Control of Late Blight of Potatoes

(Experimental Farms Note)

Late blight is a fungus disease which attacks all parts of the potato plant. It is undoubtedly the most destructive potato malady found in our region, and even in average years, causes losses sufficiently large to justify a considerable investment for its control.

It usually makes its appearance during the last week in July. The first infections are often located on the lower leaves of plants growing in the wet places in the field. Infected leaves show brown, dead spots surrounded by a narrow band of light green tissue. If these blight spots are examined while the leaves are still moist a fine grayish white bloom of fungus strands will be noted on their under surface.

On the tubers the disease first shows externally as small, light brown spots surrounding the breathing pores. As these spots enlarge the tubers become sunken, and purplish black in colour. Internally, the infected spots show areas of light brown, rotted tissue. If conditions are favourable the rot will spread throughout the tubers. Usually other organisms gain entrance to the tubers and assist in completing the work of destruction.

Investigations conducted by the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Fredericton, N. B. have shown that late blight may be satisfactorily controlled by a combination of cultural and spraying practices.

Cultural experiments have shown that the rows should be sufficiently hilled to fully accommodate the expansion of the developing tubers. If this is not done, many tubers will be exposed and thereby will be more liable to become infected.

The most effective and economical spray mixture to use is a Bordeaux of the 4-4-40 formula. The spray should be first applied when the plants are about six inches high, and applications should be continued at weekly or 10-day intervals until a total of seven sprays have been applied. At least 100 gallons of the Bordeaux mixture, under a pressure of at least 250 pounds should be applied per acre, at each application. Care should be taken to set the spray nozzles at a distance from the potato plants that would allow for the most efficient coverage. In reverse the direction for every alternate spray application.

Finally, when the crop is mature the vines should be killed off by spraying them with a copper sulphate solution, made up at the rate of 15 pounds of copper sulphate to 40 gallons of water. Two applications of this solution may be necessary to completely kill the vines. Digging should be delayed for at least 10 days after the tops are mature to allow for the maturation of the potato skins and to reduce the possibility of infection from spores lying on the ground.

Canadian Mining Country Shows Growth

Representatives of the Special Issues Division, of Johnston and Ward, Montreal financial house, have returned from a visit to the mining districts of Quebec and Ontario, where they made a special study of the current stages of mining. They have expressed themselves as thoroughly impressed and enthusiastic as a result of their observations.

Points visited by motor included Temagami, Cobalt, Kirkland Lake; the Larder Lake area, where Kerr-Addison is proving up a large ore body; Francoeur; Arntfield; and Aldermac. After a lunch at Halliwell Gold Mines Limited, the party proceeded to Rouyn, with a special visit to Beattie Gold Mines, where impressive work is in progress, and to Dumico Gold Corporation, where a pipe line to Lake Duparquet, 2 1/2 miles away, has just been installed, to bring in the water necessary for the mill. They inspected the shaft sinking begun here, and the diamond drilling now in progress, proving the extension of the presently indicated ore body.

From Rouyn, the Johnston and Ward group flew to Val d'Or, passing over Stadacona, McWatters, the Caddilla's and Malartic's, to spend some hours in both Bourlamaque and Val d'Or, visiting Lamaque, Sullivan, Siscoe and Shawkey, returning by the same route.

On reaching Montreal, the party stated that they were satisfied with all they had seen, and issued a general recommendation to Canadians to make a similar trip through the mining country if they would understand the importance of the mining industry in these two Canadian Provinces.

ENJOYS WELCOME PRETENDS ANGER CALGARY, July 22—(CP)—Well-feigned anger almost turned the tables on cowboys, here for the stampee, who "roped" and painted George Lyon, editor of the Buffalo, N. Y. Times and hauled him in a buggy beside an Indian woman and her papoose to his hotel.

He had the funsters worried for a time when with solemn face and bristling with "mock" anger, he complained to newspapermen: "It was disgraceful. All the way to Calgary I had been preparing a little speech for when the mayor and councillors came to greet me at the station. And what happened?"

"No sooner had I stepped onto the platform than—whizz—like a lasso had settled about my shoulders, my face painted all colors of the rainbow, and I was marched out of the station like a common horse thief.

"My little daughter was horrified. 'Where are they taking my daddy,' she cried."

He continued along this line for a time and then smilingly congratulated Calgary for successfully reverting to cowtown days. "The reception I got this morning tells me you have not been entirely corrupted by civilization. You do not stand on ceremony for anybody. That's the spirit I like."
