WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Howard Winslow Road on Wednesday, March 19th, the occasion being the opening of the Missionary Mite Boxes. The committee had provided a good programme of speeches, quartets, solos and readings, sufficiently comprehensive to meet the artistic intellectual and moral needs of all present. Following the programme was an excellent supper to which about fifty set down, and from all appearances, evidently enjoyed. The conjurer with his quick, pass and begone trick could have gained many a good lesson had he been there to see how those "jolly fellows" made the delicacies disappear. After supper, games were the order of the evening; and then Mrs. Sellars gave the report telling of the work accomplished during the year. The Society this year had raised between forty and fifty dollars, which was an excellent showing. Before separating a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Howard for their kind hospitality. In reply Mr. Howard in a few chosen sentences, expressed the pleasure it afforded them in being able to contribute in any small way "there bit" toward the great "Forces" working for Righteousness. The evening's enjoyment was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

JOHNSON & JOHNSON The Quality Druggers Corner Kent and Prince Streets

"Through all his life and through all his letters, dogs and children followed him as shadows follow man. To walk in the street with him was a slow process. Every dog and every child he met must be spoken to and each made answer." This is from Sir Andrew Macphail's biography of the life of Col. John McCrae in "In Flanders Fields," just published by William Briggs and probably evidence very strongly wherein the secret of the man's strength lay—his humanism and his life of love and service. It was from these things that John McCrae gained the strength of mind and character which enabled him to write such things as "Flanders Fields," "The Anxious Dead," "The Warrior," and any one of half a dozen others from the collection just given to the public.

Half of the book is given over to what Sir Andrew Macphail calls "An Essay in Character," from which the above lines are taken. It tells the story of John McCrae's life from his wanderings and service with the Force in South Africa in 1900 to characteristic bits covering the experiences in Flanders which were productive of the poem whose stanzas and whose spirit has run through the English-speaking world. Perhaps a man who has gone better judged by strangers by his critics than in any other way, and an opportunity for judging Col. McCrae is given in a dozen or more missives to various friends and relatives reproduced in the book, some of these from South Africa, but the greater part from the midst of the fighting in France in April and May, 1915. Specially characteristic among these are several written in the name of his horse "Bonfire" to intimate friends at home, each telling the heart of the man. Another feature of interest is a reproduction of a most intimate photograph of the great poet, a copy of a sketch made by Dr. McCrae of one of the military positions over yonder, and a reproduction of a most intimate photograph of the late Colonel and his dog "Bonneau," taken among the ruins of some Flemish town.

Canadians have read and revelled in the great title poem, and they will appreciate this remarkable memento of a really great Canadian who has produced something, idealistic though it may have been, which has made the world greater and better. The book is now on the market at $1.50 per copy.

THE ANXIOUS DEAD

(From "In Flanders Fields," a collection of the late Col. John McCrae's verse.)

O gun, fall silent till the dead men hear Above their heads the legions pressing on! (These fought their fight in time of bitter fear. And died not knowing how the day had gone.) O flashing muzzles, pause and let them see The coming dawn that streaks the sky afar! Then let your mighty chorus witness be To them, and Caesar, that we still make war.

Tell them, O guns, that we have heard their call; That we have sworn and will not turn aside; That we will onward till we win or fall; That we will keep the faith for which they died.

Bid them be patient, and some day, anon, They shall feel earth enwrapped in silence deep— Shall greet in wonderment the quiet dawn. And in content may turn them to their sleep.

A Cause for Grievance

The late Nat Goodwin's many marriages became a joke even in the much-married theatrical profession. At the Lambs' Club, Willie Collier one day asked Goodwin anxiously: "Have I offended you, Nat?" "Why, no," replied the astonished Goodwin. "What do you mean?" "Well," responded Collier, with an injured air, "you never invite me to any of your weddings."—San Francisco Bulletin.

Window Placards Have a Small "Circulation"

Is the man who OUGHT to buy your property hard to find? Have you about concluded that he has placard-blindness? Or perhaps it occurred to you that a window placard has, after all, rather a LIMITED CIRCULATION, and is therefore, a poor thing to rely upon IF YOU REALLY WANT TO SELL! Buyers, you see, have a theory that real estate that is of any importance, or that is DESIRABLE, is SURE to be advertised in the newspaper when the owner wants to sell it.
