LIVER NOW A LUXURY IN DIET

LONDON, May 10—(C.P.)—So high has the cost of liver risen within the last few years that it has disappeared as an article of diet in many homes. English calves liver, which could be bought for 36 cents per pound five years ago, is now being retailed by an Oxford street store at 72 cents.

"Sometimes it has stood as high as $2.40 per pound," the chief buyer stated. "The reason for the advance in price is that so much liver is being bought for the treatment of pernicious anemia. Manufacturers of medical preparations are prepared to pay good prices for it."

LONDON, May 10—(C.P.)—Here is a story which made the Queen laugh. It was told to her by the Duke of Atholl when Her Majesty visited an exhibition of Scottish military statuettes at the galleries of the Royal Society of British artists.

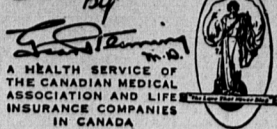

"In Victorian days the men of the 71st regiment wore long canvas coverings over their legs. Underneath were trousers of brilliant hue. Wimbledon was then a favorite place for military reviews, and there the regiment paraded one day in full dress uniform. The spectators were largely young Victorian ladies, complete with bustles and parasols.

"The soldiers came to a halt. Then a frouse command rang out: 'Remove trousers!' Instantly every parasol was raised on high, and every Victoria back was turned, as the soldiers removed their harmless canvas coverings."

HEALTH

MUSCULAR ACTIVITY

Life begins in one minute cell. This cell grows and multiplies until we have the millions of cells which make up each human body. In the process of growth and development, these cells become differentiated one from the other, depending upon what functions they assume.

In the body we have nerve cells, muscle cells, connective tissue cells—to name but a few. These cells make up the various tissues and organs of the body. They all have a common origin in one cell, and throughout life they remain interdependent. The only way to have health is to have a body which is strong and well in all its parts. Disease or abnormal states in any one part affect the whole body.

"Healthy," "strong" and "energetic" are adjectives which we use to describe the person who has the ability and power to do things. Such a person has started life with good tissue cells and has, by proper living, developed strength and energy—he has health.

There are certain organs of the body, such as the heart, which are known as vital organs. Life cannot continue if they cease to function. In that sense only, they are more important than other parts, and they are, in fact, dependent upon other non-vital organs.

It is necessary for the human being to be able to move around in order to secure food, and when food has been obtained, it must be carried into the mouth. The vital organs are thus dependent upon the large muscles which make movement possible to supply them with food, without which they, together with the whole body, would perish.

There is another definite relationship between the vital organs and the large muscles. Run or walk quickly, and you will find the rate of the heart has increased and that breathing is quickened. In other words, there is a close linking-up between muscular activity if we are to keep the vital organs functioning at their best. Children need play. They need to use their large muscles. Youth requires physical activity. The adult needs such physical activities as are suited to his age. The human body goes to pieces when it is not used. Disuse means atrophy. Proper use is the only way to keep the body functioning at its best for the greatest number of years.

The journals of the fur trade post of the Hudson's Bay company in Canada," said Douglas MacKay, speaking to the Kinsmen's Club of this city.

"Under the terms of the original Royal Charter, London as the head office of the Hudson's Bay Company, remains the repository for all the company's archives and outposts a few years ago resulted in an accumulation of nearly six tons of documents," Mr. MacKay declared. The work of organizing and cataloguing this material has been proceeding under the direction of the company's archivist in London.

At the present time, this vast quantity of historical documents, which is in reality the richest source material of western and northern Canadian history, is in better shape for the use of accredited historians than ever before. Mr. MacKay gave as the reasons for the company's reluctance in the past to throw open its archives to anyone seeking information, the fact that it would be unfair to history and to the company to permit a general releasing of only parts of the historical matter without relation to the whole.

THAT DEPRESSED FEELING IS LARGELY LIVER

Wake Up Your Liver Bile . . . Without Calomel, And Feel Like a Million Dollars.

Nothing can put your system out of kilter more quickly than your liver. All it has to do is stop pouring its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels—and life certainly gets gray. That sluggish flow of bile slows up digestion and elimination and makes you "feel punk". Your stomach acts up—gas, bloating, sourness, pain. Your breath is bad and the taste in your mouth is nasty. Your head aches. Skin is blotchy. All, of course, because your system is full of poisons.

Mere bowel movers like salts, oil, mineral water, roughage, laxative candy or chewing gum are not good enough to correct this condition entirely. You're livery and you must wake up your liver bile to be happy again.

Avoid calomel (mercury). The thing for you is a box of Carter's Little Liver Pills. They save upset you because they're purely vegetable, gentle and safe; but how they do change your view on life!

Don't waste your money on substitutes. Be definite. Ask for Carter's by name—and get them! Look for the name, Carter's, on the red label. 25c. at all druggists.

Critic Visions

Dominion Light Opera Festival

WOULD TAP NEW SOURCES OF ENTHUSIASM, SAYS MAJOR H. G. CHRISTIE.

SAINT JOHN, N. B., May 10—(C.P.)—A Dominion Light Opera Festival paralleling the Dominion Drama Festival, "tapping new sources of enthusiasm and possibly securing for Canada the honor of introducing and taking the lead in a new branch of art," is envisioned by Major H. G. Christie, Saint John playwright and critic. Suggesting concentration on the present rare type of one-act musical play and efforts to overcome amateur difficulties, Major Christie remarked that such action might lead to a Little Opera movement analogous to the Little Theatre movement.

