every year, in the month of June or July, this god, in image, is hauled away to his summer home about a mile distant in a huge car drawn by the people. This is one of the principal of the many religious ceremonies in his honor, and the crowds attending it are so dense that accidents sometimes occur—hence the story that the Juggernaut is a huge car which on religious festival days, is drawn through the streets of Indian cities and before which religious fanatics in great numbers cast themselves in order to be crushed to death.

lions of arable lands belonging to her had been taken over and that a great many of her live stock had been driven off. The fight of Mrs. Evans against the alleged attempts of Mexicans to seize her property was taken up by H. A. C. Cummings, British Charge d'Archive in Mexico City and an acrimonious dispute between him and Mexican authorities on behalf of Mrs. Evans resulted in the government demanding that he be withdrawn.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The British government is leaving the case surrounding the killing of Mrs. Rosalind Evans entirely in the hands of the United States embassy in Mexico City which has been handling British affairs there since the withdrawal of Herbert C. Cummings as Charge des Archives.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—U. S. Charge Schoenfeld, at Mexico City reported today to the State Department that he had taken up with the Mexican government the case of Mrs. Rosalind Evans, British subject, who was shot and killed and that Mexican authorities had given assurance that every effort would be made to apprehend and punish the murderers.

The Kensington Cheese Factory

Have you ever visited Kensington Cheese Factory? If not, then do so at your earliest opportunity.

As strangers in the Province may not know, it is situated in the northern suburbs of the town about eight minutes walk from the C. G. R. Depot. Go when teams are there delivering milk and see something marvelous. You will be courteously received by Mr. Leo Hughes, Cheesemaker and his staff of able assistants, but if they are busy with a "make" you cannot expect more than an intelligent glance. The producers of milk have strictly to business while the rush is on.

You will see teams unloading or waiting turn delivering milk of the choicest quality. The area that is covered by the field over which Kensington Factory exercises influence embraces about sixty square miles of the very best farming land and is cultivated by some of the most intelligent and progressive farmers in the Province.

The principles that underlie success in this branch of industry, and have among their herds some of the best producers and highest testers to be found in the Province. They have mastered the art of caring for their herds and of exercising strict vigilance over the quality and condition of milk that is furnished. They know the intelligence properly exercised, directs energy to attain the best results.

Then comparison of methods and of results with other institutions similarly engaged, or of records made in previous years by the same institution, is productive of results effectually educative, and indicates the path that leads to superior renown.

The patrons listen, read and do not only to learn what has been done, or will be doing, but to qualify to do even greater.

Herds are culled the deficient members being eliminated and productive ones substituted. Every defecting factor is removed and all contributory elements supplied.

Then a stimulative rivalry is maintained which augments the products that exceed results. Most of the patrons exercise a keen supervision over the milk that is supplied so that rarely is a can rejected. The results this year, thus far, exceed those of all previous years. These, too, are both classed in the quality and quantity of milk received. Just one instance. On a Monday recently, there were received 56,900 lbs. of milk which produced 66 cheeses averaging 75 lbs. each. Since grading came into effect the quality of milk has improved and results have approached nearer perfection. Nearly all cheese manufactured has passed First Grade. These results are but a natural consequence of education in the selection of milk cows, the care of them, scrupulous vigilance over the condition of milk and the delivery of the same.

Then the most important factors to be considered are the exact manipulation of the media until securely deposited in the hoops. The records that Kensington Factory has made, especially in recent years, conclusively prove that the Association have the plant operated and controlled by talent that is difficult to excel even throughout our whole Dominion. And the end is not yet. Education, which is still at work and will continue. No better proof of the satisfaction guaranteed and given in the whole management can be adduced than the unanimity that is now maintained at the annual meetings of the patrons and shareholders.

"Concordant unanimity" is the term used to characterize the spirit of one of the annual meetings held in recent years. And why should this not be? The exposure of statements shows that the business is conducted by men who are above stooping to any subterfuge that is sometimes found in company dealings. The Kensington Dairy Association is now composed of members, Directors, officials and staff who can say: "Our records in this and in other capacities are clear, and we command the respect and confidence of the patronizing public. This characteristic most impress all persons doing business with the institution that conscience exercises due influence over the management and that word responsibility is not conveniently interpreted."

Rev. Brooms then followed and paid an able tribute to Mr. Denny's good work in the Circuit. He said he was a man with a large heart ever ready to do some good work to bring any other poor brother or sister nearer to God's Kingdom. Mr. Denny was a true Wesleyan minister and stood out prominently as one of the bright stars in the galaxy of men in the Wesleyan ministry who had rendered such yeoman service in carrying on the Master's work.

A Friend of the Farmers

Mr. Aaron Britton next joined in paying tribute to the deceased minister and said he had the honor to listen to the first sermon he preached in the colony. There was no doubt that Mr. Denny was a good man and one whose social interest was not only confined to the people of his own persuasion but extended to the whole colony. He threw himself heart and soul into every work that he was endeavoring to do something to help the poor farmers of the colony. He could say with every confidence that in the Colony at present there were few men like John Fawcett Denny. He was always ready to discuss any measure for the improvement of the lot of the poor people. For this he highly respected Mr. Denny as he felt that the Church would always identify itself with the people the stronger would it be.

The Dead March in Saul was played after which the bell was tolled for five minutes, the whole congregation standing.

