Smith Ballew in "Panamint's Bad Man" At The Capitol With Serial

The horse-opera came into its own yesterday when Smith Ballew, the straight-shootin' sweet-singin' man of the range galloped onto the Capitol Theatre screen in "Panamint's Bad Man".

Unusual in many respects, not the least being that the story is credible, the roles well-played and the whole melange well-entertaining. This new cactus-opus dispenses with the threadbare pay-the-mortgage-and-save-the-girl plot and introduces a technique that is a welcome change in favor of thrilling open-air excitement.

Clever Deputy

Ballew, whose singing voice gets better with each film, plays a clever deputy—and the range has needed one like him ever since the first runder rustled. The cowboy's first step is to impersonate a jailed desperado in an attempt to win the confidence of the gang preying on the Wells Fargo silver shipments.

Then he puts through an innovation that must have a hundred long-departed Wells Fargo managers and Western vigilantes revolting in their graves—he has the 25-lb. silver bars that are ordinarily shipped by coach melted into 20-lb. ingots. Next time the coach is held up, the robbers can't carry the loot!

Bang-Up Finish

The bang-up finish will delight any action fan, as the bandits are caught red-handed and Ballew wins the girl. She is Evelyn Daw, a film newcomer with a pleasant voice, and she and Ballew sing several duet novelties in the film.

Noah Berry, Sr. and Stanley Fields make a pair of intriguing villains.

Loretta Young in "Four Men and A Prayer" At Prince Edward

The startling story of "Four Men and a Prayer," filmed in all its spectacular sweep held the audience of the Prince Edward Theatre breathless at its great climax yesterday.

Its impressive dramatic power kept engrossed viewers spellbound down to the final fadeout, and the scenes speak volumes without a word... menace stalks across the screen in a weird silence that rumbles in the heart, unheard by ear—it's a new eerie effect, done by a marvelously assembled cast, directed by Academy Award winner John Ford.

The theme is an inspiring departure from the usual saccharine movie affection. Four stalwart young men, with a grand old soldier-father, are bound by a gallant pledge to rove the world to avenge his dishonor and death.

That great love pervades the entire story. Yet the shimmering beauty of Loretta Young and her love for one of the brothers, Richard Greene (a sensational new star discovery, by the way) is a joy to behold.

Miss Young gives a flawless performance as the American girl who covers her intense loyalty to the brothers cause with an "American" filopany which amazes her British sweetheart most of all, but more than anything puts spirit and vigor into the grim quest.

There are superb characterizations in the great cast. Special mention should go to George Sanders, David Niven, William Henry (the other three brothers), C. Aubrey Smith (the father), J. Edward Brubaker, John Carradine, Alan Hale, Reginald Denny, Berton Churchill and Barry Fitzgerald.

Kinsmen Club Elect Slate At Annual Meeting

Mr. Stewart G. Ives was elected president of the Charlottetown Kinsmen Club at an enthusiastic meeting in the Canadian National Hotel last night. Other officers elected included: vice-president G. M. Rice; secretary E. S. Lord; assistant secretary A. P. Doucette; treasurer F. W. Boyles; directors: Dr. L. I. Duffy and G. B. Foster; editor of the "Kinsman" J. C. A. Gordon.

Highlight of the evening was an address by Miss Edith Hill, a graduate of Emerson College, who gave a most pleasing and instructive talk on the art of speaking. Miss Hill's remarks were much enjoyed by the Kinsmen and their thanks were heartily expressed by retiring president George Ayers.

Arrangements for a telephone bridge to be held Thursday, December 8, were about completed. Funds raised would be used for Club work. It was explained.

Entertainment at the meeting included a most enjoyable solo by Kinsman F. W. Boyles.

THE HAMILTON PICNIC HELD ABOUT FIFTY YEARS AGO

The sunbeams danced upon the That laves the Hamiltonian shore; When happy maids and laddies brave, Did hold a picnic there once more.

Three swiftly sailing boats did glide, Athwart the bright and sparkling tide And carried hearts as light and free, As snow-white foam upon the sea.

The foliage of the greenwood trees, Was shaken by the lively breeze That quickly sent the craft a-crag While murmuring breakers sang their songs.

Beneath the shady maples there, The cloths were spread out by the hand of a young girl so fair, And many a dainty dish displayed, Within the charming greenwood glade.

The Boston boy! the Boston boy! He fills the lassies hearts with joy, He teaches them the Boston stride, See how they gather at his side.

The lovely blonde with airy grace, Flits like a fairy o'er the place, Not strange that age grows young again, And youthful dreams beset him when Such grace and beauty deign to be Beside him speeding on the sea, Crack goes the whip—a fearful thud, The buggy scarce does touch the ground.

Just watch the sports athletic now Here comes the youth with persuasive brow; He mounts in air and floats away, Like cloud upon a summer's day.

Such jumping 'er was seen afore, Down by the classic Beach Point shore; That land that stretches rich and wide, Whose heir desires a fair young bride.

Now see our Charlie Nelson kick! And Harvey too can do it slick, The memory of such deeds will last When now fades far into the past.

That night I saw the pale moon shine, On landscape and on ocean's brine, How she like locked, and said to say, Her larger half was kicked away.

The crafty farmer too was there, Who cast a sly glance at the fair; But friendly Prudence held him back, And kept him in the single track.

Dear friends, I now will end my song, It has already been too long, And I hope that I may be At the next picnic by the sea.

Water flowed over Morell Bridge he said.

ROTARY AUCTION—Snow squalls and falling temperatures last night, in the wake of the afternoon's blizzard, did not dampen the ardor of bidders at Rotary's sixth auction. Approximately 500 listed articles with many special groups of goods in the six hour's spirited bidding between 6 p.m. and midnight. A large staff of headwaiters handled bids in the prompt manner which has marked the auctions in the past. Proceeds of the sale could not be immediately determined. It was learned, as weary workers chafed up the last bid and prepared to close down for the night. The auction believed to have been most successful, however.

Japanese Bomb South China City

(By HALDRE HANSON Associated Press Foreign Staff)

KEWILIN, Kwangsi Province, China, Nov. 30—(Delayed)—(AP)—Some 20 Japanese aircraft today blasted this South China city with incendiary and other bombs in a raid that left 72 dead and more than 200 wounded.

Destructive fires were caused in the Governor's mansion, the principal shopping street and a dozen residential districts.

Loss of life probably would have been much greater had not the 150,000 inhabitants been warned by air raid sirens nearly an hour before the raiders appeared over the city.

From a perch on a rocky hillside overlooking the city this correspondent watched the Japanese planes methodically bomb Kewilin from only 3,000 feet up in spite of heavy anti-aircraft fire. A few Chinese planes flew off without trying to give battle.