"Amateurs have not shown in musical comedy and light opera," said the playwright during an interview. "They have to face more difficulties to measure up with professional productions than present themselves to the amateur followers of the legitimate stage. But it is not to be admitted that these are insuperable obstacles if amateurs would give up attempting the impossible. They cannot hope satisfactorily to present the type of musico-dramatic performance that depends for fifty per cent or more of its appeal on costly and elaborate scenery, costumes and effects. Such productions are palpably beyond imitation by amateurs and any attempt to economize merely ruins them."

"A frank and friendly examination of amateur work in musical plays forces the admission that few of the voices are able to stay the course. Further, the chorus work is frankly dreadful when a chorus of adequate size is put on the stage, and when quality has been sought, numerical support of the spectacle does not suffice. Moreover the discipline of a professional chorus is not to be attained under amateur conditions. Then there are dancers, an integral part of musical comedy, not to be expected in amateur ranks."

"Much of the above applies equally to the better class of light opera which imposes a still greater demand on the leading singers. Some of Gilbert and Sullivan's comic operas may be attempted with fair success by the best amateurs, but this list is limited and they lose much unless directed in the Savoyard tradition down to the last detail; they have become almost a cult."

"All this sounds like despair. Yet amateur musical dramatic work should be fostered if only because there is a desire for it and it gives the performers plenty of enjoyment. The question is: can the difficulties be overcome, and how? It is plain that the ordinary musical plays of the professional stage with their elaborate scenery, costumes, effects and extensive singing parts are generally unsuitable. It may also be observed that the music is usually scored for orchestras beyond the reach of amateurs. What is needed is musical comedy and light opera originally conceived by librettist and composer with amateur limitations in mind. It ought to be well to go even further and concentrate on the at present rare type of one-act musical play."

"This idea of one-act light opera and musical comedy for amateurs opens up attractive possibilities. Every device of simplification of scenery and costume might be introduced with light freely used for effects. The cast could be kept small, particularly in reference to the chorus. The orchestra might be reduced to a minimum; indeed it would be an interesting experiment to see what might be done with piano accompaniment alone. That has of course been done with Gilbert and Sullivan and other scores, but the less said of results the better; they, however, were not designed for such treatment. There is absolutely no reason why the thing should not be done. There would not be much money in it for composers and librettists, but there will certainly be some who are willing to assist for very small rewards."

"The thing is to get a start by inducing the amateurs to recognize their limitations and to admit that in attempting the professional musical plays they are foredoomed to fail, thereby discrediting themselves and their art. Then they must seek to find for themselves a medium of musico-dramatic expression that is within their scope and, having found it, to build into it characteristics all its own. Perhaps an encouragement of free spontaneity, the very thing the professional producer drills out of his cast, might serve as a start in originality," concluded Major Christie.

SUNDAY May 14th

FOR Mother's DAY

Just one day—set apart for the Mother whose heart is true to you—not for just a day, but always. It's not enough—one day out of 365—nevertheless, it gives you an opportunity of pleasing her by remembering her on her day.

Your Remembrance may be only a brief message—preferably an appropriate Gift—but whatever you do—give—let it be "heart-sent."

Here are a few things that Mother has perhaps longed for—worthy reminders of your thoughtfulness and affection for years to come—

SUMMERSIDE HOLMAN'S CHARLOTTETOWN

WELSH REGIMENT HAS LOST MASCOT

LONDON, May 10—The first battalion of the Welsh Regiment has lost its mascot, Taffy the Fifth, the regimental goat, presented by the King in 1920, is dead. Taffy came from the royal goat herd, and like his predecessors, invariably walked at the head of the regiment richly caparisoned on ceremonial occasions.

Taffy was one guilty of mutiny. It happened at a church parade. The regiment was drawn up on the Salamanca Parade ground at Aldershot ready for its ceremonial march to the Garrison Church.

Orders were shouted, the band burst into music, and the regiment stepped out—but Taffy quietly lay down and refused to move.

All the efforts of his soldier escort failed to move him, and the regiment went off to church without him. He was placed under arrest and confined to barracks. The cause of his bad conduct was his devotion to his personal commanding officer, Goat-Major Ferns. At "reville" Taffy had discovered that his goat-major was away, and Taffy firmly refused to obey anybody else.

M'BE IT'S THE BRAND MONCTON, N. B., March 10—

And now we have a white moose to keep company with the white deer and white coyotes. An albino bull moose was seen near Little River, N. B. recently. He had a big circular black spot on one side and was accompanied by a cow moose. One explanation of the apparent incongruity which is being advanced is that moose have been known to graze with cattle and there is a possibility of this albino moose being the result of mixed mating.

RELIEF AGITATOR HAD $4,500 IN BANK

CHICAGO, May 8—When the police arrested John Martinshak

today for picketing a relief station with demands for "$5 per week cash relief" they found $1,080 cash and Denver bank books with a balance of $3,500 in his pockets.

Marching up and down in front of the relief depot, Martinshak carried a hand made sign emblazoned: "Down with the 25 cents forced labor. We demand work at Union wages. Down with flophouses. We demand $5 per week cash relief."