THE FLY WHEEL

The work of the fly wheel of an automobile, has two or three reciprocating parts to balance the engine and eliminate vibration. Second, the majority of cases to act as the driven gear from the starting motor.

Third—in some cases to act as the driven member of the clutch.

Its primary use however, is for the purpose of balancing the engine and eliminating vibration.

The size and weight of the fly wheel varies with different manufacturers according to the bore and stroke of the motor, and the length of the crank shaft.

One manufacturer in recent years installed a fly wheel on the front of the motor as well as the rear to further eliminate vibration.

In the Franklin Air-Cooled Motor there are fan blades installed in the fly wheel which gives it a 4th utility, acting as a suction fan to cool the motor without the use of water and radiator.

the most successful ministrations on the East Coast was transferred to Essequibo in 1917. There was no need to say that the Rev. Mr. Denny was greatly beloved as the large and overflowing attendance was a sufficient token of the respect in which he was held. It made one realize the pleasant memories Mr. Denny had left in the hearts of the people not only of their churches, but up and down the East Coast. Mr. Denny was a man of great ability and many parts, very eloquent in the pulpit and sympathetic as a pastor, a real man and a genuine friend. Mr. Denny had gone but he has certainly left his footprints in the sands of time.

Rev. Mr. Grant Bereaved

Rev. Mr. Grant in the course of his remarks said he would have liked to give the best that his mind and heart could produce in honour of the Rev. Mr. Denny who was such a personal friend to him. By the death of Mr. Denny he was greatly bereaved. As he spoke he looked back on the years of fellowship he had had with him in the churches. They both returned to the colony at nearly the same time and very soon after a friendship sprang up between them which deepened as Mr. Denny came to the East Coast. Mr. Denny was a man in every sense of the word. He possessed great gifts and he used them for the Glory of God and he was able to accomplish.

They should let the life of the Rev. Mr. Denny and others speak to them of their responsibility to God.

Rev. Brooms then followed and paid an able tribute to Mr. Denny's good work in the Circuit. He said he was a man with a large heart ever ready to do some good work to bring any other poor brother or sister nearer to God's Kingdom. Vampire-Man was only a short time ago that the Leine began riving up its dead, which finally opened the eyes of the police about their stool pigeon Haarmann.

Sold Flesh as Meat

They swooped down on his den, used as an old clothes shop and meat market and found some indications of his murderous proclivities; likewise made the revolting discovery that Haarmann, like the famous Berlin butcher-murderer, Grossmann, may have sold some of his victims' flesh as meat.

Further digging brought to light the character of Haarmann's activities. The Leine was drained and yielded up many bags of incriminating bones—mute evidence of Haarmann's murderous lust.

The police then unraveled a bit of the complicated story. Haarmann and an accomplice lured youths to the den with promises of money, sometimes also telling them they could be entertained by his mythical "beautiful 14 year old daughter."

Worked Railroad Station

Haarmann operated chiefly around the Hannover railroad station. He had a false police document permitting him entrance to the building at all hours of the day and night. Here he found unemployed youths who had no homes, and sought them to share his quarters. Most of the homeless needed no urging. They went willingly with the vampire, who gave them to eat and offered them a bed wherein to sleep.

But as they slept, Haarmann killed them, opening the jagular veins with his fan-like teeth. Then he chopped up the bodies and threw them in sacks, into the Leine.

Lt Out of Asylum

That Haarmann escaped the hand of the law so long caused a storm of public anger in Hannover. Haarmann, it develops, was at one time in an insane asylum but was let out again despite the fact that the authorities then established that he was not "accountable" for any deeds he might commit. The public rage is the deeper since it has developed that Haarmann was permitted to engage in a number of shady deals because he helped the police with his stool-pigeon activities.

The affairs have even taken on a political aspect. Efforts are being made to "get" District Noske (former war minister) because of the link between the authorities and the vampire.

Haarmann s a tall, gorilla-like man.

From Respectable Family

He comes of a respectable family, who wanted to place him in the army. But it developed soon that he was mentally and physically unfit for the officer career. Thereafter he sunk rapidly into the depths of vice and degeneracy, going from theft and swindling to murder in its crassest forms.

When the case comes to trial, experts will be called in, and, under the German law, Haarmann, despite the horrible nature of his crimes will be leniently handled, if it is proven that he is a victim of a degeneracy complex which he could not master.

Arrested For Stealing Car

Tie Driver to Tree

Kolson and a companion hired a taxi at the General Hospital, drove to a suburb, and forced the driver out, trussing him to a tree. They returned to the city and while driving at a terrific rate of speed were apprehended by a motorcycle patrolman.

Kolson's companion escaped, but Kolson was taken to a nearby house and while the officer was telephoning for the patrol wagon, he whipped out a revolver and shot himself through the head. He died just after admittance to the hospital, which he had left only a few hours before. Police decided the two men were bank robbers and had evidently planned to hold up a bank during the noon hour. The car contained masks, guns and dynamite. Kolson was a druggist and a graduate of the University of Manitoba.

Accountant Held up.

Shortly after the suicide the police were called to the warehouse district in the centre of the city where the accountant of the manufacturing company had been held up. A man shoved a gun in Henderson's face and grabbed the satchel containing the money. He was followed by a bystander, who, after a struggle, forced him to drop the bag. The robber however, broke away and escaped. He is believed to have been accompanied by another man. Later, the police arrested two suspects.
