Funeral services

A ton of timothy hay contains about 18 pounds of nitrogen, 6 1/2 pounds of phosphoric acid, and from 28 to 30 pounds of potash. This is rather more than would be returned to the land by a ton of ordinary green farmyard manure. If no fertilizers were applied, continuous crops of timothy would deplete the soils, and the same is true in a general way of other grasses.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Green, General Secretary of the Gideons will be the special speaker at the service of evening worship, 7 P.M. The evening anthem will be "Immortal, Invisible." (Thiman) L.A.C. Stanley Beard will sing "The Lord is My Light." John Ingh, Mus. Bac., organist and choir-master will be in charge of the music of the day.

CHURCH OFFICIAL HONORED

At the concluding supper meeting of the Loyalty Visitation Workers of Trinity United Church held Thursday evening in the Church Society Hall, the chairman of the meeting, Mr. D. J. Bonnell, called on John A. MacNair, Chairman of the Board of Stewards to say a few words of appreciation to that "Grand Old Man" Mr. Geo. A. Hughes, who has devoted over fifty years of wonderful service to his Church. In the course of his remarks Mr. MacNair told the large gathering that for the past 30 years Mr. Hughes has been the efficient Financial Steward and for 15 years was Secretary of the Sunday School. He also told his hearers of his sterling Christian character and of the esteem and affection in which he is held not only by Trinity United Church, but by all those who are privileged to know him, and they are many. At the close of his remarks, Mr. MacNair on behalf of the Loyalty Visitation Workers, presented the recipient with a cane, after which Mr. Hughes replied very feelingly, thanking the meeting for what he considered all too generous remarks.

Lesson 1, Oct. 3rd (Senior) CAMOUFLAGE! By THOMAS B. McDORMAND

ADVERTISEMENTS REFERRED TO IN LESSON 1 I. On a table appears a cut-glass pitcher filled with pure water. In heavy type are the words: "WATER TELLS THE TRUTH ABOUT WHISKY." The teacher might get a picture of a glass pitcher to show the class by way of making the lesson treatment more vivid.

II. The tall flagpole on the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto is shown, with the Union Jack proudly flying at its top. The teacher can show a picture of our flag when mentioning this "ad."

III. The third advertisement referred to shows three fine looking youths of different complexions (white, yellow, and black), looking toward the future of the world, and, apparently, hoping for a better tomorrow.

A lone-wolf plane flies low over the water. The plane has been sent over to photograph certain areas, and to drop a few bombs if possible. He passes over trim fields and cozy cottages. There is only one dilapidated shack to be seen. He cannot help wondering why it should be there. The shack is widely used in times of war, and it is necessary.

The liquor people use camouflage too. They take liquor, one of the most destructive things in human life, and by clever advertising, attractive bottles and packages, and clever camouflage they try to convince people that there is no harm in drinking, and that the things said against the liquor business are exaggerated and untrue. Here are some of the things they say:

Science condemns alcohol as a beverage. Crime records show that the use of liquor leads to crime and loathsome social diseases. Accident records show that even a few drops of liquor makes accidents much more likely.

Divorce records reveal that liquor has been an outstanding cause of divorce. Our own knowledge of many people of what they are and do, tells us that there is harm and danger in liquor for all who use it as a beverage.

Yet against the evidence of science, common sense, and liquor advertisers try to make people believe that the drink-habit is not drinking, and that the things said against it are exaggerated and untrue. Let us look at three typical "ads."

1. Here is a pitcher of water and a bucket. Sure, those are innocent things, then? "Water tells the truth!" Two-thirds of the paragraph is about water. Let us see what the other one-third says. "Clear, sparkling water," to use their own words, is "good enough for a drink." Let us see what the other one-third says. "Clear, sparkling water," to use their own words, is "good enough for a drink." Let us see what the other one-third says.

2. Here is the second "ad." It's all about a flagpole that went around a continent. Imagine a company spending several thousand dollars to tell the world that nice, innocent, little story! Oh, but they've backed so an "ad" on water. Let us see what the other one-third says. "Clear, sparkling water," to use their own words, is "good enough for a drink." Let us see what the other one-third says.

3. Now let us look at number three. What is it talking about? Again it's all about a flagpole that went around a continent. But what is this? Listen: "In this brave new world of tomorrow there'll be the good things of today." What good things?—schools, churches, colleges, Christian homes, books? Oh, no! A certain brand of ale, you please. Could anything be more ridiculous? What fools these liquor people must think we are! As though we were fighting this fearful war in order that people may one day be able to tell the world that nice, innocent, little story!

Who are we to believe? The liquor sellers or some of the great statesmen and thinkers of the past and present? Consider the following statements:

1. William Ewart Gladstone, a great British Prime Minister, said: "The ravages of drink are great, and it is a pestilence, and famine combined."

2. Abraham Lincoln said: "Liquor might have defenders but it has no defence."

3. Cardinal Gibbons, a great Roman Catholic leader, wrote: "The great curse of the human race is intemperance. It has brought more demoralization, more crime, more strikes, or war, or sickness, or death. It has caused little children to grow up among evil associations. It has broken up

Stocks Are Fresh To Increase Resistance to Winter Ills We'll Be Pleased to Help You Choose. Stocks Are Complete

In a 1942 debate in the Canadian House of Commons many prominent members of parliament condemned the liquor business:

4. Hon. Mr. Beaulieu said: "There is no argument in favour of alcoholic beverages."

5. Rt. Hon. Mr. King: "We are eager... to reduce the evils of the liquor trade."

6. Hon. Mr. Hansen: "Everybody knows it is an evil thing."

7. Hon. Mr. Itley: "The people are quite justified in being concerned."

Shall we believe the advertisements of the liquor concerns, or shall we accept the words of thoughtful leaders?

QUESTIONS 1. (a) Why do liquor manufacturers advertise their products? (Value 5 marks) (b) Why do they have to camouflage the thing they have to sell? (Value 5 marks) 2. (a) Which groups of people will be made the government has stopped liquor advertising? (Value 5 marks) (b) Which groups will be angry about it? (Value 5 marks)

Scene One: October 3rd (Junior) TELEVISION PLAY (By MARION BRILLINGER) INTRODUCTORY NOTE

It is suggested that the players read the dialogue from behind a screen, while a lighted silhouette picture, made from cardboard figure and mounted on a shadow screen, as the play opens, to illustrate each scene.

Mr. Thompson: Well, here we are. We'll go in this door. Mr. Thompson: One of these engines has more than eight thousand and complex parts. It is built with the exactness of a watch. If you went to the plant where they are made, you would see girls winding coils with wire so fine that it would take 800 strands to make an inch!

Mr. Thompson: You're right! In aircraft work we can't afford to have any chances. Some of our workers here are using electric drills and high-powered tools that take the most expert handling possible. A slight slip may prove very costly indeed. We have one type of machine that can make a pressure of nine million pounds. Imagine that much power in the hands of a careless worker. We have found from experience that alcohol does make a worker careless. Suppose we go now to the department where the fuselages are made.

Mr. Thompson: They are welding parts together, not an easy job either! You can imagine what would happen if a workman under the influence of alcohol tried to handle that! Now come with me, and we'll watch the plane bodies grow as they pass down the assembly line. Each of these crews of men is doing a different piece of work. Each one is adding certain parts. It's like working on a team. If any one of the workers falls, the whole process suffers, and production is slowed down.

Mr. Thompson: They reach the final assembly floor where the engines, wings, and tail surfaces have been added to the fuselages. Now they are standing. Viewing the completed planes.

Mr. Thompson: Excuse a plane having so many little parts!

Mr. Thompson: It does seem very wonderful, doesn't it?

Mr. Thompson: I wonder if it has as many parts as the human body. Our teacher says that there are millions of cells of different kinds in every one of us.

Mr. Thompson: Aeroplanes, and the human body are alike in the way. Both have more parts than we could number. Perhaps the body can do something no aeroplane can do. It can build new parts or cells, and repair old ones—providing of course, that it has the needed materials.

Mr. Thompson: Did you know that there is a thief that steals oxygen out of the body cells, if it gets a chance?

Mr. Thompson: Scientists have discovered that alcohol, even in small amounts—steals oxygen from the cells, and it does more than that. It steals water, too. If you want to prove this, drop a lump of sugar or some bread into some alcohol.

Mr. Thompson: The bread or the sugar will become quite hard because the alcohol has stolen the water. Perhaps the most serious thing that alcohol does, however, is to injure the protoplasm—the living matter of which the cells are made.

Mr. Thompson: And if the cells are made. And if the cells are injured, the whole body suffers.

Mr. Thompson: Like the assembly room, one workman falls on his job. Bob: I didn't know that alcohol did all these things! It steals oxygen, and water. It injures the living matter in the cells. And it makes workers less expert and careful. I think the last fact is the worst one, because if a workman is careless when it gets up in the air, and people might lose their lives!

Mr. Thompson: Yes, Mr. Thompson. I guess you are right about that rule against drinking alcohol and aircraft building don't mix!

QUESTIONS 1. What three things does the body need to build and repair cells, and how does alcohol affect the cells? (Value 10 marks) 2. Why is it especially important that aircraft workers should avoid drinking alcohol? (Value 10 marks)

NOTICE TO ALL WRITING EXAMINATIONS Hand in answers to Sunday School Superintendent. Give full name and address on each page of answers. Write on one side of paper only. Directions for Making the Shadow Screen Nail together four lengths of wood to make a frame 3 feet by 2 feet. Stretch a piece of white cotton over the opening and tack to frame. This can be set on a table or on legs.

Directions for Making Figures Outline patterns are available for making figures about 8 inches high like those illustrated. These may be traced around on cardboard, cut out, and fastened to the shadow screen with transparent tape or pins.

Directions for Lighting Light placed behind the screen will create the silhouette picture. If electricity is available, use a 100-watt bulb or stronger. Tie this to a cord nailed to the screen, so that it is close to the top, directly in the centre, and about 12 inches away from the screen. Light from the Coleman or other lamp will serve, or the screen may be placed directly in front of the window. The brighter the light, the more brilliant the effect.

Patterns will be sent out free on request to leaders. Write to Miss A. E. Giles, Glone House, Athens, Ont.

SCENE ONE Announcer: Bob Dunlop is taken by his father to visit an aircraft factory. The personal director, Mr. Thompson, has made special arrangements to take them through the plant. As the play opens we find Bob and his father in the waiting room.

Father: Bob, do come and sit down. You have been pacing around like a soldier on sentry-go.

Bob: Oh, hello Mr. Thompson. Mr. Thompson: How do you do, Mr. Thompson? How are you, Mr. Dunlop? Sorry to have kept you waiting so long. I have just had the unpleasant task of discharging a workman.

Father: What had he been doing?

Mr. Thompson: Well you see, it is a rule of our company that any employee who reports for work with the smell of liquor on his breath shall be immediately discharged. I hated to see him go. He is really a fine fellow, and a clever workman, too, when he is at his best.

Father: Don't you think you are overdoing it, having such a strict rule?

Mr. Thompson: It is a strict rule all right, but you can judge for yourself whether it is too severe. Experience has shown that the National Film Board issue, "The Labour Front" released in the World In Action series, records the role of manpower in the war against fascism.

Guarded from the blinding light and the flying sparks, these welders do their vital work on the production front. Paying tribute to the people's contribution towards the achievement of final victory, the current National Film Board issue, "The Labour Front" released in the World In
